Gladioli increase in popular favor yearly, particularly since the introduction of G. primulinus and the raising of numerous beautiful hybrids from this variety. The primulinus hybrids may be less popular than the larger, more densely flowered and stiff-looking gandavensis hybrids with some of those who ship flowers long distances and who want flowers which will stand up under handling, but when it comes to artistic arrangements the primulinus section stands head and shoulders over all others.

As growers of these gladioli well know, the primulinus varieties produce great numbers of bulblets, and too often these are wasted. If carefully saved at digging time, packed in sand or loam over winter and stored in a frost-proof but cool cellar, and sown in drills two inches deep like common garden peas as soon as possible after winter has passed, a large proportion of these will flower the same season and practically all will have so improved in size that they will flower the following season.

Wide Color Range.

The primulinus section produces seed easily and abundantly. There is a fine field open for the hybridist, but even without hybridizing, a splendid range of colors may be had where several varieties are grown. I have sown seed under glass in January, potted seedlings off singly, gradually hardened them off and planted them out in rich soil early in May. Many of these primulinus seedlings have flowered the same season. Seed sown in drills about the end of April will produce little bulbs and the greater number will flower the following year. There will be a wide range of color. Many will no doubt be yellow, occasional ones white, scarlet or crimson, while a great many are likely to be of the lovely buff, orange, apricot and similar shades, similar to such sorts as Salmon Beauty, Angola, Altair, Alice Tiplady and Priscilla. Some of these home-raised seedlings are sure to be worth marking and sowing; others may not be of sufficient merit to keep, but there are few poor colors in the primulinus family as yet, and all are well adapted for cutting and infinitely more pleasing when arranged in vases, bowls, baskets or hampers than the stiffer and heavier gandavensis types.

As gladiolus bulbs will persist over winter unless we have severe frost, it is well to give them a new location each season when planting in nursery rows and propagating from seeds or bulblets, to avoid roguing. Personally, I disapprove of the tendency to increase the size of flowers in the primulinus family by crossing them on the larger and more open-flowered types. Their flowers already are of ample size and hybridists should remember that much of the beauty of this type lies in the hooded flowers and in the fact that the flowers are produced loosely on the stems and are not crowded, as in the case of other hybrids.

GERMANY AFTER THE WAR

FLORICULTURE IN GERMANY.

By ROBERT BLOSSFELD, of Potsdam, Germany.

The florists' industry of Germany, a rapid-growing and increasingly important part of that nation's economic life before the war, was subjected to changes more severe than that of any other country by the great conflict. News of its restoration since the armistice has been meager. This account of the conditions during the war and after in that country so important horticulturally in former years was written especially for The Review by a member of the German trade of wide experience and observation.

War Halted Rapid Progress.

Before the war the florists' trade in Germany was making rapid and great progress. Fruitful stimulation had been drawn from the observations made by German florists when pursuing their profession abroad and in the course of their visits to foreign exhibitions and to famous growers. Another fruitful cause of progress was the extraordinarily well conducted technical schools for gardening, as was also the intense degree of activity developed by an ever-increasing number of investigations on questions pertaining to culture. Fruitful also was the stimulation resultant on the increasing wealth of friends of gardening. A further important aid to progress was lent by the increasing wealth of the country, with the attendant increased buying capacity of the inhabitants.

German growers supplied the whole world with lily of the valley pips. The seed growers of Erfurt and Quedlinburg had a firmly established reputation. German tree nurseries sent their productions to every European country and even as far as Patagonia. The ambition to acquire as much knowledge as possible drove young German florists to England, France, Belgium and Holland.

Limitations.

Judged by American standards, the average German florist's establishment may not have appeared to be on an extensive scale, and the methods may have seemed primitive, but the reason was lack of means, or failure to invest existing means. As a general rule, the German gardeners earned but little, and the movement towards specialization was not yet sufficiently developed.

These conditions were the natural result of the peculiar position of the country. On the west, in Belgium and Holland, special cultures were flourishing, and the whole of Germany's requirements in these lines were met by those countries. The inexhaustible flower fields and gardens of Italy and the south of France supplied enormous quantities of cheap cut flowers and greens all through the winter. Thus it was that for many years the German florists saw their only possible path pointed out to them, as they could not compete with countries so favored by their climate. It was only with the increase of wealth and luxury that a demand for quality began to be felt. This demand called into existence some cut flower growers of the American sort, especially for the forcing of carnations and roses, and these were able to sell their productions at a profitable price with the greatest ease, although the improved traffic communications with Italy and the south of France enabled these countries to offer fresher and better flowers than before and to keep the prices down.

The German vegetable grower had also to struggle against many difficulties and could not venture to compete with the foreign growers, whose cheap prices had crushed him from the beginning. But in spite of these unfavorable conditions, considerable quantities of vegetables were grown for the well developed canning industry, which kept prices down.

Landscape gardening was a perennial source of extensive and profitable orders and during the twenty or thirty years before the war many wonderfully beautiful natural parks were laid out.

Change Wrought by War.

The outbreak of the war brought about a complete change. The sale of flowers and plants decreased, the considerable exports to the allied countries ceased immediately, as did also the imports from France and later from Italy. The entire uncertainty of the conditions prevented the German florist from venturing to adapt himself at once to the altered circumstances, as a return to the former conditions was calculated upon from month to month, later on from year to year. Business stagnation was fairly sudden and general.

A certain amount of export business was still done, but the blockade and the export prohibitions limited these possibilities more and more. In the meantime the effects of the blockade became noticeable in Germany, and the lack of foodstuffs obliged the majority of gardeners to turn to vegetable growing. The vast grounds employed for the cultivation of lily of the valley were nearly all plowed up; the cultivation of flowers was replaced by the cultivation of vegetables; the flower-forcing houses were turned for the most part into vegetable-forcing houses, and many were the lovely lawns in private and public parks which were sacrificed for the sake of potatoes and vegetables. Much agricultural effort was also directed to vegetable growing. The duration of the war was a serious cause of loss to all undertakings, and as more and more men between 17 and 49 years of age were called for military services, it was only possible to keep things running to a certain extent by the help of women and prisoners of war. During this time many irreplaceable losses were suffered through valuable plants being neglected. During the earlier part of the war vegetable growing was brought to a high point, while every other branch of gardening was left to one side. Before long it was impossible to meet the enormous consumption of vegetable seeds, and large quantities were imported from abroad. The high prices induced many gardeners to devote themselves to the production of seeds, not only for their own use, but also for sale. As nobody can see from the exterior of a seed whether it has been properly grown or not, these opportunist seedsmen sold their crops readily and profitably. Often enough ordinary turnip seed was sold as white or red cabbage or cauliflower, and the opportunity was taken of getting rid of old stock by unscrupulously mixing old seed with fresh.

Renewed Demand.

The lack of small articles suitable as presents soon led to a renewed demand for flowers, and many florists again adapted themselves to flower growing. As the small articles for daily use generally so popular as presents became increasingly scarce, this demand for flowers assumed considerable dimensions, and ready sale and good prices were the result. The ever-rising prices of fruit also began to take effect in causing a demand for fruit trees, for every owner of a garden was desirous of growing his own fruit. Even large stocks of fruit trees which had stood too long or had been neglected were now unexpectedly sold off with the greatest ease. Vegetable growing, however, still dominated, for every grower who required coal had to grow vegetables and deliver these up, and it was only in this way that many undertakings were enabled to save the remainder of their valuable plants.

During the war limited quantities of Belgian plants and Dutch bulbs were imported. In Germany tremendous quantities of pot plants have been grown and readily sold within the last few years. Good selling plants are most especially cyclamens, the favorite of the German florist; heather, geraniums, pelargoniums, Primula obconica, Primula chinensis, cinerarias, hydrangeas, azaleas, camellias, the specialty of Dresden; and others generally used for these purposes. The high wages paid the working classes at this time enabled them to spend money on flowers, and this they did to a wide extent, the more so because flowers were the only article suitable as a gift to be obtained at a reasonable price.

After demobilization had taken place, the majority of the florists who returned home naturally devoted themselves to the cultivation of such plants as promised the best profits. The lines preferred were thus vegetable and flower growing, during the first year seed production, and especially the growing of fruit trees. Overproduction of vegetables soon rendered this line unprofitable for outsiders, and seed production speedily shared the same fate, so that large quantities of old seed are still being offered in vain for sale. Flowers, too, soon ceased to find such a ready market as before, especially outside flowers, while others, such as roses, carnations, orchids, lilies of the valley, lilacs and mums, found a ready sale. Fruit trees remained, and remain up to now, one of the few lines finding ready sale at profitable prices; the reason for this is that several years are required for growing.

On Road to Normalcy.

The ultimate result of all these fluctuations has been the return of all special raisers and special growers to their specialties, in spite of the uncertain conditions and the coal shortage, and today we may safely assert that in respect to quality the pre-war standard has been once more attained and, in some cases, surpassed, though this may not always be the case with regard to the quantity. The cause of this is to be found in the limited and altered markets; a number of the allied countries, Russia, Poland, Austria, Hungary and other states do not figure as buyers at present. But where there has been actual demand as stimulant the reports are encouraging. The seedsmen of Erfurt and Quedlinburg and the growers of specialties in valuable flower seeds are again working at their best, both as regards quality and quantity. The activity of the raisers has already resulted in the appearance of novelties of high value, while others are to be brought out shortly. The exports in this line steadily increase. The cheap general trade quality is almost preferred, while the high-bred specialties are rather difficult to sell in foreign markets, although there is but little or no difference in prices. At this time quantities of cyclamen seeds are brought together from all sources and from all growers, with the exception of the leading specialists, whose crops are generally bespoken long before ripened. Certain foreign agents are developing an astonishing activity in buying from all sides seeds which find, for the greater part, no market here, owing to their low quality, and perhaps these seeds will one day or another appear in foreign countries under the head: German strain. This would, of course, do much harm to the German specialists in high-bred strains and last, but not least, to the buyers of such seeds, who will lose time and money in growing their plants from such seeds.

The cultivation of lilies of the valley has regained its earlier standard of perfection, and before long the full prewar production will have been attained again. It is difficult to get the best quality in hands and the production is often contracted for years. During the war, considerable quantities of young germs were bought by foreign growers and planted out in their countries.

Rose growing has also reached a high standard once more. The latest productions of foreign raisers were brought over some time before, as soon as circumstances permitted, and have been diligently propagated where they have been found suitable. German rose growers have also succeeded in raising a good many novelties, many promising much for the future.

Cut Flowers Curtailed.

The German cut flower grower is still in uncertainty as to whether the importation of cut flowers from France and Italy, at present prohibited, will be allowed again, and for this reason cannot decide on taking the step of devoting time and money to setting up extensive forcing establishments, the more so since the coal shortage is still so weighty a factor. Although a great number of foreigners of all nationalities are visiting or living in this country, who are good customers in the flower shops, it must be expected that, owing to the heavy taxes of all kinds and owing to the lowered standard of living, flowers will be a greater luxury than ever before and growers and florists are looking forward to the future with the greatest anxiety. For this reason exceedingly primitive and temporary forcing arrangements are being used, and the preference is naturally given to plants and flowers which grow and flower without demanding any great amount of heat and which therefore can be sold cheaply. However, there is an undoubted shortage of fresh flowers in winter and these are replaced by flowering plants in pots. It may be confidently assumed that this shortage of fresh flowers can be overcome, and that the German florist will be fully able to supply plenty of flowers as soon as he can see his way clearly.

In landscape gardening there is comparatively little doing. The enormous taxes, the depreciation of money, the still incomplete transformation of values, all these points are unfavorable to the landscape gardener. The majority of private gardens have been done away with, decreased in size or neglected, while new ones can only be laid out by people who have become rich without effort during the war. The high costs of maintenance also render the greatest economy imperative.

Important Novelties.

This essay would be incomplete without mention of a few of the most valuable novelties and specialties particularly worthy of arousing interest among American growers:

Rose novelties include Freiburg II, a magnificent, delicately pink rose for cutting in bulk, at least equal to the old Testout; Preussen, fire red, finest fragrance, noble form, a forcing rose of great value, fourteen days earlier than any other rose, stems almost a yard long; Adolf Kaerger, pure sun yellow, for cutting in bulk; Adolf Koschel, orange yellow with reddish tint, excellent under glass; Ruhm von Steinfurth, a red Druschki, particularly beautiful under glass; Eduard Behrens, raised from Richmond and Admiral Ward, color from the latter, form like Gorgeous.

The productions of the German dahlia raisers are exceedingly numerous; their novelties are planted out each year on a common trial ground belonging to the German Dahlia Society and submitted to the judgment of experts when in bloom. It would require too much space to mention even the best by name.

In gladioli some really valuable novelties have been raised by our leading specialist, Mr. Pfitzer; most of them are of superior and permanent value. Among these may be mentioned Frau Dr. Elisabeth Lorenz, Fräulein Anna Wisst, Max Eyth, Karl Foerster, Lohengrin, H. Kanzleitner, Prof. Bauer, Lichtenstein, Trudel Grotz, Veilchenblau (violet blue) and the primulinus hybrid, Orangekönigin (Orange Queen).

In pelargoniums the market is dominated by the productions of the master raiser, Buerger, and by those of Faiss. Such novelties as Hanna Buerger and the other Buerger novelty, Die Vollendete (The Perfect One), represent the best.

Among geraniums the old Meteor and its equivalent pendant, Berolina, still dominate the market. Besides these, Rubin, Rival, Köchlin-Schwarz, Ulmia, Ries and Bornemann's Beste may be mentioned; and the novelties Leuchtkugel (Fire Ball), carmine-scarlet, and Vollendung (Perfection), in the Reformator class, with brilliant salmon pink flowers.

Of Begonia semperflorens the standard sorts are Albert Martin, Prima Donna, Feuerball (Fire Ball), Feuermeer (Fire Sea) and Gruppenkönigin (Queen of the Groups).

In hydrangeas excellent results have here been attained by crossing the well known French sorts with otaksa, etc., and a few novelties, as Westfalenkind, Niedersachsen, Osning, Siegfried and the gigantic Dlabka's Beste, are worthy of being widely known and grown.

There are also numerous novelties among summer flowers, such as asters, zinnias and antirrhinums, and of vegetables. Mums have made little progress within the last few years. Some pleasing novelties of lilac have been put on the market.

Specialties.

The German favorite, cyclamen, has been so improved by careful cultivation and selection in the course of time that the German strains are universally acknowledged as the best. The best results were attained by Dlabka, at Zehlendorf; Stold, at Wandsbek, and Binnewis, at Alfeld.

In stocks the best general quality was raised by Dippe Bros., but the high standard of this strain has been widely surpassed by the Teicher strain. With this family stocks have been the sole specialty since 1836 and they have incontestably been able to reach the highest degree of perfection. Up to ninety per cent of almost all blooms are double-flowered; they show the greatest nobility of form, the best colors and the most gigantic flowers. There is a forcing class which, when sown in accordance with a table, blooms in sets the whole year, a most valuable and indispensable acquisition for the cut flower growers.

In Primula obconica Mr. Arends, of Ronsdorf, incontestably leads the way, his varieties being distinguished by purity of color, large blooms and robust growth.

In wallflowers Mr. Krebs and Figgel have attained a standard until now unrivaled.

There is a new class of carnations in preparation, of which it is said that it is superior to the so-called American carnations, free from diseases and with exceptionally fine, large flowers on long stems.

HOW TO MAKE WREATH.

As Described by S. A. Frost.

The operation of making up a wreath is not one easily described in words. So when S. A. Frost, of Toronto, attempted to describe it in the course of his lecture on "Art in Floral Arrangement," at the convention of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association at Peterboro, he accompanied the words with the deed. He put on paper, however, enough of his talk to give those seeking such information a number of quite important suggestions. And this part of his lecture is given here, together with his introductory definition of his subject, one well worth pondering. Mr. Frost said:

"Art, as I understand it, means a system of rules and established methods to facilitate the performance of certain action; familiarity with such principles, and skill in applying them to an end or purpose, such as making a floral design.

"The first matter of importance when making up a design is that the recipient may not discover some part unfinished that would offset the beauty of the flowers or the excellence of the work. Namely, you don't want your customer to see rusty wire, moss exposed, unsightly toothpicks, a beautiful design with the back uncovered, tin foil showing, etc. The florist or designer should at all times try to protect our profession by attending to the little points of detail that go towards making what we call art in floral arrangement.

"In figuring out the worth of a design we calculate the moss, frame, time and all other accessories necessary in making up the design. In calculating the flowers that are used we figure on the value of what the flowers are made to appear. Experience will teach you almost at a glance what to do for the money allowed. The idea I mean to convey is, if you can make a No. 3 flower look equal to a No. 1, that is the real value of the flower in the design.

Foundation of Wreath.

"I will relate what is my idea of how a wreath should be made, that being the most common of all the designs in use in the trade. The first thing to be done is to moss the wreath, which is the foundation of the design, and, like all other foundations, it must be properly laid. Sphagnum moss is the best known to the trade. Next arrange green wax paper in such a manner as to assist in shaping up the moss, keeping streamers from hanging unsightly in view. The proper system in mossing a wreath is to gather the moss up in your hands, completing the section of frame according to the amount of moss gathered up, and roll it to and fro, working your finger on the inside of the frame and the thumb next to the outer edge till you get it to the proper firmness and shape, taking care that the moss contains the proper moisture. As we all know that the moss is not only to hold the flowers in their place, but is the means of conveying the necessary moisture to the flowers to keep them fresh as long as possible, be sure you insert the stem well into the moss. This is one of the most important points.

Adding the Flowers.

"When the frame is all ready for the flowers, how are we to put them in? First, arrange cedar evergreen, binding the fronds with thread, completely covering the back of the wreath. Now we are ready for the real work. The flowers are prepared in this manner: The longest flowers are stemmed with a wire six inches long; the next length is five inches; the next is four inches and the shortest are on toothpicks. In other words, the best flowers are stemmed up the longest, the next grade shorter and the poorest are worked in underneath.

"The longest flowers are arranged at the same angle as the cedar fronds, the second size used to fill in, then the third length and finally the shortest flowers on toothpicks, the object being to make it appear as if the flowers were coming from a given point and also to convey the impression that two garlands of flowers have been put together coming from the said given point. All designs that we make are on the same principle; that is, every flower but what is used in solid work is made to appear as if it were coming from a certain invisible point. sure to spray your design before you send it out.''

TWO TYPES OF WREATHS.

Wreath, in the florists' vocabulary, is a generic term that covers a wide variety of floral pieces. In one large division fall holiday wreaths, meaning those sold at Christmas time. Then there is another large division, covering those sold at Memorial day. The third, still larger division, covering a wider variety than either of the preceding two, comprises those made all the year around, almost every day in every florists' shop, for funerals.

Of this last division there are two types, one illustrated on page 25, the other on the opposite page following. One, like that on page 25, consists of a background, the wreath proper, of prepared foliage of some sort, magnolia leaves, galax, boxwood, oak leaves or similar material. Most common is the magnolia wreath, which may be purchased and stored till wanted, when a few flowers, a little green and some tulle or ribbon are added, to form a moderately priced funeral piece. Great numbers of such wreaths are used. This one was made by Otto Kastle, whose store is at 6416 South Halsted street, Chicago. This sort is largely used at Memorial day as well.

More pretentious and consequently more expensive is the wreath shown on page 27. This is built on a wire frame filled with moss, as described by S. A. Frost in the preceding article. This particular wreath is an especially elaborate one, in the profuse use of material and in the size of the piece. It was made by the Athletic Club Florist, 433 West Seventh street, Los Angeles.

NO SUCH BASKET.

For the reader who desires information in regard to ''Czecho-Slovak'' baskets, I wish to say, as a native of that region, that there is no such thing as a ''Czecho-Slovak'' basket, since this government did not exist before the time of Woodrow Wilson's presidency. The only baskets used by the people of that region are the ordinary straw baskets, made of willow. J. Hodakly.

COMBINES

The Zetlitz Plan.

Any owner of one large greenhouse range usually feels satisfied and contented if all things growing there are doing fine and the trade in general refers to such a place with pride. Rolf Zetlitz, however, formerly of Lima, O., now located at Dayton, operates seven separate ranges, located in four different towns; two at Lima, one at Ada, one at Columbus and three at Dayton, covering approximately 1,000,000 feet of glass. He is also establishing a chain of retail stores, four being in actual operation now with as many more to follow in the near future. It would be a hard matter for anyone acquainted with the wholesale or retail business to decide which of these places is the best, as they are all prosperous, and one wonders how it is being done.

Roses the Staple.

Roses, for cut flowers, are the company's specialty; 300,000 of the leading varieties are planted for that purpose and the outlook for the coming season could not be better. No expense is spared to obtain results, both in the handling and the growing of the stock and improvements are constantly being made to bring Zetlitz roses to a superior standard. In fact, it is the company's aim to make its roses universally known, as are Lowney's candy and Heinz's pickles. The company has already contracted for 20,000 Angelus and the same number of Red Columbia for next season's planting. The shipping facilities are second to none, for two-thirds of the population of the United States can be reached within twenty-four hours.

Crops are so scientifically arranged that there are always enough roses to go around and big crops for the holidays. The firm has no complaint to make in regard to the dullness of the season; on the contrary, satisfaction is expressed with the constantly increasing business.

Pot Plants.

Cyclamens are another big feature, being grown at Plant B, at Dayton, formerly the place of the Miami Floral Co. There can be seen 50,000 plants of the choicest varieties in the best of condition, ranging in size from 3-inch to 7-inch pot plants. Many thousand were shipped from there this summer, going as far as New Mexico in one direction and Montana in another. Between 300,000 and 500,000 seeds will be planted for next season at Plant B.

A big lath house, 50x200 feet, accommodates the hydrangeas, which are all pot-grown and vary in size from 4-inch to 8-inch pots. A beautiful lot of Christmas cherries, poinsettias, begonias and ferns completes the pot plant assortment for the holidays.

Retailing at Dayton.

Plant A, at Dayton, formerly the W. G. Matthews Co., has been remodeled and put into shape for a high-class retail place. Palms, ferns, chrysanthemums, orchids and show plants are the leading features there. This place has the appearance of a conservatory. A beautiful fish pond catches everyone's eye; the walks are all concrete; everything is painted white; electric lights illuminate the place and customers may be served day or night. A refrigerating machine cools two immense boxes, in which all cut flowers are hardened off before being sent out.

The general offices occupy an entire 8-room dwelling. A general retail business is conducted there and an up-to-date store in the heart of the city takes care of the transient trade. Three motor trucks handle the deliveries, together with an especially constructed motorcycle, which is used for special deliveries.

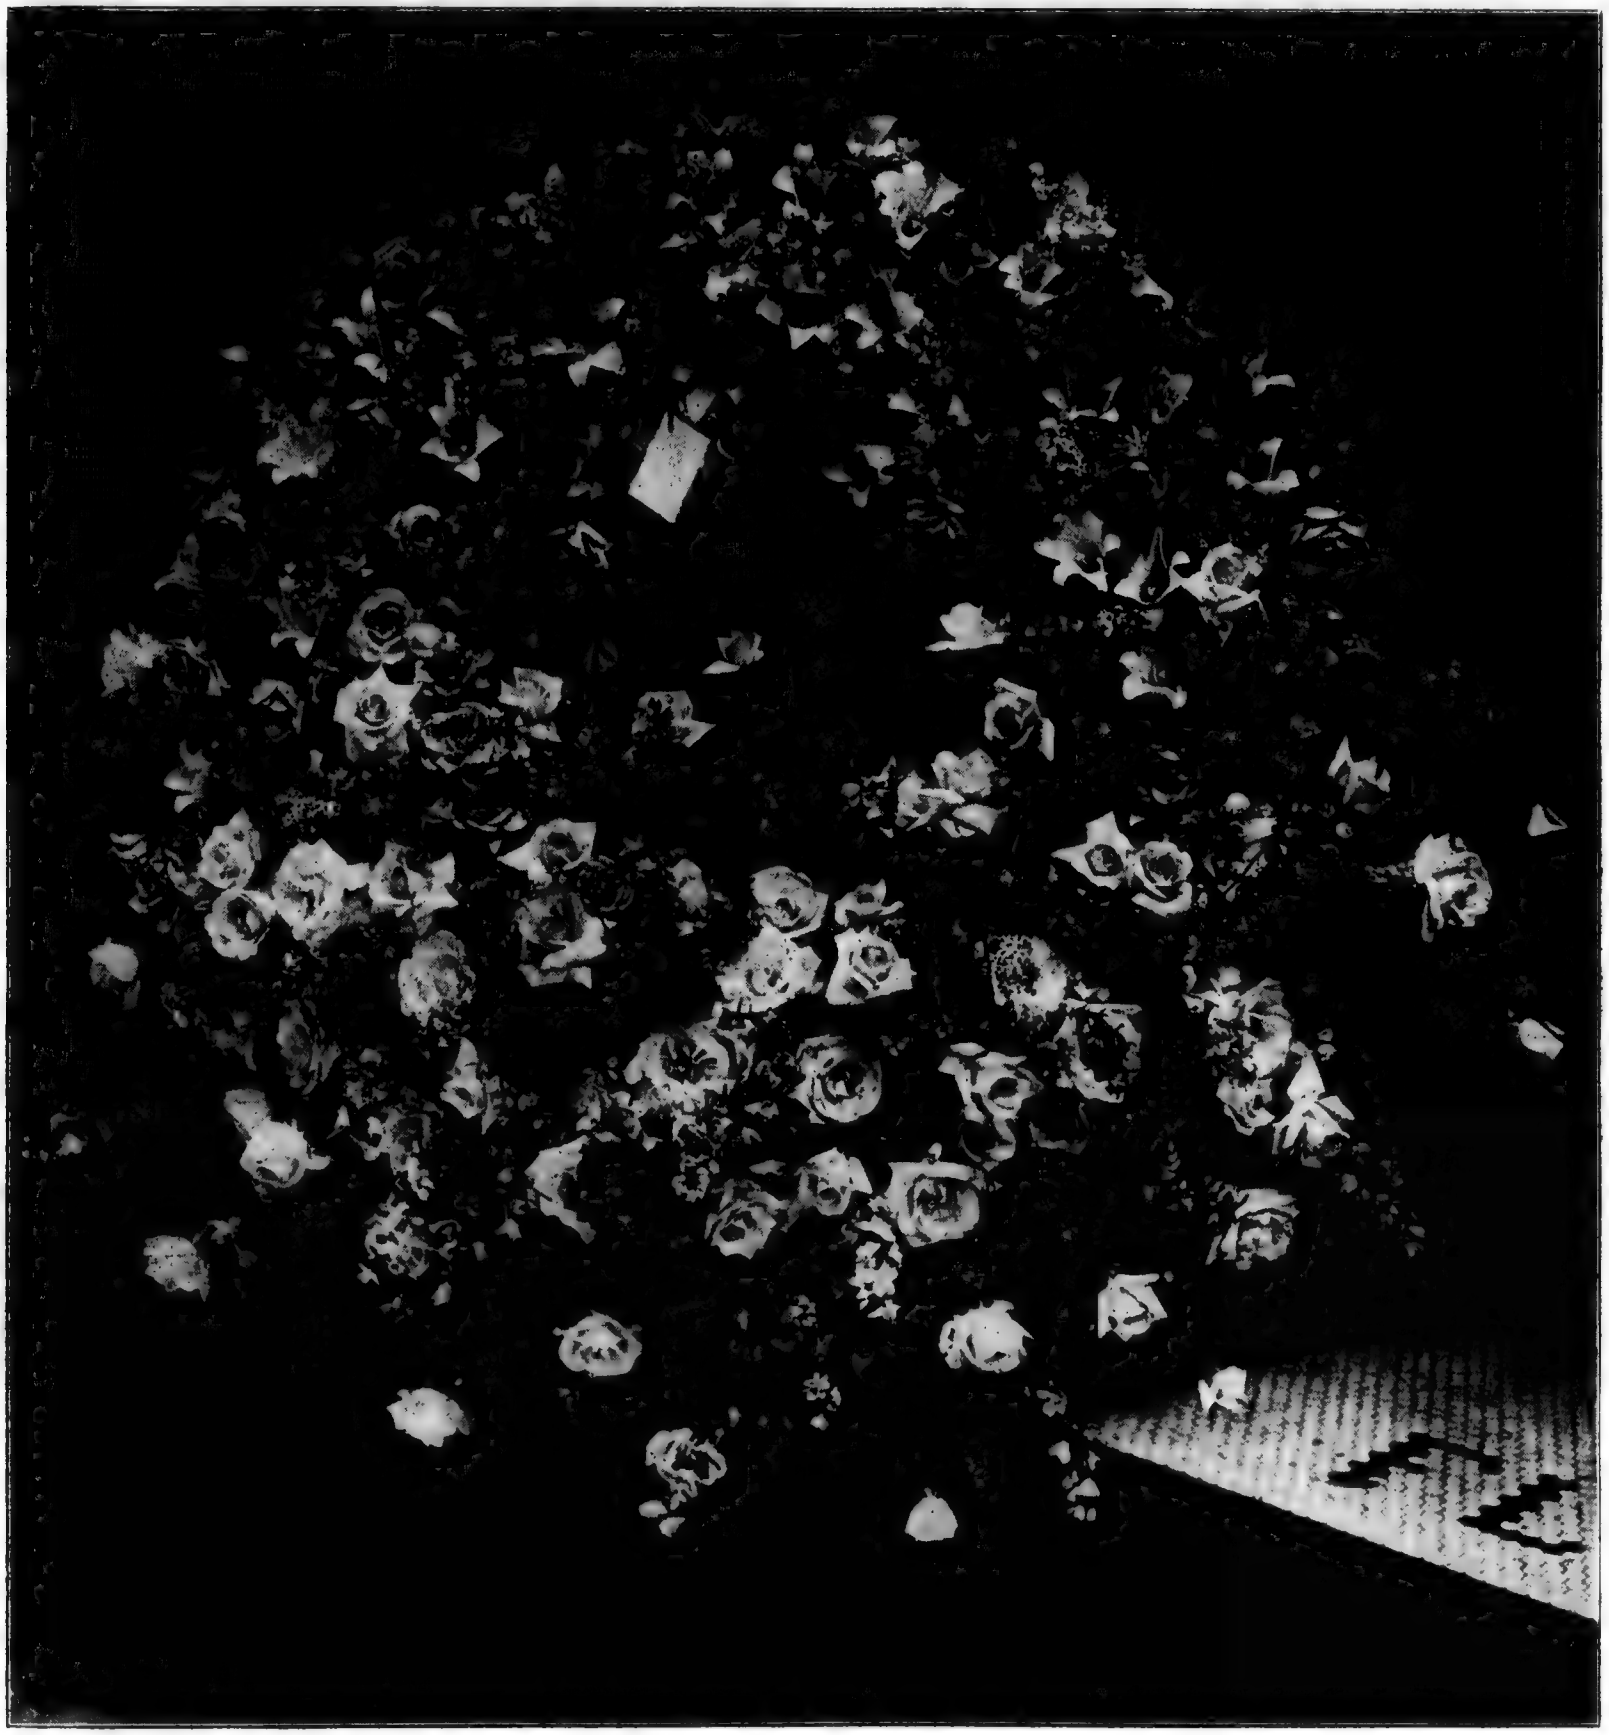
Just recently this firm acquired another good-sized range, which is known as Plant C. At that place the company is growing sweet peas, snapdragons, freesias and such flowers as require a cool temperature, such as calendulas, mignonette, forget-me-nots, etc., and bedding stock in the spring.

The prime reason for Mr. Zetlitz's success in building an organization of this kind is his ability to select men to carry responsibility at the various establishments. He displays an uncanny capacity for picking the right man for each position.

The Columbus, Lima and Ada ranges are conducted on the same lines as those at Dayton. That at Lima has a large landscape department. The growth of this organization has been remarkable and its continued success will be watched by many of the trade as one of the few examples of the ''chain'' idea in this trade. F. C. V.

TREPELS IN BIG MERGER.

When announcement was made recently at Brooklyn, N. Y., that the Trepel brothers, Joseph and Jack, had combined their two individual chains of stores to make a single chain of twenty-five, the local press came out with the expression that ''this is one of the biggest business mergers that this borough has known for some time.''



But to many in the trade the large number of stores joined is not the only evidence of ''the biggest merger.'' There comes to mind, also, the great amount of potential business and executive power that the arrangement combines. For both Jack and Joseph Trepel have operated stores for years, with steady success. Even the war and its results, although it stopped the adding of more stores for a while, did not put a single store in the chains out of business. And that was at a time when many chain systems in other and tried lines went out of business.

This new combine is to be known as Trepel Florists and has the distinction of being the largest chain of flower shops in the world. It is planned to add more stores in New York and other cities in the near future.

It is interesting to reminisce for a moment and to recall the start of Joseph Trepel's business, which is characteristic of the brothers. One day, when he was a messenger boy for a florist's house, back in the nineties, he was discharged because the slack season came on. He had $5 and with it he bought some flowers, which he sold on the street, netting himself $13 in a day. Encouraged, he persisted and after a few month's hard work he had saved enough money to rent a basement. And from this basement grew profits that permitted the opening of other stores until the ''chain idea'' became an ambition, the burden of which was realized and which, as we now see, is being improved and enlarged upon by the two brothers.

TORONTO MEETING.

The F. T. D. officers from Detroit, accompanied by Edward Sceery, of Paterson, N. J., were visitors to Toronto this week. They went over the arrangements for the coming F. T. D. meeting and were greatly pleased with the convention hall, exhibition rooms, rest rooms, and other arrangements at the King Edward hotel, where the meeting will be held. Philip Breitmeyer, president; Albert Pochelon, secretary, and M. Bloy were all present. Details of the program were drawn up and will be in shape for publication next week.

In the evening they were entertained at dinner at the King Edward hotel in a private dining room. The table was beautifully decorated with roses. Many happy speeches were made by those present. All stated that there would be a big attendance. It should be noted that the wives of florists are expected. While the sessions are in progress committees will look after these ladies and take them to see points of interest, including the big stores. All the chairmen of committees except J. A. Neal were present, including H. G. Dillemuth, G. M. Geraghty, S. A. McFadden, S. A. Frost, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Waters, L. Waters, E. Simmons, H. James and J. J. Higgins. J. J. H.

RUPP GROWS GOOSEFLOWERS.

"Nature's having another laugh," is the first thought when one encounters the oddly shaped, awkward and yet fascinating gooseflower, known to the more informed as a member of the family aristolochia. And the flower is so decided a rarity that it never fails to attract attention.

So John F. Rupp, of Shiresmantown, Pa., has discovered, for many people come to his place from Harrisburg and other near-by towns to see his gooseflowers. Among the varieties that he is growing is Aristolochia grandiflora Sturtevantii and, in his words, "it is a novel curiosity." One specimen was large enough to cover the head of a young miss. In this case the body of the "goose" was twelve inches in length from tip to bill, but this does not mean to the tip of the streamer tail, which was fifteen inches in length. Mr. Rupp has a fine display vine of the flowers trained up under the roof of one of his houses.

sure to spray your design before you send it out."

TWO TYPES OF WREATHS.

Wreath, in the florists' vocabulary, is a generic term that covers a wide variety of floral pieces. In one large division fall holiday wreaths, meaning those sold at Christmas time. Then there is another large division, covering those sold at Memorial day. The third, still larger division, covering a wider variety than either of the preceding two, comprises those made all the year around, almost every day in every florists' shop, for funerals.

Of this last division there are two types, one illustrated on page 25, the other on the opposite page following. One, like that on page 25, consists of a background, the wreath proper, of prepared foliage of some sort, magnolia leaves, galax, boxwood, oak leaves or similar material. Most common is the magnolia wreath, which may be purchased and stored till wanted, when a few flowers, a little green and some tulle or ribbon are added, to form a moderately priced funeral piece. Great numbers of such wreaths are used. This one was made by Otto Kastle, whose store is at 6416 South Halsted street, Chicago. This sort is largely used at Memorial day as well.

More pretentious and consequently more expensive is the wreath shown on page 27. This is built on a wire frame filled with moss, as described by S. A. Frost in the preceding article. This particular wreath is an especially elaborate one, in the profuse use of material and in the size of the piece. It was made by the Athletic Club Florist, 433 West Seventh street, Los Angeles.

NO SUCH BASKET.

For the reader who desires information in regard to "Czecho-Slovak" baskets, I wish to say, as a native of that region, that there is no such thing as a "Czecho-Slovak" basket, since this government did not exist before the time of Woodrow Wilson's presidency. The only baskets used by the people of that region are the ordinary straw baskets, made of willow. J. Hodakly.

COMBINES

The Zetlitz Plan.

Any owner of one large greenhouse range usually feels satisfied and contented if all things growing there are doing fine and the trade in general refers to such a place with pride. Rolf Zetlitz, however, formerly of Lima, O., now located at Dayton, operates seven separate ranges, located in four different towns; two at Lima, one at Ada, one at Columbus and three at Dayton, covering approximately 1,000,000 feet of glass. He is also establishing a chain of retail stores, four being in actual operation now with as many more to follow in the near future. It would be a hard matter for anyone acquainted with the wholesale or retail business to decide which of these places is the best, as they are all prosperous, and one wonders how it is being done.

Roses the Staple.

Roses, for cut flowers, are the company's specialty; 300,000 of the leading varieties are planted for that purpose and the outlook for the coming season could not be better. No expense is spared to obtain results, both in the handling and the growing of the stock and improvements are constantly being made to bring Zetlitz roses to a superior standard. In fact, it is the company's aim to make its roses universally known, as are Lowney's candy and Heinz's pickles. The company has already contracted for 20,000 Angelus and the same number of Red Columbia for next season's planting. The shipping facilities are second to none, for two-thirds of the population of the United States can be reached within twenty-four hours.

Crops are so scientifically arranged that there are always enough roses to go around and big crops for the holidays. The firm has no complaint to make in regard to the dullness of the season; on the contrary, satisfaction is expressed with the constantly increasing business.

Pot Plants.

Cyclamens are another big feature, being grown at Plant B, at Dayton, formerly the place of the Miami Floral Co. There can be seen 50,000 plants of the choicest varieties in the best of condition, ranging in size from 3-inch to 7-inch pot plants. Many thousand were shipped from there this summer, going as far as New Mexico in one direction and Montana in another. Between 300,000 and 500,000 seeds will be planted for next season at Plant B.

A big lath house, 50x200 feet, accommodates the hydrangeas, which are all pot-grown and vary in size from 4-inch to 8-inch pots. A beautiful lot of Christmas cherries, poinsettias, begonias and ferns completes the pot plant assortment for the holidays.

Retailing at Dayton.

Plant A, at Dayton, formerly the W. G. Matthews Co., has been remodeled and put into shape for a high-class retail place. Palms, ferns, chrysanthemums, orchids and show plants are the leading features there. This place has the appearance of a conservatory. A beautiful fish pond catches everyone's eye; the walks are all concrete; everything is painted white; electric lights illuminate the place and customers may be served day or night. A refrigerating machine cools two immense boxes, in which all cut flowers are hardened off before being sent out.

The general offices occupy an entire 8-room dwelling. A general retail business is conducted there and an up-to-date store in the heart of the city takes care of the transient trade. Three motor trucks handle the deliveries, together with an especially constructed motorcycle, which is used for special deliveries.

Just recently this firm acquired another good-sized range, which is known as Plant C. At that place the company is growing sweet peas, snapdragons, freesias and such flowers as require a cool temperature, such as calendulas, mignonette, forget-me-nots, etc., and bedding stock in the spring.

The prime reason for Mr. Zetlitz's success in building an organization of this kind is his ability to select men to carry responsibility at the various establishments. He displays an uncanny capacity for picking the right man for each position.

The Columbus, Lima and Ada ranges are conducted on the same lines as those at Dayton. That at Lima has a large landscape department. The growth of this organization has been remarkable and its continued success will be watched by many of the trade as one of the few examples of the "chain" idea in this trade. F. C. V.

TREPELS IN BIG MERGER.

When announcement was made recently at Brooklyn, N. Y., that the Trepel brothers, Joseph and Jack, had combined their two individual chains of stores to make a single chain of twenty-five, the local press came out with the expression that "this is one of the biggest business mergers that this borough has known for some time."

But to many in the trade the large number of stores joined is not the only evidence of "the biggest merger." There comes to mind, also, the great amount of potential business and executive power that the arrangement combines. For both Jack and Joseph Trepel have operated stores for years, with steady success. Even the war and its results, although it stopped the adding of more stores for a while, did not put a single store in the chains out of business. And that was at a time when many chain systems in other and tried lines went out of business.

This new combine is to be known as Trepel Florists and has the distinction of being the largest chain of flower shops in the world. It is planned to add more stores in New York and other cities in the near future.

It is interesting to reminisce for a moment and to recall the start of Joseph Trepel's business, which is characteristic of the brothers. One day, when he was a messenger boy for a florist's house, back in the nineties, he was discharged because the slack season came on. He had $5 and with it he bought some flowers, which he sold on the street, netting himself $13 in a day. Encouraged, he persisted and after a few month's hard work he had saved enough money to rent a basement. And from this basement grew profits that permitted the opening of other stores until the "chain idea" became an ambition, the burden of which was realized and which, as we now see, is being improved and enlarged upon by the two brothers.

TORONTO MEETING.

The F. T. D. officers from Detroit, accompanied by Edward Seeery, of Paterson, N. J., were visitors to Toronto this week. They went over the arrangements for the coming F. T. D. meeting and were greatly pleased with the convention hall, exhibition rooms, rest

NOW'S THE TIME

PLANT PERENNIALS.

Autumn an Auspicious Time.

At this time of the year the attention of the florist is directed to hardy perennials for two, possibly three, reasons. One is that if he takes orders for planting residence grounds he should undertake to stimulate fall plantings of perennials among his home-owning customers. Another is that he should, for his own use next summer, consider planting perennials which will do well for cutting. Such blooms come in handy in the hot weather, are always useful and add variety at a time when greenhouse flowers are not at their best. Again, if the florist has vacant property adjoining his retail establishment, be it store or greenhouse, a planting of perennials, in a border or in another form, will be a delight to his own artistic eye and an object of admiration by customers next summer.

Writing on the topic of hardy perennials for autumn planting, W. E. Bontrager, of the Ohio Experiment Station, makes such enthusiastic statements as these: "The well arranged perennial border is a perpetual delight. As new pictures unfold from day to day one wonders whether this type of ornamental planting is not the climax of perfection in achievements horticultural. The long, stately pageant of the season begins with the primulas, German irises, foxgloves, columbines, oriental poppies, hardy feverfews and is followed by Maltese cross (lychnis), sweet williams and other pinks (dianthus) in many species. Succeeding these came the bewitching blues of the hardy larkspurs and the hollyhocks in a myriad of colors. Midsummer is ablaze with the finer perennial phloxes, which cover a season of two or three months, while the striking, picturesque heads of the yuccas now are seen at their best. In late summer the rosy-purple spikes of gay feather (liatris), the golden yellow of heliopsis and the various rudbeckias, gaillardias and veronicas enliven the scene. Goldenrod, the sedums, boltonias, wild asters and Japan anemones bring up the rear of the procession and linger even after killing frosts have wrought desolation throughout the precincts of lawn and garden."

Some Good Sorts.

Most perennials may be handled quite readily in autumn and an ideal time in which to make such plantings is the interval extending from September 15 to November 1. Whether the stock is purchased, transplanted from a coldframe or obtained by the division of old clumps, the soil conditions which prevail at that time can scarcely be improved upon. Sweet williams may be divided and will give better results than if moved in the spring; an old clump of hardy larkspur (delphinium) becomes the source of numerous strong divisions; worn-out plants of hollyhock will be rejuvenated by transplanting and will flower the more profusely next summer in consequence of it. Baby's breath (gypsophila) and upright virgin's bower (Clematis recta), both fine for making bouquets, beside sea lavender (statice), mullein pink (agrostemma), Chinese bellflower (platycodon), rudbeckias, evening primrose (œnothera) and gas plant (dictamnus) are all excellent plants.

Perennials are of especial value in any piece of planting which is being developed along naturalistic lines and can be utilized in so many ways that it is possible to give only some general directions for locating and displaying them. Much depends on the ingenuity and resourcefulness of the planter. Should there be unlimited space, states Mr. Bontrager, colonies of yucca, foxglove, hollyhock, hardy larkspur, iris or peony which embrace twenty-five or more plants of a kind will become striking features of the landscape and are always greatly admired. Often such colonies may be effectively edged with low plants like Young's evening primrose, lungwort, hardy feverfew, stonecrop (sedum) or old woman (Artemisia stelleriana). On lawns of limited area perennials may be planted in small, informal clumps or groups before masses of evergreens or shrubbery, or in small openings which frequently occur along the margins of such groups. The perennial border is usually a long, narrow bed situated in front of a garden fence, alongside a walk or facing a tree or shrub growth of some kind. In it plants are usually grouped according to height, and the possibilities for diversity and variety in arrangement are without limit.

Grouping by Height.

For convenience in planting, perennial plants may be subdivided into three groups, according to height. Hollyhock, hardy larkspur, gay feather, American senna (cassia), tall rudbeckias, boltonias and wild asters comprise the taller ones and ought to be used in the back row or for the center of groups. Next in height come the foxgloves, Canterbury bells, sweet william, perennial phloxes and low-growing rudbeckias, all of which lend themselves admirably to massing and ought to be banked before the taller kinds. As low, border or edging plants the third group of perennials will consist of lungwort (pulmonaria), which has handsomely mottled foliage; leadwort (Plumbago larpentæ), Young's evening primrose (Œnothera Youngii), lamb's-ear (Stachys lanata), columbine (aquilegia), hardy feverfew (Pyrethrum roseum) and old woman, a silver-leaved plant which resembles dusty miller but is hardy.

Some of these perennials whose flowers have value for cutting are the double forms of hardy feverfew (pyrethrum), which come in pink, red and white, upright virgin's bower (Clematis recta), Coreopsis grandiflora, delphinium and perennial pea (lathyrus). Lathyrus White Pearl has unusually large, white flowers that are useful in the making of floral designs.

AN OPPORTUNITY

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S PALMS.

John C. Hatcher, who conducts stores at Amsterdam and Schenectady, N. Y., and a greenhouse at Hoffmans, N. Y., has in his possession two fine specimens of Cycas revoluta. They are twelve to fifteen feet high, and the trunks are fourteen inches in diameter. These palms are said to have been originally the property of George Washington, father of our country. These palms were given to Mr. Hatcher to take care of by Senator Starin, United States senator from New York state at one time. He was also owner of Glen island and of the famous ferry boats plying between it and the mainland. The senator now is dead, the family is disintegrated and the estate sold. Members of Senator Starin's family long ago were friends of Washington and, of course, the palms came into his possession through this friendship.

S. A. Kost, of Buffalo, suggests that these palms would make a tremendously powerful drawing card for the national flower show at Cleveland next spring. The newspapers would give the historic palms descriptions and photographs, and the public would want to see them. At the close of the show, probably one of the prominent horticultural institutions of the country would wish to purchase the palms, either the United States Botanical Gardens, at Washington, or the park commissioners of one of our great cities. The combination of historical and horticultural interest would make these palms something of public attraction wherever they were.

In writing to one of the prominent Ohio florists engaged in promoting the Cleveland national flower show, Mr. Kost says: "Cleveland is to have a fine flower show next spring, the finest in the country. Why not get Cleveland to take the palms? Look at the big drawing-card they would be, these palms, the living mementos of George Washington, the father of our country! If they were on exhibit at the show, people would come from all over the country to see those wonderful palms. It would bring more historical interest into the florists' business. I think Mr. Hatcher would like to get these palms placed where they will be seen and appreciated by the public. The palms are now taking up a lot of room, eating their heads off, so to speak, and bringing in no return. Mr. Hatcher is now an old man, has been in Amsterdam over sixty years and no doubt would like to see the palms placed in some public institution. There is no consideration of money or profit in this; only the expense of their upkeep these many years in his greenhouse is all that is asked."

CHICAGO GROWERS MEET

CHICAGO GROWERS OPEN YEAR.

Ammann Gives Address.

The advertised feature of the first meeting in the new season of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, at the Hotel Randolph, September 15, was an address by J. F. Ammann. This citizen of Edwardsville, Ill., entered the limelight as president of the S. A. F. in 1919 and has since been unable to get out, his hard-working propensities being so much recognized that he has since been called upon to act as president of the Florists' Hail Association, chairman of the S. A. F. membership drive committee, member of the hard-working national publicity committee and secretary of the National Flower Growers' Association. It was in the capacity last named that he addressed the meeting, describing the opportunities of the growers' organizations. He said that Illinois, with its two splendidly organized growers' bodies and its leadership by reason of its 17,000,000 square feet of glass area, would be looked to for achievements to serve as examples to other states.

Mr. Ammann in his remarks presented an estimate, surprising in size, of the value of the advertising done since the year 1917, when the national campaign was originated. Summing up all the co-operative advertising, national as well as that done in Chicago and other flower centers, and that of individuals, together with slogan-boards and the various displays of the slogan otherwise, Mr. Ammann, with the aid of competent advertising men, has appraised the value of advertising done by the florists in this country at no less than $2,500,000 per year. Most of this advertising is the direct result of the work of the Society of American Florists, by introducing the slogan, and the efforts of other trade organizations. As regards the immensity of the florists' industry of this country, Mr. Ammann stated that it represents at the present time a greater investment than the steel business.

Upon the close of the address, a rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Ammann.

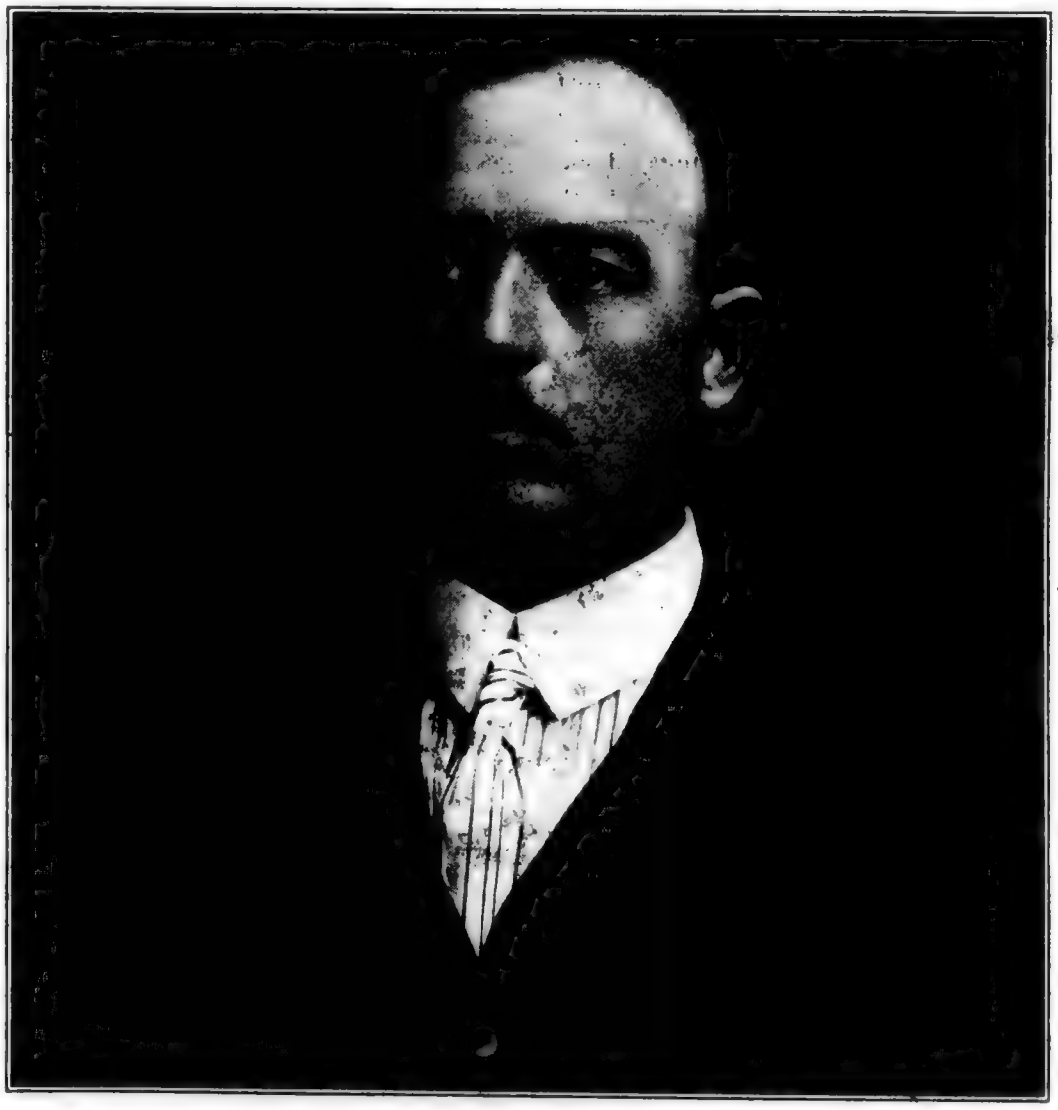
President Pearson States Plans.

The new president of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, Peter Pearson, read a statement of his aims for the organization during the coming year, which appears on this page. He urged the staging of exhibits for competitive prizes at the meetings and outlined a plan of awards that was considered an excellent one. He also recommended the establishment of a statistical bureau by the organization. The recommendation of exhibits at the meetings was taken up particularly. After some deliberation, August Poehlmann emphasized the importance of advertising with growers' own goods and moved that flower shows be held frequently. A motion prevailed that the president appoint a committee with full power to act, to work out the details. The following were appointed: August Poehlmann, Andrew Benson, H. C. Blewitt, Emil Blameuser, James Psenicka, Joseph Kohout, Edward Assa and Otto H. Amling.

A motion prevailed that the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago donate a prize of $25 for a vase of large chrysanthemums, no less than fifty in number, scoring the highest number of points at the exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, to be held in November.

As representative of the growers on the board of directors of the Allied Florists' Association, August Poehlmann reported that the expenses connected with the florists' exhibit at the Pageant of Progress on the Municipal Pier had totaled approximately $10,500. The Allied Florists' Association had appropriated $1,200 toward them, the remainder being contributed by various houses in the trade, with the exception of a deficit, upon the balancing of the books, of $185, which the A. F. A. met.

Henry Wehrmann presented the report of the auditing committee, stating that the books of both the secretary and treasurer were found in balance. August Poehlmann moved that the report be accepted and the committee be discharged with thanks.



The applications of M. J. Roeser, of Des Plaines; Ernst Oechslin, of River Forest; A. H. Schneider, of Oak Park, and M. Leider, of Des Plaines, were favorably reported by the membership committee and the applicants were unanimously elected to membership.

PRESIDENT PEARSON PLANS.

Inaugural Address.

The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago is now entering its third year of activity. With pardonable pride I say that I feel it a great honor to have been chosen your president for the ensuing year. With a feeling of obligation and responsibility to this association, it will be my endeavor so to conduct this office that it will continue to reflect credit upon the association. I think it is a fact that we can all be proud of, that this association was the pioneer in its field of endeavor. During its brief existence its influence has radiated over the country. Other centers of flower production have organized similar associations in their districts, which

Most of this advertising is the direct result of the work of the Society of American Florists, by introducing the slogan, and the efforts of other trade organizations. As regards the immensity of the florists' industry of this country, Mr. Ammann stated that it represents at the present time a greater investment than the steel business.

Upon the close of the address, a rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Ammann.

President Pearson States Plans.

The new president of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, Peter Pearson, read a statement of his aims for the organization during the coming year, which appears on this page. He urged the staging of exhibits for competitive prizes at the meetings and outlined a plan of awards that was considered an excellent one. He also recommended the establishment of a statistical bureau by the organization. The recommendation of exhibits at the meetings was taken up particularly. After some deliberation, August Poehlmann emphasized the importance of advertising with growers' own goods and moved that flower shows be held frequently. A motion prevailed that the president appoint a committee with full power to act, to work out the details. The following were appointed: August Poehlmann, Andrew Benson, H. C. Blewitt, Emil Blameuser, James Psenicka, Joseph Kohout, Edward Assa and Otto H. Amling.

A motion prevailed that the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago donate a prize of $25 for a vase of large chrysanthemums, no less than fifty in number, scoring the highest number of points at the exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, to be held in November.

As representative of the growers on the board of directors of the Allied Florists' Association, August Poehlmann reported that the expenses connected with the florists' exhibit at the Pageant of Progress on the Municipal Pier had totaled approximately $10,500. The Allied Florists' Association had appropriated $1,200 toward them, the remainder being contributed by various houses in the trade, with the exception of a deficit, upon the balancing of the books, of $185, which the A. F. A. met.

Henry Wehrmann presented the report of the auditing committee, stating that the books of both the secretary and treasurer were found in balance. August Poehlmann moved that the report be accepted and the committee be discharged with thanks.

The applications of M. J. Roeser, of Des Plaines; Ernst Oechslin, of River Forest; A. H. Schneider, of Oak Park, and M. Leider, of Des Plaines, were favorably reported by the membership committee and the applicants were unanimously elected to membership.

PRESIDENT PEARSON PLANS.

Inaugural Address.

The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago is now entering its third year of activity. With pardonable pride I say that I feel it a great honor to have been chosen your president for the ensuing year. With a feeling of obligation and responsibility to this association, it will be my endeavor so to conduct this office that it will continue to reflect credit upon the association. I think it is a fact that we can all be proud of, that this association was the pioneer in its field of endeavor. During its brief existence its influence has radiated over the country. Other centers of flower production have organized similar associations in their districts, which have brought about the desirability of the National Flower Growers' Association. While we have been so successful in the past, it is my greatest desire that we continue to work for still greater accomplishments. As an association of flower growers for the greatest flower distributing center in the world, our opportunity for inaugurating measures calculated to better our present form of growing and marketing our flowers is limited only by the amount of coöperation and energy we wish to employ to gain our objective.

Peter Pearson.

Gentlemen, do you fully realize the value of the services this association can render to the individual members as well as the industry at large if you are but willing to give your whole-hearted support to this movement? Let me say that your officers, no matter how hard they work, are powerless to accomplish much without the coöperation of the whole membership to the fullest extent possible. This has not been lacking in the past, for the attendance at our meetings has usually been good, but I think it could be improved on if every member realized that he has in this association a real asset and that he needs this association. The association must in turn have your support and counsel in its deliberations. Remember you will gain nothing by shifting by yourself. No one has proven big enough to continue successfully alone. This is an age for cooperation, and through coöperation only will we succeed in bettering our position as an industry.

For Larger Meetings.

As your presiding officer, I appeal to you for your own good benefit to make it your business to attend our meetings regularly. By so doing you inspire and encourage your officers to greater effort and I am sure you will find it time well invested. It is the intention of the officers to provide at our meetings educational and instructive topics. All we ask is that the members attend, so as to take advantage of what is offered.

One of the acts that will be of lasting credit to this association is the help we gave in organizing the Allied Florists' Association of Illinois, that now so successfully carries on our advertising campaign. Credit is also due to the individual members, as well as some nonmembers, for their continued loyal support. The Allied Florists' Association has done more to make the Chicago public think of flowers than any other agency employed. I must emphasize that growers should continue to support the advertising, no matter what the other branches of the trade may in the future elect to do. Advertising is most necessary. It is to a business what a life line is to a drowning man. If he grasps it and holds on to it he will live to enjoy life. We have caught the line; now let us hold on to it and we shall live and enjoy prosperity.

I shall recommend for the consideration of this assembly the advisability of working to accomplish the following, which I think would make for further progress in our business if carried out faithfully by all concerned.

Statistical Bureau.

We should have a statistical bureau. Its purpose would be to gather data and keep records of all greenhouse crops of plants and flowers grown in and about Chicago for the Chicago market. These data would be disseminated to all members of this association and others who it may be determined should have access to such records. I believe such a bureau could accomplish much good in the following ways: By getting complete data about each flower grown, its general condition throughout the season of development, and the prospects as to crops that may be expected at any particular time. Then we could possibly to some extent eliminate the hit-or-miss method now used in striking for a good market. Such information, if acted on, could be used to diminish the abnormal gluts that occur at times; also to lessen the abnormal scarcity at other times. After a year's compilation of such data, we should know exactly how to arrange our planting and cropping for any certain date and to some extent eliminate overproduction. Think how valuable such information would be—if, for instance, we knew today whether there is planted a half million more or just the same amount of mums this year as last! If we could tell with reasonable accuracy a week ahead the possible size of supply of flowers for a holiday, it would help the wholesalers materially in making up their price lists in such a way that a maximum price could be realized without leaving a large surplus, as sometimes happens.

We should work for closer coöperation with the wholesalers and retailers, always having in mind the fourth party, the public, whose good-will is a great business asset to this trade. We should at all times try to keep and cultivate the favorable sentiment of the public. No business can afford under present conditions to allow anything to occur that would in any way excite public sentiment against our products and methods.

Monthly Exhibits.

I shall also recommend to this association a proposal to hold a series of monthly exhibits of flowers and plants to compete for awards. Plants will be exhibited separately. I am urging this feature because I believe that we should let it be known throughout the territory served by the Chicago market that Chicago is still the great flower center and that here is a place where quantity and quality stock can be obtained at all times. By holding these exhibits, we should be able to get considerable publicity for the Chicago market, and I believe that we should do something in this direction to help Chicago wholesalers in their efforts to have the trade come to this market for supplies. Some of you do not realize the great stimulus such flower shows would have in creating a desire in everyone to produce the highest quality stock possible. The success of such shows is already assured, provided each member will give his whole-hearted support by staging exhibits. Let us remember that we are all vitally interested in the course of the Chicago market and should at all times guard the advantages that we have and be alert to create new ones if possible.

FRISCO'S CO-OPERATIVE MARKET.

Promptly at 6:45 on a San Francisco morning, September 1, the huge doors in what previous to that time had been the St. George garage, at the corner of Bush and St. Anne streets, swung rapidly open and, in the presence of the board of directors, the San Francisco Coöperative Flower Market opened with a rush. Amid the cheers of the crowd awaiting the opening, the first wagon, loaded with flowers, drove into the market. Others followed. Buyers flocked in amazingly. Business picked up instantaneously. The culmination of weeks of study, argument and hard work on the part of the San Franciscans was a success.

But this great initial rush was not the work of a moment. Members of the board of directors had spent much time getting the place in readiness and this was no small task, considering the labor troubles encountered. Then, too, the project had been advertised strenuously, even before the full page announcement in The Review for September 1 stated that "San Francisco is to have a great flower market. It has been arranged through the efforts of practically all the retail florists and growers of San Francisco."

The reason for the market is clearly expressed in the words of a well known member of the profession, who said, "Something of the sort is needed to reduce the competition of the street flower peddlers. These peddlers cause prices to be shot to pieces. If we run a market in the spirit of coöperation with the Japanese, not against them, we probably can do something to regulate prices." July 27 articles of incorporation were filed for the concern. The papers of incorporation stated that it is organized "to store, sell and distribute flowers, plants, bulbs, florists' accessories, goods, wares and merchandise." The capitalization of the corporation is $25,000. The florists on the incorporators' committee named in the papers are P. V. Matraia, Charles W. Brown and Joseph P. Haywood.

The building itself, formerly a garage, needed little remodeling. It is 58x155 feet and has driveways going into it from two streets. A great advantage is that automobiles and wagons can drive right into the building, a convenience that facilitates loading and unloading and does away with the parking problem.

At a meeting held not long ago the following officers and directors were elected: President, P. V. Matraia, of the Art Floral Co.; secretary, C. W. Brown, of Brown & Kennedy; treasurer, James T. Hayward, nurseryman, of Burlingame; assistant attorney, K. Cannon, nurseryman, and directors, H. Plath, of the Ferneries; B. M. Joseph, of Joseph's; Manuel Rolleri and David Arata, growers, and Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co. Miss Elizabeth G. Walsh is the bookkeeper of the company.

One of the accompanying illustrations shows part of the interior of the market, after the rush to buy on the opening day, when the "hot dog" man sold his wares. The other presents, outside the new market, the officers and directors. Reading from left to right, they are Joseph Hayward, B. Joseph, P. V. Matraia, Kensley Cannon, Charles Brown, H. Plath, David Arata, Frank Thatcher and Manuel Rolleri. The "mascot," with the cloak over his arm, is B. Joseph, Jr.

DAHLIA SHOW AT PROVIDENCE.

There were no less than 224 classes in the schedule of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society for the early fall show, which opened September 15 in the ballroom of the Narragansett hotel, Providence, R. I. There were forty-three classes allotted to dahlias alone, and there was a grand exhibit of these. All were well arranged and the flowers were of superb quality. In the class for 100 named varieties, embracing all types, W. D. Hathaway won a keen contest with a splendid collection, all in perfect condition and of mammoth size; second, Edgar W. Darling; third, Alfred E. Doty, New Haven, Conn.

Among other large exhibitors of dahlias were the Saunders Gardens, North Scituate, R. I., which also had many fine seedlings and excellent gladioli. T. H. Hughes, New Bedford, Mass., was strong on both gladioli and dahlias, and also William Steel, Auburn, R. I., whose seedling dahlias, gladioli, asters, snapdragons, roses and other seasonable flowers were shown in quantity. There was the usual large display of vegetables and fruits, also honey and bees. John S. Doig, head gardener to Frederick S. Peck, Barrington, R. I., captured many of the premiums in the vegetable and fruit classes with high-grade produce. The attendance was large on both days of the exhibition. W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass., officiated as judge. The exhibition committee consisted of Arthur Sellen, Alexander Macrae and Cornelius Hartstra, of Providence; Stuart Pratt, of Longmeadow, and Tom Brook, of Greystone. E. K. Thomas makes an efficient secretary.

The Market.

Business last week was just a little better than it had been for the two weeks previous, although the increase was so small that it would hardly be noticed. Business last week was just a little better than it had been for the two weeks previous, although the increase was so small that it would hardly be noticed. Roses, in particular, seem to be about the only line that is moving to any extent and these are cleaning up fairly well daily. The outdoor stock at present is mediocre and, therefore, is not moving as it should. Gladioli are just about done for. Asters are coming in scantily and those that do arrive are not up to the standard. An enormous amount of this stock has found its way to the rubbish box. Dahlias are slightly better than they were previously, owing to the slightly cooler weather. Until now it was so hot that dahlias were not up to the regular standard and did not keep as they should. Fancy ferns are now arriving in good shape and are moving well.

Various Notes.

George Bate, Albert Barber and Herman Knoble have returned from a two weeks' trip to Canada. They brought back some excellent fish stories, etc.

Morris Cohen, of Cohen & Hiller, New York, was a recent visitor, as were Willard Kervan, of the Kervan Co., New York; H. J. Dennis, of the Weller Pottery Co., and Myer Gottschall, of the B. Shackman Co. W. A. R.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Market conditions have slightly improved. The demand is better and the supply has lessened. Asters and gladioli, which were glutting the market, have deteriorated and these are now becoming scarce. Roses are not quite so numerous as they were previously. The price range goes up from $3 per hundred. Carnations are available at $2 and $3 per hundred. On account of the short stems and the abundance of other flowers, the latter have been in little demand.

Dahlias continue plentiful. Good ones sell fairly well, although the poorer grades have gone begging. A limited number of zinnias has moved along with other seasonable outdoor stock, including cosmos, phlox, hydrangeas, etc. Easter lilies are available at $3 per dozen. Rubrum lilies are scarcer.

Various Notes.

A. E. Kunderd, of Goshen, Ind., the gladiolus specialist, has issued a catalogue of his own productions, which include scores of the finest varieties on the market. He is offering this year for the first time twenty-three new ruffled varieties in various colors, besides fifty-three other new varieties. Mr. Kunderd had a splendid display of his seedlings at the state fair.

Mr. and Mrs Clarence R. Greene recently motored to Spencer, where they were the guests of E. T. Barnes.

A. F. J. Baur and family have just returned from Lafayette, where they were guests of the Dorners. Mr. Baur states that everything at this establishment was in fine shape. E. E. T.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

The market for cut flowers and plants is opening up now, due mostly to the fact that outdoor stock is disappearing and people are getting back to work. Although there were few funerals last week, flowers moved steadily and an average week was the result. Gladioli have disappeared and asters are of poor quality. Dahlias have been poor, owing to unfavorable weather conditions, but they are now improving to such a great extent that they are being carried in stock for both funeral bouquets and hospital bunches. Roses are of fine quality and plentiful and have a fair market. Carnations are just beginning to bloom and they cannot be had in large quantity. A few mums are also appearing, but they are small and the demand is greater than the supply.

Various Notes.

McKellar reports an excellent business at both stores, which are carrying a large supply of flowers at all times. Church weddings helped to keep the firm busy last week and several weddings have been booked ahead for this month.

Joseph Katona had some nice plants at the state fair, which took prizes. He has some fine mums and carnations coming on.

Miss Elsie Janis will be at Columbus next week to take part in a celebration. Many flowers will go to her, judging from the orders booked. She is a local girl and well known.

The Wilson Floral Co. had a big wedding at Marion, O., which kept the company busy. Mrs. Wilson says that this was an elaborate affair and was the largest the company ever had. J. W. T.

A TECHNICAL TERM.

I think it is rather unfortunate that it is so easy to misconstrue our technical language. In The Review, issue of September 8, C. T. M. asks "if it is all right to take the crown buds off chrysanthemums." C. H. T. replies, "It is satisfactory at this time to take any bud that shows on your plants." I am wondering whether C. T. M. construed the word "take" as meaning to leave them on, or whether he took them off.

Thomas H. White.

HAVE YOU A SURPLUS?

Many florists make it a point to produce each season a surplus over and above the requirements of their home trade, knowing that all good stock is easily converted into cash by the use of Classified ads in The Review. Like this:

I am sold out of the stock advertised in The Review. Advise what I owe for your services.—C. M. Follmer, Tharptown Greenhouses, Shamokin, Pa., September 19, 1921.

The Classified ad has served its purpose.—Rolf Zetlitz Co., Columbus, O., September 17, 1921.

Please stop the ads at once, as we are turning back about $150 in checks every day now.—J. Zwierzycki & Sons, Springfield, Ill., September 17, 1921.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

AT SYRACUSE

NEW YORKERS' JOINT MEETING.

Officers Reëlected.

The New York Federation of Horticultural and Floricultural Clubs held its annual meeting at 2 p. m., September 15, in the office of Commissioner Williams on the state fair grounds at Syracuse, N. Y. Representatives were present from member clubs, including the New York Florists' Club, the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, Tarrytown Horticultural Society, Buffalo Florists' Club, Syracuse Florists' Association, Rochester Florists' Association and Syracuse Rose Society.

Officers of the organization were reelected, as follows: President, Frank R. Pierson, Tarrytown; first vice-president, Dr. Earl A. Bates, Syracuse, and treasurer, W. A. Adams, Buffalo. Prof. Arno H. Nehrling, of Cornell University, was elected secretary to succeed Prof. E. A. White, who declined reëlection.

A resolution that the federation go before the fair commission and the governor to request immediate erection of a horticultural building to house exhibits at the fair was adopted unanimously. A committee, consisting of presidents of allied horticultural associations, was appointed to take up the matter.

Plans for the Future.

Other matters of importance were discussed at the meeting, among them the question of local and national advertising. It was the general consensus that community advertising, as carried on by the Buffalo Florists' Club, the Allied Florists' Association of Illinois and the Detroit Florists' Club, was the most effective. W. A. Adams, of Buffalo, stated that this type of advertising had placed Valentine's day and Mothers' day among the biggest flower days of the year.

The floricultural work at Cornell University was also taken up for discussion. Prof. Arno H. Nehrling reported that the plan for remodeling the present dairy building for floricultural work had been abandoned. According to the new plans for development of the college of agriculture, which have been worked out by the state architect, the department of floriculture is to be housed in the wing of the new Plant Industry building. This building will be in close proximity to the present greenhouses and this general scheme, which has been approved by the governor of the state, will give the department an opportunity to develop and correlate its work.

Speakers at Dinner.

At the close of the meeting the Syracuse Florists' Association, headed by W. F. Bultmann, president of the association, took the visiting delegates in automobiles to the Anglers' Club, located on the shore of Oneida lake. The party arrived at the club house at sunset and from those who had not had the privilege of visiting this beautiful lake one heard many exclamations of wonder and delight.

At 7 p. m. a fine dinner was served. After dinner President Bultmann introduced Professor David Lumsden, superintendent of floral displays at the New York state fair, as toastmaster for the evening. The speakers included F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown; Prof. Arno H. Nehrling, of Cornell University; W. A.

Adams, of Buffalo; Thomas Cogger, of Boston; W. H. Workman, of Oswego; N. Cottam, Wappingers Falls, N. Y., and Robert Bard, of Syracuse.

HENDRICKSON ENTERTAINS.

Last week the New York Florists' Club held "Long island night," when the exhibits were from growers on that island and a special effort was made to induce attendance of members of the trade from that section. To accomplish so successful a result as the meeting brought forth required much hard work, and this was performed by a small group appointed for that purpose by President I. S. Hendrickson. Not only did Mr. Hendrickson aid them in this work, being a Long islander himself, by sending a large exhibit from the firm of John Lewis Childs, Inc., but he entertained the members the week before the meeting at Flowerfield. On that occasion there were present A. L. Miller, Richard Hughes, Anton Schultheis, Jr., Henry Weston, Marius Matheron, Secretary Young, John Miesem, Clarence Ankers, W. A. Rodman, Peter Hoebel, Arthur Weston and William Young. The party was escorted by Mr. Hendrickson over the big 800-acre flower farm, spending some time among the fifteen acres of dahlias and a greater acreage of cannas. Here a photograph was taken of the party, shown on this page. The gladiolus and other bulb and perennial plantings were also inspected. The party was entertained at a delightful lunch under the trees near the Hendrickson residence and before departing passed a hearty vote of thanks to their host and his wife for their cordial hospitality.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market continues dull and uninteresting, a slightly stimulated demand on Saturday being the only difference noted in the past few weeks. Cooler weather is now being experienced, which may help toward improvement, but no material change is looked for until the end of the month, and the following Jewish holiday. Asters and dahlias now dominate the market, the former arriving in vast quantity, creating a congestion hard to dispose of. The best flowers bring about $2 per hundred, but the majority of arrivals bring from $1 down to 50 cents, and quantities go to the ash barrel. It is about the same with dahlias; arrivals are heavy, and when a moderate amount of stock is moved at 20 to 25 cents per bunch, the remainder clears at buyers' prices, and much remains unsold at that. Growers of these items are now making inquiry before shipping, so as to save at least their express charges. Other outside material is overabundant and there is much waste. Zinnias, tuberoses, delphinium, gypsophila, tritomas, cosmos, bouvardia, marigolds and strawflowers arrive in quantity and meet only a cheap demand. Asparagus plumosus is on the scarce side and brings $1 per bunch. A few Golden Glow and Smith's Advance chrysanthemums are coming in, but move slowly with the other material so abundant.

Roses are not particularly plentiful, but sales are not active. American Beauty is in better supply, without change in prices, and the quality is improved. Hybrid teas move sluggishly, retailers showing no disposition to stock up with them, preferring to hold up buying until actual needs arise. Prices were a little stiffer on Saturday, but at the opening of this week hung fire at last week's quotations.

A few carnations from this season's benchings are arriving, some of fair quality, both as to stem and flower heads. The best move at $3 per hundred.

Cattleyas are in larger supply, with the labiata variety predominating. Prices have moved downward from the quotations of the last few weeks. Cypripediums move slowly at $3 per dozen. Oncidium sprays are beginning to come in, but there is no demand for them.

White lilies are rather scarce, and quotations are unchanged, although the top price of $30 is weaker. Lilies of the valley are in fair supply, but the demand is sluggish. A few rubrum and album speciosums are to be had at $8 to $12 per hundred flowers.

There is every indication of early frosts this season, and they, doubtless, will be welcomed by the greenhouse men.

Various Notes.

Eddie Dupuy, son of Louis Dupuy, the veteran plantsman of Whitestone, L. I., has returned from France, which he visited with the American Legion party.

Hans Rosacker and Mrs. Rosacker, of Minneapolis, spent a day or two in New York this week on their return from their European trip.

Philip F. Kessler is again at his quarters in the Coogan building, after a vacation spent in the Adirondacks. While there he purchased a house and woodland grounds near Old Forge, which he will use for subsequent years' vacations. His son, Philip, Jr., is at Syracuse University, where he has been entered for a 4-year course in business and finance.

The old Golsner range, at College Point, L. I., will be used for the last time this winter, the property having been sold by Mr. Golsner, possession to be given next spring.

W. H. Graham, of Manchester, N. H., was a visitor this week.

The Astoria Florist, lately at 2188 Broadway, has opened a store opposite the old location under the style of Astoria Florist, Inc.

The old seed firm of J. M. Thorburn & Co. filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy last week. The business was started in 1802 by Grant Thorburn, with quarters in the Old Dutch church on Nassau street, the business subsequently being removed to 15 John street, later to 36 Cortlandt street, and a few years ago to the present location. The liabilities are set at $54,729, and the assets at $44,000.

Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., is in the city, prior to visiting the show of the New Haven Horticultural Society and the experimental grounds of the American Dahlia Society at Storrs, Conn. On his return he will stay in New York until after the show of the American Dahlia Society, to be held next week in the roof garden and conservatory of the Pennsylvania hotel.

A series of cartoons has been distributed to the wholesale trade by the Allied Florists' Trade Association, intended to stimulate subscriptions to the publicity fund of the organization.

as it should. Gladioli are just about done for. Asters are coming in scantily and those that do arrive are not up to the standard. An enormous amount of this stock has found its way to the rubbish box. Dahlias are slightly better than they were previously, owing to the slightly cooler weather. Until now it was so hot that dahlias were not up to the regular standard and did not keep as they should. Fancy ferns are now arriving in good shape and are moving well.

Various Notes.

George Bate, Albert Barber and Herman Knoble have returned from a two weeks' trip to Canada. They brought back some excellent fish stories, etc.

Morris Cohen, of Cohen & Hiller, New York, was a recent visitor, as were Willard Kervan, of the Kervan Co., New York; H. J. Dennis, of the Weller Pottery Co., and Myer Gottschall, of the B. Shackman Co. W. A. R.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Market conditions have slightly improved. The demand is better and the supply has lessened. Asters and gladioli, which were glutting the market, have deteriorated and these are now becoming scarce. Roses are not quite so numerous as they were previously. The price range goes up from $3 per hundred. Carnations are available at $2 and $3 per hundred. On account of the short stems and the abundance of other flowers, the latter have been in little demand.

Dahlias continue plentiful. Good ones sell fairly well, although the poorer grades have gone begging. A limited number of zinnias has moved along with other seasonable outdoor stock, including cosmos, phlox, hydrangeas, etc. Easter lilies are available at $3 per dozen. Rubrum lilies are scarcer.

Various Notes.

A. E. Kunderd, of Goshen, Ind., the gladiolus specialist, has issued a catalogue of his own productions, which include scores of the finest varieties on the market. He is offering this year for the first time twenty-three new ruffled varieties in various colors, besides fifty-three other new varieties. Mr. Kunderd had a splendid display of his seedlings at the state fair.

Mr. and Mrs Clarence R. Greene recently motored to Spencer, where they were the guests of E. T. Barnes.

A. F. J. Baur and family have just returned from Lafayette, where they were guests of the Dorners. Mr. Baur states that everything at this establishment was in fine shape. E. E. T.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

The market for cut flowers and plants is opening up now, due mostly to the fact that outdoor stock is disappearing and people are getting back to work. Although there were few funerals last week, flowers moved steadily and an average week was the result. Gladioli have disappeared and asters are of poor quality. Dahlias have been poor, owing to unfavorable weather conditions, but they are now improving to such a great extent that they are being carried in stock for both funeral bouquets and hospital bunches. Roses are of fine quality and plentiful and have a fair market. Carnations are just beginning to bloom and they cannot be had in large quantity. A few mums are also appearing, but they are small and the demand is greater than the supply.

Various Notes.

McKellar reports an excellent business at both stores, which are carrying a large supply of flowers at all times. Church weddings helped to keep the firm busy last week and several weddings have been booked ahead for this month.

Joseph Katona had some nice plants at the state fair, which took prizes. He has some fine mums and carnations coming on.

Miss Elsie Janis will be at Columbus next week to take part in a celebration. Many flowers will go to her, judging from the orders booked. She is a local girl and well known.

The Wilson Floral Co. had a big wedding at Marion, O., which kept the company busy. Mrs. Wilson says that this was an elaborate affair and was the largest the company ever had.

A TECHNICAL TERM.

I think it is rather unfortunate that it is so easy to misconstrue our technical language. In The Review, issue of September 8, C. T. M. asks "if it is all right to take the crown buds off chrysanthemums." C. H. T. replies, "It is satisfactory at this time to take any bud that shows on your plants." I am wondering whether C. T. M. construed the word "take" as meaning to leave them on, or whether he took them off.

HAVE YOU A SURPLUS?

Many florists make it a point to produce each season a surplus over and above the requirements of their home trade, knowing that all good stock is easily converted into cash by the use of Classified ads in The Review. Like this:

I am sold out of the stock advertised in The Review. Advise what I owe for your services.—C. M. Follmer, Tharptown Greenhouses, Shamokin, Pa., September 19, 1921.

The Classified ad has served its purpose.—Rolf Zetlitz Co., Columbus, O., September 17, 1921.

Please stop the ads at once, as we are turning back about $150 in checks every day now.—J. Zwierzycki & Sons, Springfield, Ill., September 17, 1921.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

AT SYRACUSE

NEW YORKERS' JOINT MEETING.

Officers Reëlected.

The New York Federation of Horticultural and Floricultural Clubs held its annual meeting at 2 p. m., September 15, in the office of Commissioner Williams on the state fair grounds at Syracuse, N. Y. Representatives were present from member clubs, including the New York Florists' Club, the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, Tarrytown Horticultural Society, Buffalo Florists' Club, Syracuse Florists' Association, Rochester Florists' Association and Syracuse Rose Society.

Officers of the organization were reelected, as follows: President, Frank R. Pierson, Tarrytown; first vice-president, Dr. Earl A. Bates, Syracuse, and treasurer, W. A. Adams, Buffalo. Prof. Arno H. Nehrling, of Cornell University, was elected secretary to succeed Prof. E. A. White, who declined reëlection.

A resolution that the federation go before the fair commission and the governor to request immediate erection of a horticultural building to house exhibits at the fair was adopted unanimously. A committee, consisting of presidents of allied horticultural associations, was appointed to take up the matter.

Plans for the Future.

Other matters of importance were discussed at the meeting, among them the question of local and national advertising. It was the general consensus that community advertising, as carried on by the Buffalo Florists' Club, the Allied Florists' Association of Illinois and the Detroit Florists' Club, was the most effective. W. A. Adams, of Buffalo, stated that this type of advertising had placed Valentine's day and Mothers' day among the biggest flower days of the year.

The floricultural work at Cornell University was also taken up for discussion. Prof. Arno H. Nehrling reported that the plan for remodeling the present dairy building for floricultural work had been abandoned. According to the new plans for development of the college of agriculture, which have been worked out by the state architect, the department of floriculture is to be housed in the wing of the new Plant Industry building. This building will be in close proximity to the present greenhouses and this general scheme, which has been approved by the governor of the state, will give the department an opportunity to develop and correlate its work.

Speakers at Dinner.

At the close of the meeting the Syracuse Florists' Association, headed by W. F. Bultmann, president of the association, took the visiting delegates in automobiles to the Anglers' Club, located on the shore of Oneida lake. The party arrived at the club house at sunset and from those who had not had the privilege of visiting this beautiful lake one heard many exclamations of wonder and delight.

At 7 p. m. a fine dinner was served. After dinner President Bultmann introduced Professor David Lumsden, superintendent of floral displays at the New York state fair, as toastmaster for the evening. The speakers included F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown; Prof. Arno H. Nehrling, of Cornell University; W. A.

HENDRICKSON ENTERTAINS.

Last week the New York Florists' Club held "Long island night," when the exhibits were from growers on that island and a special effort was made to induce attendance of members of the trade from that section. To accomplish so successful a result as the meeting brought forth required much hard work, and this was performed by a small group appointed for that purpose by President I. S. Hendrickson. Not only did Mr. Hendrickson aid them in this work, being a Long islander himself, by sending a large exhibit from the firm of John Lewis Childs, Inc., but he entertained the members the week before the meeting at Flowerfield. On that occasion there were present A. L. Miller, Richard Hughes, Anton Schultheis, Jr., Henry Weston, Marius Matheron, Secretary Young, John Miesem, Clarence Ankers, W. A. Rodman, Peter Hoebel, Arthur Weston and William Young. The party was escorted by Mr. Hendrickson over the big 800-acre flower farm, spending some time among the fifteen acres of dahlias and a greater acreage of cannas. Here a photograph was taken of the party, shown on this page. The gladiolus and other bulb and perennial plantings were also inspected. The party was entertained at a delightful lunch under the trees near the Hendrickson residence and before departing passed a hearty vote of thanks to their host and his wife for their cordial hospitality.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

TIME to get ready for frost. We may expect a freeze any time now. Don't get caught.

THE home-coming of the boys who died in France is creating a call for many funeral flowers.

THE florists' business is influenced to a large extent by the weather. A heavy frost would be unwelcome to some, but it would start most of us stepping lively.

MOST businesses, like most individuals, spend as they make. But the way to continuous success lies through accumulation. The business house which does not lay away a part of its earnings will, sooner or later, encounter the proverbial rainy day.

IT is an old saying that half the world is squirrels and half the world is nuts. We hope florists have, like the squirrels, laid by, in the recent summer of the trade's prosperity, a sufficient store of resources to carry them through a possible hard winter.

HORTICULTURAL advertising is among the most difficult of the many varieties. Those engaged in it, and some who aren't, will find John Watson's discussion of it from the nurserymen's angle, on page 118 of this issue, extraordinarily able and full of important suggestions.

WHILE we are making plans for a national campaign next year to advertise flowers of all parts of the United States at an expenditure of $100,000, it is proposed to spend a like amount to advertise apples from one section of the country only. Definite plans to raise and spend within the next twelve months not less than $100,000 in a national advertising campaign to promote the sale of Pacific northwest apples were laid at a recent meeting held in Seattle of representatives of all the larger apple producing and distributing organizations of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. Under the plan approved, the growers and shippers will be asked to contribute on a basis of 1 cent a box to the advertising fund. Growers' and distributors' organizations and county farm bureaus will be largely depended upon to conduct the money raising campaign, thereby eliminating the expense of maintaining field organizations for that purpose.

IT is worth saying again: "What the trade needs more than increased production is improved quality of output."

COLLECTIONS are slow only for those who do not have adequate system. Those who go at it in the right way are getting their money with satisfactory promptness.

THE safest expansion in business is slow expansion. That requires preparation. If you are counting on rising with the next business boom, begin planning now.

ALL florists who do spring bedding should do fall planting. The man who is fixed for it, and who makes the necessary selling effort, can move a lot of bulbs, shrubs and hardy perennials in the next six weeks.

THE Federal Horticultural Board has refused to grant further permits for importations of new varieties from one European concern, for the reason that, it is alleged, articles were shipped other than those for which permits were issued.

FIVE double-page advertisements again in this issue! Dealers in all lines of trade commodities are learning that a big ad in The Review goes farther and costs less than a circular, not to mention any other medium. Also, The Review works at high speed. Copy received as late as Monday is printed and in the mails Thursday.

THE trade has not bought the usual quantities of florists' supplies this year, for autumn stocks. But it is impossible to sell flowers without the accustomed accessories. The result will be a continuous flow of mail orders all through the season. Practically everything a florist uses is offered each week in The Review, a many times larger line than any salesman carries.

CHEROKEE ROSES WANTED.

We have been trying to locate cream and yellow Cherokee roses. We have applied to most of the rose growers on the Pacific coast, who have not been able to find the plants. Is there any grower in the east who has them?

H. E. C.—Cal.

FALL PLANTING IS WISEST.

Many buyers, especially florists, are in a quandary as to when is the best time to plant hardy plants. And in this respect the question arises as to whether fall is the proper time to plant shrubs, perennials, etc. In answer to this question the writer can say that from experience he has learned that fall planting in ordinary climates is advisable. The month of October is the best time to plant. This will give the plants ample time to become established before cold, freezing weather sets in, and they will be all ready to start growing in the spring, with best results.

And another advantage is that the average planter has more time in the fall, for when the spring season opens there are many things of importance that loom up, such as planting seed, lining out young stock, the Easter rush, etc., all of which take time. Of course, spring is also a good time to plant and most of the planting is done in the spring, but as a general rule plants, trees and shrubs start root action early and, when disturbed, do not give the best results the first year. Fall planting is highly preferable wherever the climatic conditions afford the opportunity.

T. J. M.

WATCH YOUR STEP.

Subscribers to magazines and newspapers should know that there is a perennial outcropping of fake solicitors. These persons perhaps once made an honest living selling magazines, but temptation was too great; they now go from house to house or store to store, soliciting subscriptions for publications, whether they represent them or not. Most of these fakers have some sort of printed receipt blank, but they rarely turn in to the publisher any of the money they get. One of the large subscription agencies estimates that the extent of these swindles throughout America is from $20,000 to $30,000 per year, this representing money that is collected on some pretext or other by unauthorized persons who never turn it in to the publishers.

Florists should know that it is not necessary to pay money to strangers. Don't do it for any other publication and certainly not for the account of The Review. The Review employs no subscription solicitors. Its correspondents in the various cities are all well known members of the trade. If you never saw a person before, don't pay money. Mail a check.

WHEN WILL GOOD TIMES COME?

The man who can predict the date when prosperity will again be general is not among us. But it is possible to define the conditions under which good times will be restored. Then, by charting the necessary steps, one can state in terms of these when good times will come back. Here is the answer to the query, according to a recent country-wide questionnaire sent to business men of all kinds:

1. When farm, ranch and mineral products can again be sold for at least the cost of production, a large part of several of last year's entire national output of raw products being still held in warehouses for higher prices or being now in process of being sold at a serious loss.
2. When railroads can be operated on freight rates low enough to permit shippers to sell their merchandise at a profit.
3. When labor again, generally speaking, will do a maximum day's work in full coöperation with employers on a readjusted wage.
4. When readjusted retail commodity prices permit wage-earners to live self-respectingly upon such readjusted wages. The retailer seems to be the retarding influence.
5. When the post-war unemployed class find and settle down into permanent usefulness.

The last two weeks have developed signs of the first; there are slight changes toward the second; something of the third is evident; the fourth has taken place in this industry and some others; the fifth can only be ultimately achieved. It would seem good times are on the way. The two vital things needed—more money in action and increased employment—are noted in a number of sections. There is a variation according to locality and line of business. Reports from florists are among the best.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

F. R., Ind.—The blooms were faded on receipt, but the plant seems to be Verbena venosa.

W. A. C., Pa.—Flowers were crushed and completely dried up on arrival. Identification was impossible. Send fresh specimens, carefully packed, affixing special delivery stamp.

OBITUARY

Samuel Powell.

Samuel Powell, 63 years of age, of One Hundred Sixth street, Richmond Hill, Brooklyn, N. Y., died September 11 at the Broad Street hospital, following an operation for ulcer.

For the last three years Mr. Powell had conducted a shop at Brooklyn. Before that time he was a resident of Hempstead, N. Y., where he also had conducted a retail store.

Funeral services were held at the home September 13. The deceased is survived by his wife, Cornelia; two children, Arthur Powell and Mrs. Beatrice Farquhar, of Bellerose, L. I.; and two brothers, William S. Powell, of Hempstead, and George Powell, of Eastport, N. Y.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Conditions in this market seem to be about the same. Plenty of asters and gladioli are being received and the demand for asters is limited, due to the fact that every local gardener is offering asters. Gladioli, however, are moving out fairly, but the average price is out of the question. During the last week dahlias have been received in large quantities and are being sold for almost nothing. Some fine varieties are seen. Carnations are making their appearance daily and are of an exceptionally good quality. The demand almost equals the supply. Yellow and white chrysanthemums are now in the market and are moving out daily at fair prices. The roses being received at present are of an exceptionally good quality; however, there are more of the shorter-stemmed varieties. This, also, is the case with American Beauty and the demand seems to be rather limited. The demand for lilies continues to exceed the supply and each day finds the market cleaned up of this flower. Some good valley has also been on the market during the last week and is moving out slowly.

Various Notes.

C. Warren Kinder, of Charleroi, Pa., has taken over his father's business in that city. Mr. Kinder, Sr., was fatally wounded in a battle with berry pickers on his estate. The trade's best wishes are with his successor. The store has been entirely remodeled and is much more attractive than it was before.

Samuel Gidas, of the Rosery Flower Shop, Forbes street, Oakland, has just returned from his vacation in the Adirondacks. Mr. Gidas has been away for the last month.

John Harris, of Harris Bros., is passing cigars to his friends in honor of a new baby girl.

C. G. Farrell, Hazelwood, passed cigars to his friends several weeks ago in honor of a baby boy.

Miss Emma B. Maxwell, of Wilkinsburg, returned last week from a restful vacation of four weeks at the lakes.

The windows of the McClements Co., on Wood street, have been in the limelight during the summer months, showing some new and pleasing combinations of fruits and flowers. This store is noted for its novelties.

Reports from many of the local florists seem to indicate that business is again becoming a little better. Some florists have reported large weddings, while others are looking after the orders for some large funerals. A number of bodies of soldiers who met their death in France are being returned to this city and it is certain that these funerals have stimulated business.

T. P. Langhans, secretary of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., and wife are motoring to Atlantic City.

The supply departments of the wholesale houses are again getting their fall rushes. In some instances it is necessary to work a little overtime to get out orders to customers who desire prompt shipments.

The E. A. Williams Co., of Penn avenue, reports a busy week. H. J. H.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

The Charles N. Cotter Co., incorporated to deal in all floricultural products and supplies, will open a wholesale cut flower store here September 26. The officers of the company are: President, Charles N. Cotter; vice-president, Stanley G. Barnes, of Binghamton; secretary and treasurer, Ethel Schurman. The board of directors consists of the officers and Sherm Offerle, of Warren, Pa., and Helen M. Schluraff, of Erie, Pa.

"The increase in retailers' demands for wholesale service," says President Cotter, "makes the move imperative in order to preserve the convenience of this inland market." The organization should prove an efficient one, as all interested are experienced. Mr. Cotter was with the Lake View Rose Gardens for thirteen years, during the last seven years acting as manager. Mr. Barnes, Mr. Offerle and Mrs. Schluraff are progressive retailers and Miss Schurman is well known in the trade in western New York, having had charge of the shipping department at the Lake View Rose Gardens for the last four years.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There has been a distinct improvement in business since last week's report was typed. It is the seasonal change, summer passing into autumn. As yet the improvement has not been pronounced, there having been no frost and only a few cool days, but the increase in the number of orders has been satisfactory and most of the wholesale houses report sales for the first three weeks of September as a little ahead of last year. There still is so much stock in the market that prices average too low, but there has been some improvement in this respect and there is general confidence that prices will advance to a profitable level as soon as the outdoor stock is out of the way. There continue to be large quantities of asters, many of them none too good, a considerable number of gladioli, most of them of indifferent quality, and considerable quantities of other outdoor flowers, including almost everything that blooms late in the season. Only the best of these are really in demand, but all really good flowers are bringing a little better prices than they did a week ago.

The best business still is done with roses. Each day brings its slight increase in length of stem and size of flower. With improving quality come better prices and there is less need for forcing sale by concessions to quantity buyers. Growers complain that they are not yet getting what they should for their stock, but the demand increases day by day and larger quantities than ever before are being moved.

Carnations become more plentiful day by day and the quality also is improving. Chrysanthemums have become an item of daily supply, but it still is too early for strong demand for them. Both white and yellow, locally grown, are seen in small quantity, with California mums seen here and there.

A good run of wedding work makes a steady demand for valley and lilies, but of the latter the supply is not large or steady. A few sweet peas are seen and good stock sells well.

Dahlias are arriving from numerous sources, but the local demand is not yet strong enough to create much of a market for them. Large quantities of celosia are seen and it is being used extensively for basket work and for window decoration. Some good cosmos is offered.

Final Report on Pageant.

At a meeting of the directors of the Allied Florists' Association, September 14, the final report of William A. Hansen, secretary of the Pageant of Progress committee, was read. When all expenses had been met, it was found that a deficit of $185.30 remained. So the Allied Florists' Association contribution, originally set at $1,200, was increased by that amount so as to clean the slate. The report of Mr. Hansen gives credit to all who helped make the affair a success, and reflects the great amount of work he performed himself to that end. His report, approved by the directors, reads as follows:

"Chicago's Pageant of Progress, July 30 to August 14, held on the Municipal Pier, has been heralded the world over for its success. Within the two great arms of the pageant were thousands of features, each equipped with an inexhaustible supply of education to the minds of the spectators. These spectators came in millions and learned the lessons set forth by the exhibitors and the lessons were of great consequence. The florists' trade offered an education, as did others. 'Say It with Flowers' was the title of our lesson-book, the leaves of which are being opened daily in the minds of the masses that visited the flower show, which you gave me the honor to operate in behalf of the trade. In this lesson-book we taught the poor and the rich alike to notice flowers, to use them, give them, wear them, buy them and love them.

"Daily the flower show took on a new aspect. This was done for several reasons: (1) It enabled the committee to put on contests. (2) It made an impression on the thousands of exhibitors and their employees who passed often each day. (3) It kept the stock in this show fresh, whereas otherwise it would have been difficult or impossible to get sufficient stock to make a good showing. (4) It made possible newspaper publicity otherwise not available.

"Having in charge both the flower show, which was conducted under the name of the Allied Florists' Association of Illinois, and the model flower store, which was conducted under the name of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, I will not venture to, and could not if I would, make separate accounts of the operations of these two exhibits, nor can I give credit to August Lange, who was given charge of decorating the Allied Florists' Association booth, and Mrs. Lillian Stuart, manager of Bohannon Floral Co., who arranged the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association booth, without mentioning both in the same breath. Likewise in giving credit where credit is due, I must mention the A. L. Randall Co., which loaned us, at great expense to themselves, an elegant icebox, wicker furniture, five beautiful fountains, a marble-top table, lamps and a most practical workbench of their own manufacture. able. Theirs was the tireless task of helping me personally and frequently advising me when called upon. Their acquaintance with the likes and dislikes of the Allied Florists' Association made them well able to give valuable advice.

"Now I do not know whom to mention next. Poehlmann Bros. Co. gave much plant stock and loaned without charge large palms. The Wallace Floral Co. gave a large lot of ferns and loaned without charge some specimen plants. Peter Pearson should be mentioned repeatedly. He placed on exhibition at great cost to himself a lot of specimen cyclamen plants, which educated many. He offered valuable advice and with his daughter worked day and night when we gave flowers to visitors. The trade papers, the Florists' Review, American Florist, Florists' Exchange and the F. T. D. News, did their part to make the affair successful. Joseph Kohout, Otto Amling and August Poehlmann did more than just look over the job and criticise. They talked over the advisability of changes and offered ideas that only men of their vast experience are inspired with. Let me also mention the assistance of H. Dieu Schiller and of the Schiller staff in contributing to the progress of the show. Other florists and those associated with the trade gave generously of their time and materials. The contributors to the fund that made possible the flower show of the Pageant of Progress are below listed:

Allied Florists' Assn.,	John Kruchten Co.,
Chicago Flower Growers' Assn.,	Ziska & Son,
Joseph Foerster Co.,	Frank Ayres,
J. A. Budlong Co.,	Percy Jones, Inc.,
Kennicott Bros. Co.,	Bassett & Washburn,
American Bulb Co.,	Raedlein Basket Co.,

E. C. Amling Co.,	Lord & Burnham Co.,
A. T. Pyfer & Co.,	American Greenhouse Mfg. Co.,
Erne & Co.,	W. W. Barnard Co.,
L. A. Tonner,	Frank Oechslin.

"It should be remembered that florists exhibiting in our section paid toward the general flower show fund when buying their space. These are:

Adler-Jones Co.,	Schiller the Florist,
A. L. Randall Co.,	J. Oliver Johnson,
H. Wittbold & Son,	Vaughan's Seed Store.

"Contributors to the F. T. D. fund, which, together with $500 received from the association proper, paid for the space of the F. T. D. exhibit, were as follows:

Wm. J. Smyth,	Lewis & Rocca,
Everette R. Peacock Co.,	Edward Clody,
A. Lange,	George Wienhoeber,
Geo. Wittbold Co.,	W. W. Adams,
Schiller the Florist,	H. Wittbold & Son,
Swanson the Florist,	W. Palmer,
Johnson & Chronis,	John Weiland,
A. H. Schneider,	E. Wienhoeber.
Bohannon Floral Co.,

"Flower and plant stock was given by:

Clody's Flower Shop,	Kennicott Bros. Co. and growers,
P. Bonvallet & Co.,	Members of Chicago
A. F. Amling Co.,	Flower Growers' Assn.
Wendland & Keimel Co.,	Joseph Foerster Co. and growers,

J. A. Budlong Co. and growers,	Erne & Co. and growers,
Poehlmann Bros. Co.,	John Kruchten Co.
Zech & Mann,
Bassett & Washburn,
A. T. Pyfer & Co.,

"The Raedlein Basket Co. loaned several pieces of its manufacture. The American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. loaned framed pictures of houses the firm had built. Frank S. Ayres loaned a little log house, around which was placed a garden. Irving Stein loaned little trees to assist in completing the garden. Peter Pearson gave fifty or more little plants for this garden. The delivery facilities of the E. C. Amling Co. and Joseph Foerster Co. were of frequent service.

tioned, and here I may say that Paul Klingsporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, and C. J. Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., were of great service to me in selecting judges and in advising in other ways. Eric Johnson, manager of the cut flower department of the A. L. of credit for their coöperation. Needless to say, George Asmus, of Schiller the Florist, chairman of the committee, and W. J. Smyth, treasurer, gave this project much time and the benefit of their experience.

Wienhoeber on Michigan Avenue.

George V. Wienhoeber has closed a deal which will give Michigan avenue a new flower store and Chicago one of the most distinctive establishments of the kind in America.

Just south of the Peoples Trust & Savings Bank building there is at present a private alley, almost unused, running west 110 feet to the alley between Wabash and Michigan. Mr. Wienhoeber has secured a lease of this vacant space for a term of years and will at once erect thereon a building 10x110, basement and a high-ceilinged store. The plans are being drawn by Jarvis Hunt, an architect of international reputation, and something quite out of the ordinary will result. The high front, except for the trim of white marble, will be of curved plate glass and the window will occupy the entire frontage, entrance being had through the vestibule of the bank building next door. The salesroom will occupy the front fifty feet and the intention is to make it as rich and artistic as any of the fine specialty shops for which Michigan avenue is famous. Back of the salesroom there will be a workroom 10x60, with egress on the alley in the rear, where there is space for automobiles. The basement, 10x110, will contain an ice machine and storage rooms. It is the intention to build rapidly, though well, and to have the new store ready for occupancy before Christmas.

Mr. Wienhoeber will continue the present L-shaped store at Wabash avenue and Monroe street.

Various Notes.

Mrs. C. A. Samuelson joined her husband on their Idaho ranch after the spring rush in the flower store was over, expecting they would return together in September, but exigencies of the harvest have caused Mr. Samuelson to postpone his autumn visit at least until November and Mrs. Samuelson will stay with him in the west. Life in the open is luxury to them, after their years of activity on Michigan avenue.

C. J. Michelsen says more tickets than last year are being written by the E. C. Amling Co., and that sales so far in September are slightly ahead of a year ago, although the average size of the sales has been smaller. In the quantity of stock being moved Mr. Michelsen sees evidence that the demand for flowers continues to increase in spite of unemployment, lower wages, reduced profits and all other depressing influences.

If anyone asks you who has the largest collection of peonies in America you can say that it probably is Congressman James R. Mann, who has between 1,200 and 1,500 varieties in his garden on Seventy-third street. Mr. Mann at any time would rather talk peonies than politics. He is importing new varieties this season, under permit, from France, Holland and England.

Johnson & Jensen, opposite the Bryn Mawr station of the Illinois Central, have been busy recently redecorating and brightening up their store, which now is spotlessly white. Trade has been rather quiet, as in their neighborhood nearly everyone has garden flowers in summer, but they look forward to a good autumn, as each season is a little heavier than the one before.

W. H. Robertson, for some time assistant to William Abrahamson in the store fixtures department of the A. L. Randall Co., has resigned and gone into the business for himself, with headquarters at room 1101, 189 West Madison street. He will trade as the Paramount Equipment Co.

Charles Johnson, managing director of Johnson & Chronis and the Alpha Floral Co., has been under the weather. He spent a day in bed last week, something he has not done before in years.

Luke Collins, of the Parkside Greenhouses, has had a busy summer. Spring trade held up longer than usual and empty benches led him to undertake a lot of rebuilding. He has the houses now in good shape, though he has not had time yet to paint, but has not as much stock as he would like. He always can sell more pot plants than he can grow.

September 20 was an anniversary for the Joseph Foerster Co. On that day in 1909 Mr. Foerster and his then partner, William P. Kyle, opened their store for its first day's business.

Hoosier Beauty has practically disappeared from this market. Bassett & Washburn, for whom the rose did particularly well, have at last discarded it in favor of Crusader, which has gained steadily in popularity.

Henry Wittbold & Son are well pleased with the way autumn business is opening at their Adams street store. They have a new neighbor on the west, a Fannie May Candy Shop, and on the east they have Fannie Butcher's book store, both catering to the class of people who appreciate good flowers. As Mrs. George Wittbold, a most efficient young person, takes most of the orders, it might be in line to call this Fannie's Flower Shop—only her name is June.

The A. L. Randall Co., which is steadily developing its business in the east, has made arrangements to carry a large stock of florists' supplies in New York city. In conjunction with the Randall subsidiary, the Southfield Flower & Foliage Co., a floor of 9,000 square feet has just been leased at 92 Bleeker street, about 100 feet from Broadway. There will be room for the Southfield artificial flower factory, for a handsome sample room and for a large stock from which to fill eastern orders.

John Poehlmann expects the season of 1921-22 to make a new high record for this market and for the trade in general within the Chicago shipping radius. He bases his expectation on the excellent business done during the time of general business depression and on the belief that recovery in other lines will be promptly reflected in a good upturn in the flower business.

Ernest Anderson, right-hand man for C. L. Washburn, returned to work September 19, after a two weeks' auto outing among the lakes of northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin. He was just in time to take a hand in the heaviest day's shipping Bassett & Washburn have had since last spring.

Our former fellow townsman and florist, William E. Lynch, is here from Hatfield, Mass., where for several years he has been engaged in tobacco growing. Mr. Lynch is the guest of A. L. Vaughan at his pleasant home in River Forest.

Last Friday and Saturday, September 16 and 17, the Boston Store displayed on its eleventh floor "the only Chicago exhibit of the famous Rugowski Mammoth Prize-Winning Asters," according to its newspaper advertisements, not strictly a true statement in view of Mr. Rugowski's display at the Florists' Club meeting the week before. The store's customers were permitted to place orders for seeds, for delivery April 1, 1922, at 50 cents per packet of 125 seeds.

The capital stock of the Premier Rose Gardens, Maywood, will be increased from $200,000 to $250,000. Paul Weiss has made application to the secretary of state for the change.

Cold weather will cause Hans Jepson less worry this coming winter, for he has installed another, a larger, boiler at the Maywood range. By damming up the neighboring creek and installing a 10-horsepower pump, he has secured a constant and ample water supply.

T. E. Waters celebrated his forty-sixth birthday anniversary September 20. He started in the flower business in 1887, at Beverly, Mass., when he was only 12 years old, so his experience covers thirty-four years.

This week sees completion of the changes and repairs which have been in the process of making at the north side store of Schiller the Florist for the last three weeks. The plans for altering the main building were not fully effected when the big conservatory was built a year ago. A granite floor, a Visitors.

I. Inoue, manager of the United Flower & Supply Co., of San Francisco, arrived here last week with the intention of remaining six weeks to three months, or during the movement of the coast chrysanthemum crop. Mr. Inoue's company in other seasons has sent large quantities of mums to Chicago without a direct representative here, selling both to wholesalers and to retailers. The bulk of the business has been done early and late, before and after our local mums were in season. Mr. Inoue is looking over the ground to see in what way the business may best be increased.

Hans Tobler, who, after many years as a private gardener, has gone into the florists' business at Three Rivers, Mich., spent September 17 in the market. He expects to be a steady buyer here, as even at this early date he finds sale for more stock than he is able to produce.

F. C. Goodman, of Kemble & Goodman, Mason City, Ia., has been here for several days. His firm, which has retailed from the greenhouses, is preparing to open a downtown store and Mr. Goodman has devoted much care to acquainting himself with the most up-to-date equipment and to getting estimates from the manufacturers.

L. R. Bohannon, now "at your service" in Kansas City, was here for several days last week. He brought along a display of the celosias he features in his Kansas City store and has made resplendent the window of the Bohannon Floral Co.

Rolf Zetlitz, of Lima, O., was a visitor last week. He is preparing to open a new retail store at Middletown, O., and placed an order for a complete out-

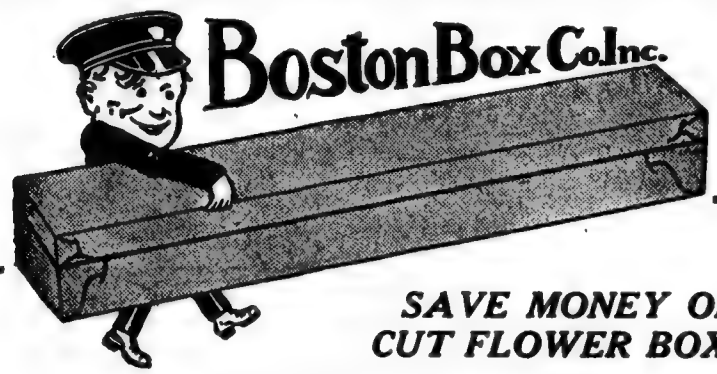
A. H. McDonald, manager of the florists' department of the Gimble store in Milwaukee, spent September 19 in this market, visiting wholesalers and some of his retail friends. Mr. McDonald's visits always are welcome here because of the advice he is able to give on coöperative trade advertising. It is understood that all the advertising copy used in the Milwaukee campaign has come from Mr. McDonald's pen and it is recognized that the Milwaukee plan is the one the trade is following with greatest success.



ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

We have been having another spell of warm weather, but the nights and mornings are cool. Rain was plentiful Saturday, September 17, and it was the first good rain for several weeks. The schools and colleges of the city are open and, as the season advances, more people are returning from their summer homes and settling down for the fall and winter season. Business throughout the city has been good during the last week. A number of weddings and a larger amount of funeral work than usual have made a big difference in business. The fall openings have created a big demand for practically all kinds of flowers, palms and ferns. Some stores practically outdid themselves by their decorations.

The market is filled with asters, which throughout this particularly dry season have kept up in quality, which is remarkable. Good stock is seen at prices ranging from $1 to $3 per hundred, the majority being at the lower figure. Gladioli are not reaching us in heavy supply, but the quality for the late varieties is good. There is a good demand for them. Dahlias are reaching us, but the supply appears to be limited. It seems that the supply will be heavier within a week or two. Roses are reaching us in larger quantities, even though most growers are off cut. Ophelia is in excellent color, as also is Madame Butterfly. Both varieties sell extremely well. Premier, Columbia and Ward are in fair supply, with a good demand for each. American Beauty, however, does not create much of a demand.

Valley is plentiful now and sells from $8 to $10 per hundred. Orchids are in better demand and good prices are obtainable. New-crop carnations are being received daily, and are of good size for the early season. Good hydrangea blooms are seen. Auratum lilies are plentiful and are in good demand. Other outdoor stock includes buddleias, artichokes, gaillardias, coreopsis, gypsophila, candytuft, mignonette and zinnias. Cosmos is reaching us in fair supply and is good this season. A big demand for Boston and Whitmanii ferns has been noticed the last week. Little is seen in potted plants now, except a few begonias, celosias and gloxinias.

Various Notes.

Felix Alberts, of the Alberts Flower Shop, says that he will have a large stock of poinsettias and peppers for Christmas. They have made a wonderful growth so far and the present outlook is encouraging. He is also growing a large quantity of primroses, which will be in good bloom for the holidays.

Most of the local carnation growers have their houses replanted with field-

George T. Boucher's new range of greenhouses is practically all planted with chrysanthemums, which are doing exceptionally well. They consist of most of the best commercial varieties. The Market.

A reaction has set in for the retailers and there has been a marked improvement in the trade. Last week was one of the busiest weeks we have enjoyed for some time. The cooler weather has brought on the finest stock, compared with the junk that has been on the market. This was fortunate, too, for Omaha had a real run of weddings and funerals last week and, with the "Ak Sar Ben" now going on and with many out-of-town visitors here, for whom the merchants are decorating and getting busy, it looks like another good week. Then, the Coronation ball always brings a nice day's business. Last week found some retailers rushed to death one day and slack the next, so practically every florist got his share of the business. LINDLEY FLORIST BOX CO., QUALITY BOX MAKERS Marion, Ind.

was true of the weddings, as well as of funeral work.

Gladioli have been getting smaller and poorer for the last two weeks and now the only gladioli on the market are those shipped in. These are bringing $3 per dozen for the best. They are moving nicely, but their days are numbered, as it is only a matter of days before mums will push gladioli off the market. A few of the local stores are shipping in some California mums, mainly Chrysolora, October Frost and Oconda, which retail at from $5 to $8 per dozen. The cooler weather has caused them to move a little better and one large store opening saved the day on some of them. Asters are not quite so good as they have been. The stems are getting a little weaker and the heads a little smaller. Wholesalers are charging $3 per hundred for the choice stock. Carnations are increasing each day and quality is getting better. The better stock is selling for $3 per hundred, while some of the retailers are charging $1 to $1.50 per dozen.

Some of the growers have been cutting roses heavily during September and at present the main crop seems to be Columbia. The stock is exceptionally good for this time of the year. Some wonderful Premier are coming in each day. The majority of the retailers are giving Premier first preference. Short stock is wholesaling at $3 per hundred, with $12 to $15 per hundred for the best, long stock.

Various Notes.

At the Nebraska state fair Lewis Henderson, of Omaha, again carried away the majority of first premiums. The Nebraska State Horticultural Society awarded him two diplomas on his exhibition—one on his collection of greenhouse plants and one on his collection of cut flowers. He won first prizes on a general collection of plants, on five specimens of palms, eight decorative plants, a group of ferns, a bridal bouquet, a spray, a corsage, a basket of cut flowers, gladioli, a design and a general collection of cut flowers. He won three second prizes on collections of foliage plants, blooming plants and fifty tea roses. Mr. Henderson is much pleased with the results he obtained at the fair this year. However, it seems a shame that Nebraska, as an agricultural and horticultural state, does not offer more and better premiums. This fault alone has helped to hold down the number of competitors at the state fair.

Among those calling on the trade last week were Mr. Rosenfield, of Wertheimer Bros., New York; Mr. Edgar, of the S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; W. M. Bomberger, of the Ferndale Nurseries, Harlan, Ia.; N. A. Nielsen, of Carroll, Ia., and Mr. Uhlschmidt, of the New York Mercantile Co., and formerly with A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

The Market.

There is a slight improvement in the market, for which the weather is not responsible, an improvement which would be more apparent were it not for the accumulation of flowers. The oversupply of asters that has been so noticeable throughout September is slowly disappearing. The local asters can now only be seen in the lower grades; the best are over. Fine asters are still coming from New York state. Gladioli are less plentiful. Their place is filled by the dahlias. The later varieties are now in excellent form. In fact, the dahlias from the specialists are really wonderful. The buyers want fine dahlias and do not care for old-fashioned sorts. The price is lower than last year, $4 to $6 as against $6 to $8 one year ago. Packing at the farm on order is becoming general, to save labor and to eliminate waste. While flowers grown indoors still occupy the rear seats, even among them there is something doing. Beauties are to be had on advance orders; so, also, a few orchids. There is considerable activity in valley. Roses are in fair demand. There are a few nice Easter lilies.

Business is late in starting, although there have been a few teas. The weather is quite warm.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

The Dahlia Situation.

The dahlia growers do not understand why their stock does not bring good prices when it is so fine. With the object of obtaining information on this subject, this query was put to George Aeugle, manager of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. Here is Mr. Aeugle's reply:

"I think that the real trouble has been too warm weather. The buyers are afraid to risk dahlias in warm weather. When it is hot they won't keep. A box of dahlias comes in that is worth $4. We try to sell them. A buyer is finally induced to take them for $2. The next day he complains. Now we are doing better with them. I think you can safely put it down that the dahlia season seldom begins in earnest before September 15."

Those Windows.

The show windows of the Henry F. Michell Co. are an inspiration to those who watch them. There are four now, all bright, clean and attractive. Talking of this the other day, Henry F. Michell claimed that they were the finest windows of their kind in the United States. They are certainly a never-ending source of interest to the people. Each window is complete in itself. They are interesting in the daytime; at night they are really beautiful. Mr. Michell's theory is that if you want to make money you must spend money. Philip Freud has developed show window decoration into an art. He understands his art thoroughly. His aim is to please, to teach and to create the desire for what he has to offer. With this object in view, he will spend large sums of money on his windows, but he will spend it wisely. A fine painting, an electric fountain, a perfectly dressed doll are not expensive provided they are effective. Mr. Freud says that the results fully justify this outlay.

A New Commission House.

The street was startled by the news that a new commission house is to be opened at No. 7 Mole street, between the Joseph Heacock Co., which is at No. 9, and Charles E. Meehan, who is at No. 5. Inquiry developed the fact that several large growers of cut flowers had decided to form a company to sell their product, that they would trade under the name of the Philadelphia Growers' Cut Flower Co., that they hoped to be joined by other growers in their enterprise and that they had engaged William C. Lynch to manage the company.

Various Notes.

J. D. Eisele and Mrs. Eisele returned from California September 17.

Robert Craig will sail for Porto Rico September 24 or October 1.

Alfred M. Campbell has spent the summer rebuilding one of Edward A. Stroud's Overbrook houses at the Strafford Flower Farms. The house required some new material. When complete, it will be 25x350 feet.

Edward Reid has put a new Dodge car on the street.

William C. Lynch has resigned his position with E. R. Martin. Mr. Lynch will be manager for the new Philadelphia Growers' Cut Flower Co.

The announcement made in this column recently that Sydney H. Bayersdorfer is receiving congratulations prompts the question, "What for?" Mr. Bayersdorfer is engaged to be married.

C. U. Liggit says that the demand for rose plants from the benches has greatly stimulated replanting, because it reduces the cost of planting new varieties. It is unlikely that this condition will continue when California replaces Holland as a source of supply.

Frederick Newman is growing Freesia Purity at the St. Leonards farms.

Franklin Ely has returned from his vacation.

William A. Leonard has returned to Lansdowne.

J. Otto Thilow, secretary of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., is confident that California will supply our needs in garden rose bushes.

Joseph Goetter says that while carnations are coming on nicely, the plants were not so large as those of last season when benched.

Harry Bayersdorfer and Sydney H. Bayersdorfer have come home from Atlantic City.

Charles E. Meehan has added Kaiserin to the list of the varieties of roses at Holland, Pa. Hadley does best with him. Phil.

The Market.

There is an improved tone in the market this week. Summer is waning, vacationists are coming home, nights are growing cooler, outdoor flowers are gradually passing and we need but a good rain storm or a light frost to cause a decided boom in prices for indoor flowers. Already there is a noticeable improvement in retail trade and sales are fully as good as they were a year ago. Factories are gradually getting back to normal production, money rates are easier and the general outlook for fall trade is encouraging.

Gladioli, which have for many weeks glutted the markets, are rapidly passing. Supplies are much reduced and spikes are smaller. Prices show an improvement over a week ago. There are still too many asters, especially of the inferior type, and they also are nearing the end of their tether. Good flowers bring $2 to $3 per hundred, others $3 to $4 per thousand. The present month will see the passing of most of the aster crop. Other outdoor flowers, like cosmos, larkspur, zinnias, hunnemannias, everlastings, bachelor's buttons, etc., are a slow sale. Dahlias are good and sell in a moderate way. Clematis paniculata is offered, but is only good when freshly cut. For wedding decorations it proves popular.

Chrysanthemums are mainly yellow. They sell well. Carnations continue short-stemmed and small and buyers are not eager for them. Their time is coming soon, however. Roses have stiffened a little, and, thanks to the cooler nights, are of improved quality. Columbia remains the leader. There are a few longiflorum lilies, for which $20 to $25 is asked. Buyers are scarce. A few colored speciosums also come in. A few Cattleya labiata have appeared. There are also some hybrids, as well as a few oncidiums, vandas and cypripediums.

Great Tropical Fern Show.

Although the great show of tropical ferns, given under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, does not open until September 22, some of the largest exhibitors commenced to prepare their displays several days in advance of that date. Albert C. Burrage, the president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, has engaged the entire lecture hall, which will be transformed at great expense into a fern garden with large, bold rockeries and other attractive and unusual features. In addition to an extensive collection of tropical ferns and selaginellas, many rare and valuable orchids are also shown in this hall, which forms a complete exhibition in itself. W. A. Manda fills a large part of the main exhibition hall with a grand collection of ferns, cacti, bromeliaceæ, begonias, etc., artistically arranged in groupings with no pots visible at all.

In the small exhibition hall the F. R. Pierson Co. and the Julius Roehrs Co. occupy all available space. In the main hall the Brooklyn Botanical Gardens has a 500-foot group of ferns in great variety, many showing splendid culture. The foregoing five exhibitors occupy about two-thirds of all the available space. H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, has some fine novelties. Wollrath & Sons have the largest display of any of the local growers. Several thousand pamphlets containing an exhaustive article on tropical ferns, by Ralph C. Benedict, of the Brooklyn Botanical Gardens, will be distributed to the visitors. This exhibition is a unique one, and as it is to be followed by one for native ferns in June, 1922, the public interest in these beautiful decorative plants seems likely to be greatly stimulated.

Various Notes.

After looking over a number of leading nurseries in Massachusetts recently, one is forced to the conviction that Quarantine 37 is galvanizing all of the owners into activity in the propagating line. Great numbers of all the best conifers are being raised from seed or cuttings and immense numbers of azaleas and rhododendrons from seeds. Grafting of rhododendrons seems to be somewhat of a failure and the probability is that seedlings from well known hardy hybrids will be offered under various colors. There is an unusual number of specimen-sized evergreens at all the nurseries. At the Blue Hill Nurseries, South Braintree, there are especially fine specimens of many varieties, some of them quite unique.

Among those who are now sending in new-crop carnations of good quality are William Sim, Cliftondale; J. A. Nelson, Framingham; C. B. Johnson, Woburn, and S. J. Goddard, Framingham.

At the Dedham nurseries of the R. & J. Farquhar Co., the display of perennial phloxes is remarkably fine at present and attracts the attention of thousands of passers-by. The variety Elizabeth Campbell still leads all others in popularity.

Wax Brothers, at 44 Temple place, are making, as usual, an attractive window display of choice dahlias, for which they are booking many orders. Fall business with them is starting up nicely.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. has the contract to install an elaborate formal garden at the annual style and fashion show which opens in Mechanics building the first week in October.

The Medfield Farms & Greenhouse Co. had an attractive floral float, representing a wedding scene, in a great trade parade September 17. The float was one of the most telling features in the parade.

Peter Fisher has this season grown practically all his stock of standard carnations under glass. Only seedlings have been planted out in the field and these are now being housed.

So warm and pleasant has September been that society people are coming back to the city reluctantly. Not a few like the country so well that they are installing steam heat in their homes and plan to spend the winter there and motor to the city as occasion demands.

Cards received from William J. Collins, of the Carters' Tested Seeds Co., from Edinburgh, Scotland, show that he is having a pleasant vacation in the land of the heather and is making calls on many of the noted seed houses in Britain.

Wollrath & Sons, of Waltham, have a splendid bench of the lovely little blue South African violet, Saintpaulia ionantha, which proves popular at the high-class retail stores.

Florence Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhardt, of Newton, well known to many in the trade, was married September 10 to Albert Neil Sangerfield. The newly married couple will make their residence at Longfellow court, Cambridge. Members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will remember the former Miss Eisenhardt's skill as an athletic dancer and baseball player.

Robert Cameron's friends have noted of late that he walks with something of a swagger. The reason is found to be that he has just become a grandfather.

W. N. Craig lectured before the Garden Club of Peterborough, N. H., September 6.

Frank Edgar's new house, 30x200, is nearly completed. He has a grand lot of cyclamens again this season and splendid ferns, begonias and poinsettias.

Whether or not it is the stimulus of the great tropical fern show, all local growers of nephrolepis and other ferns report an extraordinarily good demand for their plants, and ferns are considered good property this season.

of the most telling features in the parade.

Peter Fisher has this season grown practically all his stock of standard carnations under glass. Only seedlings have been planted out in the field and these are now being housed.

So warm and pleasant has September been that society people are coming back to the city reluctantly. Not a few like the country so well that they are installing steam heat in their homes and plan to spend the winter there and motor to the city as occasion demands.

Cards received from William J. Collins, of the Carters' Tested Seeds Co., from Edinburgh, Scotland, show that he is having a pleasant vacation in the land of the heather and is making calls on many of the noted seed houses in Britain.

Wollrath & Sons, of Waltham, have a splendid bench of the lovely little blue South African violet, Saintpaulia ionantha, which proves popular at the high-class retail stores.

Florence Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhardt, of Newton, well known to many in the trade, was married September 10 to Albert Neil Sangerfield. The newly married couple will make their residence at Longfellow court, Cambridge. Members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will remember the former Miss Eisenhardt's skill as an athletic dancer and baseball player.

Robert Cameron's friends have noted of late that he walks with something of a swagger. The reason is found to be that he has just become a grandfather.

W. N. Craig lectured before the Garden Club of Peterborough, N. H., September 6.

Frank Edgar's new house, 30x200, is nearly completed. He has a grand lot of cyclamens again this season and splendid ferns, begonias and poinsettias.

Whether or not it is the stimulus of the great tropical fern show, all local growers of nephrolepis and other ferns report an extraordinarily good demand for their plants, and ferns are considered good property this season.

W. N. C.

Canton, O.—R. F. Baker is in business here and grows gladioli, asters, sweet peas, snapdragons, etc. He plans to build a greenhouse soon.

Springfield, Mass.—R. H. Messenger, who, with F. E. Barber, recently purchased property on Linden street, plans to erect a greenhouse 25x100 feet.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

R. S. Brown, of R. S. Brown & Son, Kansas City, Mo., was found at the bench, potting coleus. "Same old spot for fifty-three years," observed the veteran of eighty-four summers, who, with a merry twinkle in his eyes, harked back to the time when the sight from where he stood included immense herds of buffalo roaming through the valley, while as many as 10,000 Indians gathered upon the bluffs. "We are to be honored next summer with the convention of the S. A. F., of which I am proud to be a charter member, and I hope that our convention hall, which has a capacity of 15,000, will be filled." The business has practically been handed over to son Nathan. The greenhouses are upon land too valuable to warrant rebuilding and are kept running awaiting a real estate purchaser.

Samuel Murray's houses, at Kansas City, are not new, yet remarkable is the quality of stock produced, chiefly pot-grown. Colonel William Sharp, who is putting in the thirty-second season at this place, has two houses containing some 2,000 Begonia Melior, that are in superb shape, and when it is understood that every plant will be sold at the retail store, one gains some idea of the popularity of this one plant. They run from 4-inch to 6-inch pots and 7-inch and 8-inch azalea pots. These were potted by Vice-President-elect Murray, who gives his grower credit for the result, claiming it is all in the watering and ventilating. It was noted that the English varieties on trial are not so satisfactory. They are of a different type and not so free. When the begonias are gone, the space is occupied with lilies, then gloxinias, fancy-leaved caladiums and tuberous-rooted begonias, for which a sale has been created beyond computation, the result of persistent publicity through the medium of the store window, which is a gem. Hydrangeas will soon be potted up and housed cold for Mothers' day, which last year took all that were grown. The quantity is limited only by space. A house filled with Cibotium Schiedei and Polypodium Mandaianum, these in 6-inch pans, with Adiantum gloriosum, are rich property for any retailer. The South African violet, saintpaulia, is proving a good seller and deserves to be more widely known. It propagates freely from the leaf cuttings. No attempt is made to grow cut flowers beyond a house of cattleyas and these are really not profitable, owing to inability to increase the supply and so keep up stock. A large stock of the decorative Sansevieria zeylanica Laurentii is grown. It is the finest thing of its kind, far surpassing the variegated aspidistra at its best.

The W. L. Rock Floral Co., Arthur Newell, the Alpha Floral Co. and Miss Murray are making attractive window displays, suggestive of the season. The commission houses are planning with the growers to coöperate with the retailers to make this a banner season and to stamp the impression upon the outside world that there is nothing lacking here in push, pep and hustle.

said the Kansas City Star, publishing a fine description of the celosias, strawflowers and sweet peas being grown there. According to Mr. Ayres, the boulevard was crowded all the following day with visitors admiring the splendid display. This was entirely unsolicited publicity, evidence of the intelligence and progressiveness of the local press, a foretaste of what convention matters will receive.

* * * *

Barkley & Moore, Liberty, Mo., specialize in dahlias, which are now to be seen at their best. J. J. Barkley, in commenting upon the holding of the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City next year, believes it will spur many who are anxious to show the profession what they are doing.

* * * *

W. J. Barnes, of W. J. Barnes & Son, Kansas City, Mo., observed that it was the best stunt that could be put over to bring the convention here and that they were already beginning to prepare surprises for the visitors.

How Schling and Fallon Do It

Ever talk to Max Schling over the phone?

If you have, you sure have been impressed by the smile that's in his voice.

Some say it's his "business voice."

But I know different. Know it, because I have both heard and seen Max phoning.

He smiles while he talks.

Furthermore, he says: "You can't put a smile in your voice, if you don't have it on your face."

Max is dead right.

The phone is like a photograph. Shows up things about our real selves that we kid ourselves into believing we have completely hidden.

My old friend Fallon, of Norfolk, Virginia, says: "Some folks short-fill their F. T. D. orders and think they are getting away with it.

But the only one they fool is themselves."

Fallon's way is to fill F. T. D. orders fuller, if anything.

We try to put Max's smile and Fallon's full measure into everything we do.

You might like to bear it in mind, when sending your F. T. D. orders.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

During the last week Old Sol was back on the job again and pushed the thermometer up to 90 degrees in the shade the latter part of the week. This kind of weather had a bad effect on the business among the retailers and, of course, the wholesale markets, too, had a slump in demand. Better things are looked for next month, as October will be gay with autumn weddings, both large and small. An interesting group of debutantes will be entertained, while some will be in the "Veiled Prophet's Court." The Missouri Centennial, which will take place the first week in October, should create a great deal of business.

The wholesale market was crowded with stock of everything in season all last week and, with the reported lull, prices had to suffer greatly, especially in large lots. Roses are coming along well and local-grown roses are much in demand. The weather hurt the quality of that shipped in consignments. Columbia, Premier and Ophelia are showing longer stems and are of excellent color.

Carnations, too, show improvement in stem, color and size of bloom. The great quantities of asters have hurt the sale of carnations and will, until they are over with. The supply is still large and the demand is good for the best grades. There are still large consignments of gladioli coming to this market and they hold their own in price on prime stock. Lilies and valley are enough for the demand.

The supply of miscellaneous stock continues heavy. There is much more than the market can absorb. Tuberoses, gaillardias, hydrangeas, dahlias, gypsophila and phlox are among the many outdoor flowers coming to this market daily. Good mums will be out of the question until early next month. Any kind of greens is in demand, and the market is well supplied daily.

Growers Hold Picnic.

The eighth annual picnic of the St. Louis County Growers' Association was held September 15 at upper Creve Coeur lake, in Stutz's grove. The early morning rain had settled the dust, the day turned out perfect and there was the usual good turnout of growers, with their families. There was also a splendid representation of city florists.

Those in charge of the arrangements were Phil J. Goebel, Jr., Harry Wagner and George Deutschmann. The trustees and the committee had made perfect arrangements, which were all completed by the time of the first arrivals. Those in charge of arrangements were later assisted by the association's officers, who are Martin Ude, president; George Hartmann, vice-president; Joseph Deutschmann, secretary, and August Hartmann, treasurer. These latter looked after the comforts of all present and presented playthings to all the youngsters. William Smith was on hand with a present for all growers, in the shape of silver lead pencils.

There were nine events, in which anyone in attendance could take part, and there was the usual big event for members. Only those in attendance could place their names in the hat for the twenty prizes offered for this event. The J. C. Moninger Co., Chicago; the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago; Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago; the Advance Co., Richmond, Ind., and the St. Louis Seed Co. offered prizes. The St. Louis wholesalers, who now number seven, were liberal contributors in prizes.

The best prize of the day was won by Mrs. A. W. Gumz in the time walk. The prize was a cedar chest. Those in attendance say that it was not one of the largest attended picnics given by the growers, but, for a jolly good crowd and sociability, this affair was by far one of the best of its kind ever given.

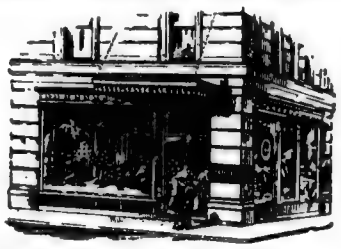
Koenig, at her home on Florissant avenue. All members were in attendance and enjoyed a most pleasant afternoon. Mrs. Emil Schray will entertain the members the second Wednesday afternoon in October.

The Sanders Nursery Co., on Clara avenue, has, according to Oliver Sanders, the manager of the store, booked several high-class weddings for next month. He and his brother Walter will manage the retail department this season, while the brothers Edgar and Frank will manage the greenhouses at Clayton, Mo.

H. Moskopf, of Moskopf & Irish, landscape artists, was highly complimented for work done at the Missouri Zoölogical Gardens, in Forest park, by a delegation from the Chicago Zoölogical Gardens that visited here last week. Mr. Moskopf is secretary of the Missouri Zoölogical Association.



Mrs. G. McNeill has given up her Delmar avenue store and has accepted a position to manage the Washington avenue branch store of the Koenig Floral Co.

Joseph Mathis, the Odell avenue florist, is supplying the local trade with well grown ferns in all sizes. His place is in splendid shape for the coming season.

George B. Windler's new range of glass, which has just been completed, will be used for the growing of carna-

During the last week Park Commissioner F. W. Pape ordered the dismissal of 350 park employees. Mr. Pape says this would be a saving to the city of $42,000. Lack of funds in the department caused this big lay-off.

The William C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. distributed silver lead pencils to all the county growers, which were eagerly accepted. Also many in the trade got them, as long as the supply lasted.

Fred Giebel has bought the fixtures of the Delmar Union Flower Shop, at 5260 Delmar boulevard. Last week he opened the shop under the same name.

Morris Levine, of New York, representing his own firm, the M. H. Levine Co., spent several days here last week. He reported an excellent demand for the company's ribbons.

looks for Mr. Klinger's return in another week.

C. V. Piper and R. A. Oakley, two of the Department of Agriculture's foremost authorities on grasses for lawns, were here last week to meet with all lawn owners at the St. Louis Country Club's golf links. The meeting was held September 19 in connection with the coming national amateur tournament, to be held there.

At Fred C. Weber's, Arthur Beyer reports a splendid summer business and looks forward to a busy fall and winter season. Fred C. Weber, local district manager for the F. T. D., is making special efforts for a large delegation from here to attend the convention next month.

Workmen are busily engaged in the store at 1314 Price street, the home of the A. W. Gumz Wholesale Floral Co. The new firm expects to be ready for business not later than October 5, or sooner. The company will have for neighbors C. A. Kuehn, on the east, and the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., on the west.

The half-day off on Saturdays with the wholesalers ended with Saturday, September 17, so the retailers can again buy

There were big surprises at the weekly bowling September 14, when the Violets won all three games from the Orchids, and when the Daisies had no trouble in winning three games from the Roses. The Carnations won two of the three games from the leading Sweet Peas. Fred Hermann scored the high single game of 213 and Oscar Rupp, 208. J. J. Windler made 193. The standing of the teams is as follows:

Team	Won	Lost
Sweet Peas	4	2
Daisies	3	3
Carnations	3	3
Violets	3	3
Roses	3	3
Orchids	2	4

The Market.

The market last week picked up considerably and the extreme lethargy, so noticeable during the previous weeks, was replaced by a quality of "pep" that is a sure harbinger of coming events. People seemed to have more life about them and, with the closing of the summer season, the old-time business spirit is asserting itself. During the last dull month, when the attitude of these buyers was as though the purchase of flowers was a secondary consideration and when vaults were packed to capacity, the situation was a trying one to the wholesaler. While it cannot be said that there was anything like a business boom, it is safe to say that the climax of stagnated business was reached last week. The tide has turned and from now on we shall note each week becoming a little better, until the business is in full swing again.

Roses, particularly pink and white, were in some instances scarce, yet the supply for this season is normal. A brisk week's demand would cause a famine in the rose market. The quality is all that could be desired and, fortunately, the demand is keeping close to the supply. Gladioli are still quite plentiful and of splendid quality. Indeed, Baltimore is fortunate in having as fine gladioli as any city in the country. For instance, the writer saw a shipment of several thousands from a northern city placed beside our local stock and the fact that this entire shipment found its way to the dump, while local stock cleaned up at $8 per hundred, gives a good idea of our local stock. Asters are in fair supply. These, too, are of gilt-edge quality. Dahlias are becoming more plentiful each week.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting September 12 and it was a busy meeting. Robert L. Graham, Jr., completed his year as president at this meeting and, as we look back over the year, it has certainly been a busy one for him. His election took place on the eve of "Say It with Flowers" week last fall, one of the largest affairs the florists ever staged in this city, and an event that awakened the public to the fact that the florists' industry was to be taken seriously. This, of course, set a precedent that had to be maintained and Mr. Graham felt in a measure responsible. Never was a president called upon to devote so much of his time to the club's affairs as Mr. Graham. As secretary of the club, the writer is familiar with the number of times Mr. Graham has been called upon to represent the florists' industry at business men's luncheons and meetings. There was a time when the principal business of the president was to preside at the regular club meetings, say once or twice a month. This is now his smallest duty, as there is seldom a week that passes that a communication is not received for the florists to be represented at some gathering of business men through the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

street pageant report and anyone listening to that report realized that this committee has been doing some strenuous work. In the first place, the money required to put this over is now all in sight. Mr. Perry took the floor and said that, while the details had all been left with the committee, nevertheless the committee was there for suggestions. This started a discussion and it was not long before one realized the amount of interest there is in the parade.

The writer has been trying to get a line on some of the floats to be entered, but this has been a hard thing to do. It would not be fair to tell in advance what the boys are doing, but everyone who proposes to enter a float ought to get busy. You know that the judging is to be done before the start. Then your names are to be displayed, so if you want to be in the running you would better do your best.

William F. Ekas took the floor and said, while he was entirely in favor of the pageant, he did not feel that the florists were living up to "Say It with Flowers" week as held last year. "Say It with Flowers" week, he said, means more than one day. This is one week in the year in which the florists are supposed to "Say It with Flowers." Mr. Ekas declared that there was no good reason why a noncompetitive show could not be held this fall as well as the street pageant and he moved that the club's action at the previous meeting, dropping the show, should be reconsidered, and a show should be held in November, to be a sort of fall opening at which every florist could show to the public what he was prepared to do during the coming season. Mr. Ekas had so many supporters that it was decided, as the hour was getting late, to hold a special meeting of the club September 20 to decide this matter.

At the latter meeting another important matter was to be decided, that of sending a live committee to Toronto in October to bring the F. T. D. business meeting to Baltimore in 1922.

The following officers were nominated for the ensuing year, and, as there is no opposition, the nominations are equivalent to election: President, Joseph S. Merritt; vice-president, Robert W. Johnston; secretary, Robert Tate Paterson; financial secretary, C. Harry Wagner; treasurer, Albert G. Fiedler, and librarian, C. M. Wagner. Tate.

vice-president, J. J. Higgins; secretary, Harry W. James; treasurer, Len Waters; directors, Mrs. Waters, Miss Mearns, Mrs. Moore, S. A. Frost, George Hatcher, Charles Cooper and Frank Grice. Reports were made by the various committees. G. M. Geraghty outlined the work of the publicity committee; Mrs. Moore, of the social; E. S. Simmons, of the entertainment, and S. A. McFadden, of the flower box committee. G. M. Geraghty gave an outline of the work that was being done in connection with the big flower show at the Royal Agricultural fair at Toronto in November. The club is actively supporting this show, along with the Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the Ontario Horticultural Association.

George Yavner suggested an F. T. D. booth at the Royal Agricultural fair and was supported by H. G. Dillemuth and G. M. Geraghty. A committee was appointed to go into the matter and decide whether to make it a booth for retailers and F. T. D. or for the latter only. The committee is: G. M. Geraghty, chairman; H. G. Dillemuth, E. S. Simmons, George Yavner and Mrs. P. Waters.

It was decided to attend the opening meeting of the Hamilton Gardeners' and Florists' Association September 28.

On account of the annual meeting of the F. T. D. coming on October 11 to 13, the October meeting will be held on October 3. This will be a social meeting, when the president will hold a reception.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Percy Waters has enlarged her store and has added a new icebox.

There is nothing startling in business circles at the present time. Business is fair and there is much stock.

The Flower Shops, Ltd., is a new addition to the flower companies of Toronto. A complete store has been opened in the St. Charles hotel, at the corner of Bay and Richmond streets. The store is finished in white and has a full equipment.

The Sheridan Nurseries are erecting a large "Say It with Flowers" sign on the Hamilton highway. J. J. H.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

State fair week seemed to have a bad effect on the flower market. Business was slow, the only flowers sold being those used for funeral work. Again the hot weather gripped Louisville and vicinity and the thermometer reached 97 degrees during several days. Outside stock is only fair and some stock is getting scarce. Gladioli are practically off the market and delphiniums are beginning to go. Zinnias are about through and the same can be said of asters. Due to the warm weather and frequent rains, dahlias are soft and have not enjoyed the demand that is usually created for this flower. Hard rains have ruined some fine plants and there is little chance for them to recover. Buddleias continue to come in steadily, but the last week of hot weather has caused them to drop, which makes them unsalable. Coreopsis has come into bloom and, although not generally used as a cut flower, has been found satisfactory. Cosmos has made its appearance, but, as yet, not enough has been cut to create any demand. Carnations are coming in better, but they are still small and short-stemmed. Roses continue to come in large quantities, but to clean them up is a problem. With the weather as it was, they were hard to handle

Flower Show at Fair.

The flower show at the Kentucky state fair was this year a beautiful sight. This was the first time that the flower exhibit was advertised and talked about. One can readily see that it was bound to be a success. And the exhibits were so complete and the booths so well arranged that it was the one big attraction on the grounds. Thousands of people were lured into the building by taking just one peep through the door and seeing the exquisite floral displays that were created by the best designers in Louisville. Groups of decorative plants in the center of the floor added much to the appearance, and the walls and fixtures were covered with southern smilax.

The F. Walker Co. had a most attractive booth and carried off a number of premiums, which were well earned. Philip Shaid was in charge.

William Walker took most of the blue ribbons on made-up work. He displayed good taste, as well as flowers. David Weller was in charge.

The new Nanz & Neuner Co. was also a keen competitor for blue ribbons.

The A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, had a good display of baskets and also a full line of florists' supplies. Charles Wilcox was in charge.

The Raedlein Basket Co., Chicago, exhibited its line, which consisted mostly of baskets of every description. Allan N. and C. Dewey Humason were in charge.

Various Notes.

F. Keller, of Lexington, Ky., president of the John A. Keller Co., was here last week to attend the fair. Mr. Keller was judge of the plant and flower department.

Fred Haupt, Jr., of the Fred Haupt Co., is the proud father of a 10-pound boy, Fred Haupt III.

Camden's estate, was superintendent of the plant and flower department at the fair.

Mrs. Iring, of the F. Walker Co., has returned from Evansville, where she has been visiting for the last week.

William Walker, with his manager, Dave Weller, and son Lee, took William Rabe and F. Keller for an enjoyable visit to some of the growers and retail stores one day last week.

Mrs. George Tobin had on exhibit at the fair two beautiful ferns, with fronds over five feet long. They were in tubs sixteen inches in diameter, which barred her from a premium, as the regulation pot was to be twelve inches. E. G. R.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

There has been an increase in business the last week and the trade feels much encouraged. Stock is of good quality and the demand is for the better grades. Carnations are beginning to come in and are of a fair quality, but they are rather short in stem. There has been a good demand for orchids for corsage work. Oncidium and the small Cattleya Bowringiana are being used to a great extent.

Various Notes.

The Doswell Floral Co. had a display of cut flowers, plants and funeral wreaths at the county fair, which drew much attention. Souvenirs were given to the public. This firm reports a brisk business for the last week.

Ralph Tinkham has been busy, with the increased demand for cut flowers.

The Flick Floral Co. furnished the decorations for the opening of the Fishman Ready-to-Wear store. The decorations consisted of palms, ferns and gladioli.

The Blossom Floral Co. reports a good business, with several weddings and new wholesale cut flower and floral supply house at Kansas City. This company, which has just been incorporated for $35,000, is to be known as the Stuppy Supply Co. A location has been secured at 1020 Oak street.

All of the stockholders have been well known to the florists' trade throughout the west for the last twenty years. The president, Frank X. Stuppy, and secretary, B. W. Murphy, have been connected with the Stuppy Floral Co., of St. Joseph, Mo., for the last twenty-five years. The vice-president and general manager, Glenn Kellogg Parker, was formerly with the Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., of Pleasant Hill, Mo., where he held responsible positions for over fifteen years. He is a grandson of the late George M. Kellogg. Mr. Parker will have complete charge of the Kansas City territory. William Wade, who will assist Mr. Parker, was formerly manager of the local branch of the Pinehurst Floral Co. Previous to that he was with the W. L. Rock Flower Co. for several years.

The location, at 1020 Oak street, is especially adapted for the wholesale florists' trade. There is plenty of space for storage of supplies and the elevator equipment is sufficient to permit the driving of cars into the building for loading and unloading stock. Plans have been made to handle plants and cut flowers. A large icebox is now being installed, with other necessary equipment.

All of the shareholders of the new corporation enjoy the friendship of the entire Kansas City florists' trade and it is the company's intention to work in cooperation with them to make Kansas City a bigger and better flower market and a center for the trade in florists' supplies.

Various Notes.

T. J. Noll, of the T. J. Noll Floral Co., left Monday for a business trip through the southwest territory.

H. O. Hanna, of Sherman, Tex., was in the city Friday and Saturday, September 16 and 17. He visited the range of the Pinehurst Floral Co., at Pleasant Hill.

L. R. Bohannan, of the Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co., left for Chicago September 14.

WHERE HAVE MY PROFITS GONE?

Not many years ago a friend sent me a book entitled, "Where Have My Profits Gone?" and well do I remember the significance of the title and its contents. Since that time we have had a wonderful period of progress and profit, but now—well, the florists have not had much complaint, for conditions with us are not half bad; in fact, some florists are having unusual business in spite of adverse conditions in all other lines. For instance, the following, clipped from a Boston newspaper, explains other business lines better than anything else can:

CANDY SALES DROP $54,000,000 IN YEAR. AUTOMOBILE DECREASE $332,901,200 FROM 1920 FIGURES.

Washington, September 3.—It cost the nation $54,000,000 less to fill its sweet tooth during the past fiscal year than in the previous year, according to preliminary annual statistics of the internal revenue bureau, $408,729,560 being spent for candy in the country, as compared with $462,820,660 in 1920.

It cost more, however, to keep the country's jaws in motion, the chewing gum bill for 1921 amounting to $44,405,900 as against $37,498,100 in the previous year. Facial decoration was less costly during the past year, the amount spent on paints, cosmetics and perfumes amounting to $145,019,100, as compared with $462,840,660 in 1920.

The country's spending also fell off considerably in other lines, the total outlay on automobiles being $1,675,763,800, as against $2,008,665,000 in 1920, and on jewelry $486,078,100, as against $517,272,140 in 1920.

In the field of art the curtailment was heavy, the amount spent for pianos and musical instruments dropping from $273,582,420 in 1920 to $231,358,620 in 1921, and the national bill for sculpture, paintings and statuary falling from $15,431,330 in 1920 to $11,163,370 in 1921.

Now, unless we view our business with proper concern, we may have occasion to return to the period of "Where have my profits gone?" Of course, the fact that our business is good must be due to having conditions for which we are most fortunate, helping to create a wonderful market for good flowers without much of the uphill fight with which other lines of merchandise have to contend.

It must be obvious to the rational mind that sooner or later, when we meet the same condition, it will be more than an uphill fight to get back to the level which we have had these several years. And the one essential feature which we have been lacking and of which all other lines have availed themselves always has been and still is advertising, both national and local. The last named has taken on quite an impetus since our campaign was started, but the national program has waned sadly, and the local campaign suffers also by its neglect.

The national campaign is the hub of the "Say It with Flowers" campaign, and must necessarily be the principal support for all the spokes of the wheel, such as local and other forms of advertising, and it is up to all of us to give added financial and moral support to carry it on with the proper dignity. Support the movement that helps not only your business, but incidentally has helped give everyone in the craft the greatest boon and pleasure by the high character of advertising which the publicity committee placed in the national magazines.

LANCASTER CLUB MEETS.

Charles B. Herr, of Strasburg, Pa., entertained the Lancaster County Florists' Club, Lancaster, Pa., Thursday evening, September 15, at his home. More than fifty members and their wives were present. Mr. Herr's gardens are renowned in this vicinity for their wonderful planting, there being a continuous procession of flowers from the earliest snowdrop to the hardy winter mums in December.

Mr. Herr's reputation as a carnation grower is excelled by none. His houses are filled with clean, vigorous stock, which gives promise of a wealth of bloom. The houses have all been repainted, both inside and out, and his establishment is a model indeed. He is a life member of the S. A. F. and the senior bachelor of the Lancaster Florists' Club.

Dinner was served at 6:30 p. m. on the lawn, after which the club was called to order by Vice-president B. F. Barr. The club decided to visit the dahlia show of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons, which will take place October 6, at White Marsh, Md. The trip will be made by motor. All florists and their friends are invited to join us. They should kindly communicate with Secretary Albert M. Herr. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Weaver extended an invitation to the club to meet at their home for the October meeting. The invitation was at once accepted.

The flower show to be held November 10 to 12 was then discussed. A number of committees reported. It was decided to have a poster contest for the school children of Lancaster city and county and to offer prizes for the best design to be used by the club. Business houses are offering prizes and the general outlook is that the Lancaster county florists will stage a successful show.

Before the meeting adjourned Mr. Herr awarded prizes to the following fortunate ladies: Mrs. Elmer J. Weaver, Mrs. J. Rutter Hess, Mrs. Fred

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

College Florists' Section.

In connection with the thirty-seventh annual convention of the Society of American Florists, a meeting of the college section of the S. A. F. took place at 9 a. m. Thursday, August 18, at Washington. Chairman H. B. Dorner, of the University of Illinois, opened the meeting. The election of new officers for the coming year was first in order, Arno H. Nehrling, of Cornell University, being elected chairman, and Arthur S. Thurston, of the University of Maryland, secretary.

The question of eligibility for membership in the college section was discussed quite fully and it was finally voted: "The membership of the college section of the S. A. F. shall consist of those members of the S. A. F. who are engaged in instructional and research work in educational and investigational institutions."

Each week now sees larger chrysanthemums coming into the market and in a greater number of varieties. The quality of the blooms is also improving. PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Victoria, B. C.—William Paul, formerly of Chicopee, Mass., has purchased the Posy Shop from G. E. Wilkerson.

Santa Barbara, Cal.—The firm of Ross & Rodwick is just starting in business here. The company will do both a nursery and a florists' business.

Alameda, Cal.—An uninvited airplane driven by a truant driver unexpectedly dropped into the greenhouses of H. Hayashi and damaged considerable glass and stock September 7.

Sacramento, Cal.—The Ebel Floral Store has rented new quarters in front of the Paramount theater, on K street, between Ninth and Tenth streets. The company has been forced to move from its former location at Seventh and K streets because of new ownership.

Ontario, Ore.—The newly organized firm of Boyer & Westover has recently completed the erection of a new greenhouse, which contains 1,500 feet of glass. Other extensive improvements have been made, among them being included the building of additional coldframes.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

While the principal local demand during the last week was for funeral flowers, this was unusually good and everything cleaned up daily. Good shipping stock of mums and asters was decidedly scarce, although the former were excellent for local use. Dahlia growers who were wise enough to keep their prices at a fair level did well and reaped the benefit of the scarcity of the other stock. Others, as usual, slaughtered prices with no corresponding benefit. When a small bunch of indifferent flowers, short asters or similar stock, sells for 25 or 35 cents a dozen, surely a dozen good dahlias should be worth 50 or 75 cents and there seems no good reason for selling them for 35 cents a dozen. The pompons and anemone-flowered types are selling well for basket work. Asters are past their prime, although there will be fair flowers for some time. New-crop carnations are good and are improving daily. Small flowers are scarce and, as shown on the market, poor in quality, though those delivered direct to the retailers are usually better. Roses, orchids and valley are scarce. Greens are plentiful and good.

Various Notes.

The evening of September 11 a most pleasant function took place at the nursery of Howard & Smith, at Montebello. W. Gardener, who for fourteen years has been associated with the firm, retired from his position and, to show the esteem in which he is held, about fifty of his fellow employees or coworkers, as Fred Howard prefers to call them, gave him a farewell supper and presented him with a traveling set for camping, consisting of stove and all the culinary requirements, neatly arranged in the form of a suit case. Edward Monroe had charge of the catering and lighting arrangements, and the setting of the tables, lit by electric lights under the foliage of the large kentias in the lath house, was most attractive. Everyone was in the best of spirits and Mr. Howard, who was in the chair, made a happy little speech, telling of the good work done by Mr. Gardener and expressing his regret at losing him. Several other speakers enlivened the time and music, both vocal and instrumental, was rendered by the members of the firm. O. W. Howard gave an interesting résumé of the progress made by the firm since its inception by F. H. Howard and G. W. Smith. Arthur Howard let loose some humorous stories, as did Patrick Shearer, park superintendent of Los Angeles; F. N. Renfrow, manager of the coming big show at Exposition park, and others, while Mr. Gardener thanked all present in a feeling and straightforward way. A lively and enjoyable evening was spent by all present and the break-up came about midnight.

F. R. Hills has been suffering from rather a severe shock of sciatica, but he manages to keep going most days. Mrs. Hills has also been under the weather with an injury to her back. Mr. Hills says that he has not for a long time found business so good in the larger sizes of ferns and it keeps them all busy to maintain the stock of 8-inch and up. The ferns are in splendid condition now in all sizes, the new Hillsi proving most popular.

C. Gutting, on returning from San Diego, speaks highly of the fine condition of the parks which he visited under the guidance of Superintendent John Morley.

Among the stock now being handled by Gebhardt Prechtl are fine celosias and delphinium, the dark variety, Fanny Stoneman, being most popular and attractive.

James Taylor, superintendent at the Homer Laughlin place, is finding his charge "getting smaller by degrees and beautifully less," many lots having been sold off and fine residences built thereon. Mr. Taylor has started a nursery and landscape business at his new residence on Longpre avenue, Hollywood, and he already has a fine stock coming on.

G. W. Smith's place, at Sherman, is most attractive now, the fine strains of flowers thriving finely in this favored section. In the few years that Mr. Smith has been established here the growth of the place has been notable and it looks like the making of a fine retail business in addition to his nursery and landscape work. He evidently laid his plans with care and is reaping the benefit.

Howard E. Gates, of Anaheim, is a frequent buyer on this market and he reports business as good in his store. He is right at the center of the business district, at Los Angeles street, a fine location.

John Polder is away on a short vacation at Catalina island. Walter Polder is taking his father's place in the market. His sister recently married and now all the family are married. Mr. Polder, Sr., is much improved in health.

Miss Annabelle Akita, assistant bookkeeper for S. Murata & Co., gave a birthday party at her home September 11, at which Mr. Murata, Mrs. Shewbrook, head bookkeeper, R. Overstreet and wife and others of the staff were present. All report a fine time. Shipment of mums has begun here and by the time this note appears long-distance shipping will be in full force.

The new crop of roses will be in full swing at the place of W. Armacost & Co. about October 1, when some big cuts are expected. The demand now at the store is away beyond the supply, but plenty of good stock for everybody is promised. Shipping business in other lines is opening up well, and asters, though now almost over, have been great this season.

E. C. Amling, Mrs. Amling and H. Amling drove to Santa Ana last week to inspect the new range of Amling Bros. In the store on Wall street, roses are selling freely and mums are beginning to move regularly.

Fraser & Son are harvesting a fine crop of Gypsophila elegans of the large-flowering Covent Garden strain. They say this is especially popular with their eastern trade and that they will have a big stock of seed this year. Prospects are for a good field in all their specialties. H. R. R.

swing and the stock is excellent. The new crop of roses is beginning to come in satisfactorily. Gladioli are still fairly plentiful, although they are beginning to be off crop. There is a good supply of carnations, with plenty of rubrum and amaryllis. Dahlias are abundant, but asters are going off rapidly. There are also plenty of poppies, especially the Iceland poppy and the Mexican poppy, zinnias, delphinium and a quantity of other late summer stock. The demand has picked up a little during the last few days.

Various Notes.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co., the Art Floral Co. and several others of this city are making interesting exhibits of large and handsome cups for the dahlia show, which is about to open at the Palace hotel under the auspices of the Dahlia Society of California. Nearly three-quarters of a mile of tables have been arranged and decorated, and 75,000 vases are on hand for the exhibition of the 200,000 dahlia blooms, among them being many new and, as yet, unnamed seedlings. The diminutive dahlias called pompons are highly popular with local florists and they will be more in evidence at the show than at any previous San Francisco flower exhibition.

The C. Kooyman Co. is seeking to obtain the most attractive of the 264 species of helichrysum which are said to exist. The company has sent to South Africa for one white helichrysum,

The E. W. McLellan & Co. has a fine crop of gardenias coming from young plants, which are just beginning to bloom.

J. A. Axell was found wondering how long two truckloads of baskets, in pastel shades, just received, would withstand the steady run on them. PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

With the return of cooler weather and large numbers of people who have been summering at the beaches, business has taken on fresh life. There is a noticeable increase in the call for loose cut flowers, while there has also been a steady demand for funeral work.

Asters continue to arrive, but it is easy to see that they are about to pass out of season. Gladioli continue of prime quality, the varieties Schwaben,

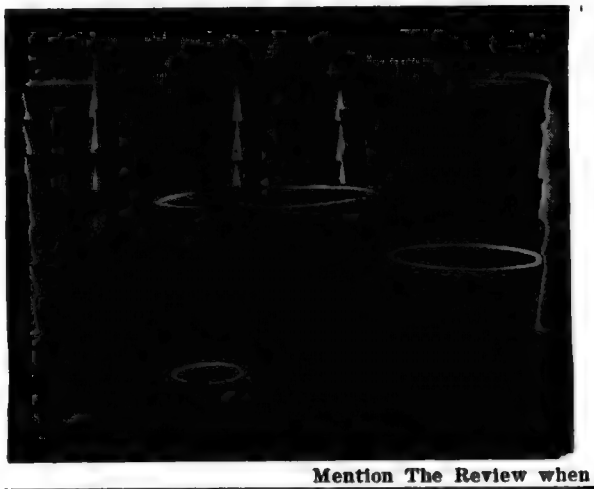
Mrs. Pendleton and Francis King being the leading sorts. Chrysanthemums have made their appearance. Local-grown stock of Golden Glow and Early Frost are quite good for this date. Some Chrysolora arriving from California, while showing the effects of travel, helps to brighten up show windows and also sells quite readily. Roses and carnations are improving in quality as the season advances and are selling well.

Gloxinias have been obtainable as flowering pot plants for some time and cyclamens are beginning to come in. There is an abundance of potted fern stock coming in from the various growers.

Various Notes.

William Hennings, of Oak Grove, has increased his plantings of greens for cutting. He hopes to be able to cut enough asparagus and maidenhair to satisfy his customers the present season. He also has a bench of gardenias, which look promising.



Thomas Luke, of Smith's Flower Shop, with his wife, is motoring through California at the present time. They are visiting all points of interest in the Golden state.

The Glafke Floral Co., which has heretofore specialized in carnations and winter-flowering sweet peas, has this season a fine stock of cyclamens and ferns coming along for fall business.

The Holden Floral Co. will have its usual supply of Christmas plant stock, including cyclamens, poinsettias and begonias. The latter look especially fine at the present time.

E. F. Winterson, of Chicago, and Fritz Bahr, of Highland Park, Ill., visited our city one day last week. They made the trip over our scenic Columbia river highway and were enthusiastic about its grandeur.

J. A. Axell, of San Francisco, passed through the city on the last leg of a transcontinental journey he has been taking this summer.

Earl Aldrich, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, has returned from a successful business trip, which covered all the states west of the Rocky mountains.

Fred Young and Ben Van Kirk are on a hunting trip to southern Oregon. The boys here are all anticipating the hunters' return with plenty of jerked venison.

Visitors last week were Fred Gust, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Robert Newcomb, of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia.; William Goldsbary, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; William Snyder, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; Mrs. A. Day, Baker, Oregon, and William Wibra, Chehalis, Wash. C. B. S.

The Market.

There has been some improvement in general business, traceable to the reopening of schools. This improvement has been particularly evident in the greater interest manifested in corsages, since there have been many more social functions of late. The cut of early mums is increasing, but there has been no trouble in disposing of the offerings. From present indications there will be a bumper crop of mums harvested this year and some of the growers are beginning to look for a shipping outlet on their expected surplus. The retail shops have been handling fewer dahlias, since the home growers have such large cuts at present that they are hard to sell. Golden Glow is offered in a small way. Snapdragons are about at an end. Zinnias have been popular, although rather in oversupply, but they are being used freely in current decorations. African marigolds and gaillardias are also plentiful.

The cut of roses is showing some increase, especially on Ophelia and Butterfly. Ward has been in active demand. This latter flower is being generally combined with violets in the making of corsages. There has been some improvement in the deliveries of carnations of late, with a heavy yield assured for the Statistics You Should Read!

Remember, 1920 was an excellent year for shipping for us, and we are endeavoring to make this year twice or three times as much and we will on these bases:

1. Service to our customers.
2. Stock priced as it should be.
3. We never miss a train out.
4. Scientific packing by experienced packers.

Last year our firm was proud of its record and this year we know from the time the shipping season opens about September, we will not be idle one moment until it ends sometime in May.

Don't overlook us. We advertise in The Review and in the F.T.D. News and will assure you, you will wire us a second order.

coming season. The cutting of orchids has decreased, so that only local business is being cared for now, but growers advise that shipping stock will again be available shortly. Lilies are scarce at present, but bouvardia, stephanotis and gypsophila are plentiful enough.

Various Notes.

Robert Newcomb, representing the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, has been calling on the local trade during the last week.

The City Flower Shop has been showing some fine ferns lately and has secured good results from featuring this item in its window displays. There has also been noted a freer demand for roses.

Albert Moore, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, has returned from his vacation. Mrs. Ruth Muench is still confined at home as a result of her recent throat operation. Harry Crouch, of the same shop, and T. Roades spent the week-end on a short fishing trip and the former came out with the largest trout caught on the Skagit this season. The steel framework of the new store at Second and Union streets is now entirely in place. There was a decided increase in general business in August.

ORCHID is one of Kunderd's creations. I bought the entire stock of him when he first originated it, and own every bulb of it. It resembles the Chicago White in color, but is a far better white, and in every way superior to that popular variety; has a larger flower, is more vigorous in growth, and a far better bulblet maker. It is not more than five days later. It will supplant Chicago White wherever it is tried.

staff of Kenney's Home of Flowers. A heavy run of funeral work marked the end of last week and served to clean the floor up for the start of this week.

The Seattle Dahlia Society will hold its annual show this year at the Leschi park pavilion on Lake Washington. The event is now scheduled to start about September 23. It will continue for three days and present plans indicate a large entry list.

Fred W. Winters has been bringing in some of the largest African marigolds shown here this season.

After five weeks' showing of dahlia blooms, which have led to a number of profitable orders on roots for later delivery, the Orpheum Floral Co. advises that it will discontinue this feature.

The Fremont Floral Co. has been bringing in some fine Whitmanii ferns of late.

The Hollywood Gardens has enjoyed an increase in the run of general decorations. The company handled window decorations in the fall fashion show held last week. Gladioli and fall foliage were the chief items used in the women's shops, although some used black backgrounds, with zinnias and other bright-colored flowers for color relief.

The Pinehurst Floral Shop has been showing some fine African marigolds. A big shipping week was seen, both on funeral designs and decorative materials.

Ralph Anderson, lately with Kenney's Home of Flowers, is now attached to the staff of the Woodlawn Flower Shop.

One of the most elaborate church decorations ever handled by a local florist was put in last week at St. James cathedral by Felix Rosaia. The event was the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of Bishop O'Dea's advancement to his present rank and drew visitors from all along the Pacific coast. Smilax, asparagus fern and huckleberry were used for general decoration. One altar was finished in dark red gladioli, one in Torche Russe, one in white and one in Panama gladioli, while Lilium auratum was used on the main altar. A part of the altar ornaments had to be moved to allow installation of the decorations. Blue and white asters in silver baskets were used in the bishop's residence and lilies and gladioli in Cathedral hall, where the banquet was held.

Melby's Flower Shop has secured good results through the display of small and medium-sized potted plants, the reopening of town apartments being the reason for purchasing these at this time.

Mrs. J. C. Dressen, wife of the proprietor of the Art Floral Co., is reported practically recovered from her recent illness and operation, although she is not sufficiently strong to be brought home from Spokane, Wash., as yet.

McCoy's are receiving some fine cyclamen in all colors from the greenhouses at present. A number of large commissions were executed by the company for the fashion week show windows.

Charles E. Sullivan, of Rosaia Bros., has returned from his vacation and the full store force is again at work. A large club decoration was handled by this firm last week. Marigolds, gladioli and fall foliage were used in baskets and wall hampers, with zinnias in baskets marking the center tables. Real Japanese butterflies were used as place cards, and Ophelia roses and gladioli were used on the punch table. The entire Seattle Country Club was also specially decorated for the recent state convention of physicians. H. M.

FRAT-M'S

Frat-M's are a great help to florists who make funeral work. They are exact reproductions of the official emblems embossed in gold and the different colors as required by each Fraternal and Labor organization.

The florist is saved time and worry in the nuisance of lettering, as well as the keeping of such a stock of wire frames, and different colored flowers. Just use such flowers as you have and then attach a FRAT-M with paste to the chiffon, or by the hanger that comes for each, as a card, and that is all there is to it, excepting the comment and commendatory talk for the florist.

Just pick out a dozen of the most used from the list following, enclosing $2.00 per dozen, and if they don't make you ten times their cost, return those unused and get your money.

Square and Compass, Chapter, Commandery, 32nd Degree, Shrine, Eastern Star, Royal Neighbors, M. W. A., Maccabees, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Columbus, K. of P., Moose, Jr. O. U. A. M., B. of R. T., B. of R. Clerks, B. of L. E., Br. of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Eagles.

Just give Frat-M's a trial; you don't have to keep them. We are willing to send them to you and return the money if they don't pay you ten times their cost. Address

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

REPORTS from jobbers indicate that Dutch bulbs are cleaning up rapidly. Any surplus which may develop will be the result of late shipments from Holland.

REPORTS indicate that recent weather conditions have been favorable for the gladiolus crop all over America, with the result that there will be a large crop of bulbs of fine quality.

ONE of the eastern importers suggests that short crops do not always mean shortages as compared with the demand and avers that America will receive all the giganteum bulbs that can be properly digested this season.

EXCISION of the paragraph in the Fordney tariff relating to the duties on imported grass seeds and return of such seeds to the free list is sought by the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association and a brief has been filed for that purpose with the Senate finance committee.

ALTHOUGH importations of bulbs from France and Holland were heavier this year than previously, the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, finds, in checking up its orders, that early calls for them were stronger than usual also. The lower prices this season and the good sales florists enjoyed last year have led to larger orders in a good many cases.

THE schedules by which the freight rate on commission seed cabinets would have been raised have been ordered canceled by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Had they gone into effect, all cabinets constructed of wood less than ¾-inch thick would have received rating one class higher than at present. The protest of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, was so effective that the seedsmen's case was upheld and the schedules were ordered changed to admit the lower rating to cabinets constructed of hardwood of ½-inch thickness.

THE Salt Lake City branch of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., has been incorporated under the laws of Utah as the Western Seed Growers' Marketing Co. The company will take over the entire personnel, equipment and offices of the Minneapolis firm's branch. The officers in the new concern are: President and manager, Maurice Keating; vice-president, C. C. Massie; secretary, B. F. Sheehan. Mr. Keating was manager of the discontinued branch office. The company will market western-grown seeds for producers on a commission basis, under an arrangement endorsed by the Utah state farm bureau and the Idaho Seed Growers' Association. Northrup, King & Co. will continue to deal in western seeds independently of the new company.

THORBURN IN BANKRUPTCY.

In the year 1827, the following advertisement appeared in the annual catalogue of J. M. Thorburn & Co., of New York:

The well known and highly reputable business of J. M. Thorburn & Co. was established by Grant Thorburn in 1802, who was born in Dalkeith, near Edinburgh, Scotland, in February, 1773. Business was carried on at 20 Nassau street, New York, and in 1808, by a miracle, escaped total destruction by a fire, which commenced in a soap and candle factory adjoining the store. In 1818 the business was totally prostrated by the proprietor's expending his whole capital, and more, in fruitless preparations and attempts to raise seeds, etc., which could not be imported during the war.

The foregoing is only a bit of a most remarkable history of a great business that weathered many depressions, such as the business world is today encountering. But the force of the fact, as stated, that the company suffered so extremely after the War of 1812, is brought vividly to the fore when it is learned that today, just following a war, the J. M. Thorburn Co., at 53 Barclay street, New York, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, listing liabilities of $54,729 and assets of $44,814, the main items of which are accounts, $20,525; cash, $13,729; stock, $10,000. Abraham Glaser has been appointed receiver under $5,000 by Judge Hough. The principal creditors listed are the National Park bank, $30,000, secured; the Redfield Advertising Agency, $2,474, and the American Agricultural Chemical Co., $1,949.

The company has been, one might say, institutional in the history of New York business, due, doubtless, to its progressiveness. In 1814 Grant Thorburn recovered from the prostration mentioned above and with $500 advanced by a friend he started business anew. To show the advanced ideas of the firm, away back in 1822 the company announced in its catalogue that it had connected with the seed trade a botanical and agricultural book store, including the latest almanacs "of the states of New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut, which can be had every year as soon as published."

A few facts concerning the firm are here stated in a nutshell: In 1826 the company purchased the Friends' meeting house, which had been used for many years for election purposes; in 1844 the firm moved to 15 John street, with greenhouses at Astoria, N. Y.; in 1867 specialization began, especially along the lines of grass seeds; in 1870 novelty stock, such as "Egyptian blood turnip beet," was listed in the catalogue; in 1871 lawn mowers were first listed; in 1878 flower seeds are first considered in the catalogue; in 1878 the potato, Beauty of Hebron, was introduced. If space allowed, the firm's introductions, during its long existence, could be listed almost ad infinitum.

In 1894 the company incorporated

HEAVY CROP IN CANARIES.

Exports of onion seed from the Canary islands commenced earlier this season than last, the first shipments of any importance having been made July 3 this year and July 17 last year, says the American consul at Teneriffe. Predictions that the 1921 crop would be larger than the 1920 have already been more than fulfilled and the yield this year will be far above the average. Exports to the United States will exceed 80,000 pounds. The average shipment to the United States for the ten-year period 1910 to 1919 amounted to 68,270 pounds, valued at $71,802.

The following table shows the quantities and values of the different varieties of onion seed shipped to the United States during the two seasons indicated:

	1920		1921 (to July 26),
	Quantity pounds	Value	Quantity pounds	Value
Yellow Bermuda	53,311	$ 82,359	53,398	$48,559
Crystal white wax	8,651	19,598	13,920	19,249
Red Bermuda	1,052	1,403	1,890	2,119
Total	63,014	$103,360	69,208	$69,927

Exports have already exceeded those of last season by more than 6,000 pounds and it is thought that not more than three-fourths of the crop has so far been shipped. Prices are much lower than last year, owing to the larger crop and the decreased demand from the Texas onion growers, who purchase more than eighty per cent of the production of Canary island onion seed.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Thos. J. Grey Co., Boston, Mass.—An illustrated, 32-page autumn catalogue, arranged in this company's usual attractive and accurate style, with its typical and artistic cover in black and white. The stock offered comprises bulbs, perennials, vines, shrubs, fruit-bearing stock, grass seeds, seed grains, fertilizers and sundries.

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa.—Autumn wholesale catalogue of bulbs, plants, seeds and florists' requisites; forty-eight good-sized pages, well illustrated, accurately printed, and bound in a neat blue cover. "Recent reports," says the company, "indicate that, owing to dry weather conditions, bulbs may not be so large as usual, but will be of the proper age and well matured, so that results should be entirely satisfactory."

Young's Seed & Plant House, Aurora, Ill.—"Full o' Pep Hardy Flowering Plants," an attractive, well illustrated folder. Two of the pictures, showing several varieties of phlox, are colored. In addition to perennials, the list comprises Amoor privet and Van Houtte's spiræa. For general nursery stock, the prospective patron is referred by Mr. Young to his complete catalogue.

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Illustrated, wholesale autumn catalogue of bulbs, seeds, and exceptionally large assortments of tools, equipments and miscellaneous supplies; a really comprehensive book, clearly printed on a thin but excellent grade of paper and consisting of forty-eight large pages and cover, besides two inserts, one of which shows lilies in their natural colors, while the other has reference to Wedgwood jardinieres.

Fraser Nursery Co., Inc., Birmingham, Ala.—"Advance Wholesale Price List, for Nurserymen and Dealers Only," a compactly printed 12-page bulletin, offering large lines of ornamental stock, both deciduous and evergreen, and in all sizes, from large specimens down to young stock for transplanting. Broad-leaved evergreens and field-grown own-root roses are included.

Valdesian Nurseries, Bostic, N. C.—"Landscaping the Home Grounds; a Catalogue of Evergreens, Shrubs, Vines, Roses, Perennials and Bulbs, Fruit Trees and Plants;" illustrated, thirty-six pages, in pocket form, with a tasteful cover which is printed in green and red.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md.—Current issue of a monthly bulletin, with prices that "cancel all previous quotations and are made on a strictly cash basis, regardless of the responsibility of the customer." Ferns, palms, geraniums, Cleveland cherries, lantanas, petunias and heliotropes are some of the leading items.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

NURSERY ADVERTISING.

Something That Sells.

First of all, what is advertising? And what is its purpose? It is to sell something, isn't it? So I would say that advertising is what you do and say that establishes a friendly relationship that results in sales. Selling is not the immediate result; it follows something else. A relationship has to be established and it must be built on confidence and good-will. There must be permanency in the relationship and what grows out of it. When you sell a bill of goods to a planter, your business with that man has just begun, because your buyers must be made into permanent customers. A relationship of confidence and good-will, then, is of the utmost importance to you. Successful nursery advertising has to be built on that idea. It must be frank, straightforward, absolutely truthful. It must never overstate the facts. Understatement is an actual advantage; it inspires confidence. And then performance must match every promise.

Since advertising copy and catalogues are closely bound up together and must supplement each other to be effective, I want to consider them together.

Nursery stock is one of the easiest things to advertise and yet for the individual nurseryman it offers the paradox of being at the same time one of the most difficult. It is easy to be general; it is difficult to be specific. It is easy to interest people in trees and plants; it is difficult to present your trees and plants as the ones to buy.

When I read nursery advertisements I find that most nurserymen buy space to announce that they are nurserymen, that they grow trees. Now, there is neither novelty nor news in that statement. It is not advertising. Nobody is going to make the mistake of supposing that a nurseryman is a purveyor of books or of hats or of ice-cream freezers. I consult a dozen nursery catalogues and I find them a dozen books about trees and plants, often handsome books, differing in covers but not in contents, varying in minor details but not in essentials. I find that Jones and Brown distribute more or less well written and handsomely illustrated books containing much the same list of varieties described in about the same language and illustrated with the same pictures. They are good handbooks. But as a possible buyer from one of them, which one am I going to place my order with? How am I to know whether to buy of Jones or of Brown? They don't tell me. The thing that I am interested in as a buyer is the thing that is conspicuously absent from nearly every nursery catalogue. It is the "reason why." And it isn't there.

The absence of that "reason why" can be accounted for. Nurserymen, like a good many other advertisers, write their advertising copy and their catalogues to themselves. But we must address ourselves to the people we want to buy our goods. You are going about it apparently believing that the important thing is to sell. But the important thing to you is that people should buy. And that means you've got to get away from constant thought of your business and become intensely interested in the buyer's business. It is his order you want, isn't it? Go after it from his standpoint. Tell him the reason why he should buy your particular trees. That is the great difficulty in advertising nursery stock. Everything else is easy, but the most important thing happens to be the most difficult thing. If you think it can't be done, just take a week off and travel with one of your plate-book canvassers. He can tell you selling points about your business that you never knew before.

After listening to this address at Chattanooga, the Southern Nurserymen's Association, through the committee on resolutions, expressed its appreciation of its value in these words: "We especially return our thanks to John Watson for his masterly, able, eloquent, scholarly and instructive address. We ask him to have this published, in order that all nurserymen may read, study and profit thereby."

Talking Points.

Most advertisers of nursery stock recognize that difficulty and try to overcome it in various ways. The fact of age in a business is worth advertising, because age is some assurance of quality or service, without which the business might not have lived so long. But some of the best nurseries are new nurseries. The fact of size also warrants the assumption of a certain value in products, without which the business might not have grown big. And yet some of the small nurseries grow excellent stock and they answer your argument with theirs—the advantage of small acreage and personal attention to every detail. Some advertisers feature specialties, and it is of great value to be able to offer something worth-while that others cannot supply. And yet the public has noticed that not ten per cent of the novelties introduced with a great flourish of trumpets ever measure up to the old, tested varieties. And so the public has become doubtful about that sort of advertising. And then there is the too common appeal of cheap prices, an argument that defeats itself at once—or should—because prices below the average of those of good firms invite the conclusion that they mean one of two things: Either that the trees are not worth more than a cheap price, or that the nurseryman admits his incapacity as a salesman. I can say out of experience—and I think all of you can, too—that buyers are not attracted by cheap trees, although they may be attracted by cheap prices. All of you have received letters telling you that your prices were higher than somebody else's, but that if you would meet so-and-so's prices, the order would be placed with you. Those correspondents want the cheap man's price, but they prefer your trees.

It is necessary for every nurseryman to have some good reason why buyers should give him their orders. That reason may be found in various things: The care with which varieties are propagated, the workmen's skill, the thoroughness of the cultivation, suitable land, equipment for proper handling at shipping time, shipping facilities, the service that follows delivery. All these are things that the buyer is interested in. Of overshadowing importance to the buyer is the matter of getting fruit trees true to name.

When to Advertise.

When should nurserymen advertise? Or, to put it differently, when do folks buy trees and plants? Catalogue nurserymen advertise only in the fall and spring. I never knew exactly why; so I asked a good many and it interested me to find that I got the same answer in every instance: "It doesn't pay to advertise at other seasons. We receive orders only in the fall and spring." The last part of that statement, we all know to be perfectly true. Fall and spring are the planting seasons. Folks send for nursery stock when they are ready to plant it. But we are not talking about planting; we are talking about buying. I feel sure that folks buy trees and plants every day in the year; that is, they make up their minds to buy just as you and I do about the things we buy.

For example, when does a woman buy rose bushes? Of course, she makes out her order and sends it off in the spring, because that is the time to plant roses. But we are not talking about delivering and planting; we want to know when she buys roses. Isn't it in June, when roses are in bloom in her garden or in the neighbors' gardens? And why isn't that the best time to advertise roses? When does a man decide that it might be a mighty fine idea to have half a dozen peach trees in the back garden? Isn't it likely to be at about the time when friend wife is feeding him peaches and cream for breakfast and peach cobbler for Sunday dinner? Doesn't he realize then that the grocer's price for a basket of peaches would buy a tree or two for his own garden?

Every Month Has Opportunities.

Now, that idea of using and profiting by the illustration of our products in the orchard and in the garden can be carried out in every month and every week in the year. Peonies should be planted in the fall, but it looks to me like a mighty good time to advertise them when peonies are in bloom in the spring. Fruits can be profitably advertised in their fruiting season. The time to talk fruit is when folks are eating fruit. Last summer I read a newspaper account of a man in Illinois who sold his crop of Yellow Transparent apples on a 40-acre lot for $20,000. Now, why wasn't that fact a good thing for nurserymen with apple trees to advertise? And why wasn't that the very time to advertise? Advertising is always most effective when tied up to a concrete fact. And there is no month in the year when nurserymen can't do that.

The advertising should suit the season and it should be followed with catalogues of seasonable plants. The annual catalogue is too large. Its length is confusing. I was recently reading an article about big catalogues in Printers' Ink. It referred to big catalogues in general, but it took an illustration from our trade that I found interesting. The writer said he wanted to plant a bed of tulips; he said he answered an advertisement and received a large and handsome book offering trees and plants and bulbs of every description. He said there were a dozen pages devoted to tulips alone; hundreds of varieties and all apparently desirable. But out of so many offerings, he said he was unable to arrive at a decision and so he ordered none. Some time later, he received a little 4-page folder offering bulbs in collections, including a bed of tulips for $10. He sent in his order. He had received an offer of what he wanted, made in a way that he could understand, telling him how deep to plant and how far apart and all he wanted to know. It brought his order.

Seasonable Folders.

Can we nurserymen learn something from that experience? A folder of four, eight or sixteen pages, offering only one or two articles, like roses or peonies or hedge plants or shade trees or evergreens, is far more effective and will bring more orders than a catalogue of 200 pages. The folder is inexpensive in printing and postage. Besides, those who write you are not interested in everything you grow. They nearly always tell you what they want. I'd say: Split the catalogue up into a number of small folders, each offering one line; advertise each line in its fruiting or blooming season; and remind buyers with a dozen small catalogues instead of one big one. Some progressive and prosperous firms are doing that right now. The folder is specific; it answers the inquiry; it talks about one thing at a time; it is a bullet instead of birdshot.

Besides, we grow entirely too many varieties. Half of them are has-beens; many are never-wasers. We could discard seventy-five per cent of the varieties we grow without loss to planters or to ourselves. The average nurseryman catering to the trade of orchard planters can get along with twenty varieties of apples and ten each of peaches, pears and plums. Propagating and handling hundreds of varieties offers just so many more chances for error.

And in describing varieties, let us get away from superlatives. They can't all be the best and yet if you read some catalogues you will think so unless you happen to know better. The best catalogue I ever read described peaches only by giving the month of ripening in that locality, the color and whether freestone or cling—only a line for each variety, which was quite enough to cover the essentials.

Supporting Salesmen.

Nurserymen who sell through agents alone do not advertise. I have asked a great many, why? And I have invariably got the same answer: "It doesn't pay us to advertise. It takes the man on the spot to get the signature on the dotted line." Of course, it does! But going back to our own experience in buying, how do we act? I see something advertised and I write for further information. Soon I receive a letter telling me what I want to know and maybe a catalogue followed by other printed matter. Then, one day a traveling representative of the house comes along and, if he is a good "closer," he books my order. But let us keep this in mind, that nowadays the traveler is not so much the salesman as he is the closer. He gets the signature on the dotted line, but he merely completes a sale already made. In many cases—in most cases, I venture to say—the actual sale has been made in advance of his coming. The house must prepare the way for the man on the road; it must make the public acquainted with the house and with the goods it sells. Advertising sells goods; the travelers gather up the orders.

The nonadvertising nurseryman who depends solely on agents to get business is operating at an extraordinary and unnecessary expense. He figures generally that the retail selling price must be five times the wholesale or cost price. That is, to make a fair profit, it is necessary to charge an advance of 500 per cent over cost. Experience seems to show that to be necessary. But why is it necessary? Isn't it a fact that those who buy through agents are one-time buyers? I should say that eighty per cent of them are. Ask any farmer where he bought his trees and nine times out of ten he will say: "In Winchester," or, "In Rochester," or, "In Pennsylvania." Rarely will he remember the firm's name. That is because the firm has not taken the trouble to remind him; he does not find its advertisement in his paper; he receives no catalogues. And after his first purchase, he becomes a customer lost; an asset

Montgomery's Priscilla

That's the name of the new pink rose! The name will be Priscilla probably after the public has had it a while, but we have had to add the prefix to cover the rules of nomenclature.

In order to get someone who knows more about roses than we do to give an unbiased, honest opinion on the merits of this rose, we have placed 12 plants of it with each of the following rose growers:

gone to waste. The customers of the advertising nurserymen include a much larger percentage of regular buyers. They receive constant reminders in the way of letters and catalogues and on the advertising pages of their papers. Now, isn't it an unusual selling expense if eighty per cent of your customers are only one-time buyers? Each one of those orders must yield its own profit, but many successful merchants say that first orders often cost them as much as they get from the sale. The advantage is in establishing a contact that can be followed up. Agency firms have the same opportunity and their figures on selling expense would seem to indicate the same need. To lose eighty per cent of each year's customers is a tremendous loss in potential profits. Salesmen should have the support of the house they represent and the best support they can have with the public is intelligent advertising in the territory they cover. If you don't believe it, ask your agents. I know the answer, because I have been an agent myself.

Need for Advertising.

All of us have noticed that during the last few years there has been little nursery advertising. Space has been small or not used at all. Catalogues have been fewer and not so good in quality. I have asked, why? And it seems that the shortage of stock and the reaction following the war made it unnecessary to try to get business. The orders came without effort for even more than could be supplied. But some successful merchants in other lines carried their usual advertising during the war years, when they could not fill a fraction of the orders they received. And right now they are doing business where others complain there are no orders. They figured that there is something besides immediate orders to work for; and that is the future orders; they advertised to keep in touch with the buying public and to conserve the good-will represented in their business. In our line, feast and famine follow each other with great regularity. We have had two fat years. Beginning in the spring,

FRENCH HYDRANGEA

NEED ANY

HYDRANGEAS, that are good, that will bloom and that will return profits? Ours are very good this season, better than ever and they are priced right. As to varieties, we have them, all that are good, French and Otaksa, in any shade from pink to red, also white, while some come blue. Baby Bimbenet, Lilie Mouillere and Mme. Maurice Hamar especially good and in any quantity. They were grown in the field, but are now in pots and hurrying to root through and make themselves fit for forcing. We can supply them from 4, 5, 6 and 7-in. pots at 25c, 35c, 50c and 75c each; specimen plants from $1.00 to $3.00 each. No charge for packing. Delivery from Oct. 1, on. Get them early and have them established while they are full of life; it means so much to you. Order enough; business is on the mend; be ready with a big lot when money circulates again.

ROSES

Ramblers and Baby Ramblers, all on their own roots.

The Ramblers have been grown in the field for two years, every one tied up to stakes to ripen the wood; they are good. Dorothy Perkins, Excelsior and Tausendschoen, 30c each and charges for boxes.

The Baby Ramblers have been in the field for one year and have done well. The strongest only will be lifted. Do not compare them with budded stock, but as to blooming, they will do as well or better. Baby Rambler, Baby Tausendschoen, Clothilde Soupert, Ellen Poulsen and Erna Teschendorff. 25c each, no charge for packing. Delivery from early November on.

we shall probably have more stock to sell than for some years back. We are going to feel the necessity to make the selling effort that has been unnecessary lately. The farmers, on whom we depend largely for buyers, are not in good shape right now and it doesn't look as though they will be in better shape soon. Also, shortage of stock and comparatively high prices have encouraged large plantings by nurserymen, by used-to-be nurserymen, by never-will-be nurserymen, by farmers and orchardists. The latter seem to think that they can grow trees cheaper than they can buy them, while the farmers, many of them, compare the prices for farm crops with prices for trees and they buy grafts and plant them. I do not mean to suggest that there is a surplus of stock in sight or that we are likely to see any serious overproduction. What I mean is the time has come when our market must be worked; our field must be intensively cultivated.

This country is not likely to see any necessary surplus of stock for years to come, if at all. We must not think of surplus except as spur to selling effort. We have a great, broad, undeveloped land with 20,000,000 homes and more homes needed. High rents and city costs are sending families into the suburbs

NEW YORK SUMMER MEETING.

The summer meeting of the New York State Nurserymen's Association was held at Geneva, N. Y., September 10. About fifty were in attendance. The location selected, on the shores of Seneca lake, was ideal and the weather was perfect. There was a ball game, after which the members partook of luncheon.

The business meeting was held in the open air. Practical talks were given by Dr. George G. Atwood, of the New York state department of agriculture; J. M. Pitkin, Charles O. Warner and John H. Dayton.

Dinner was served at 6 p. m. in a beautiful grove on the shore of the lake. Altogether it was a most enjoyable and instructive occasion.

PAINESVILLE, O.

The heavy rainfall of last week was a boon to the nurserymen of this section. The ground has been hard and dry, which made it difficult to dig stock to advantage.

W. A. Betz, nurseryman of Bedford, O., has sold his land at that place and is soon to move here, having purchased a tract of land near the nursery of T. R. Norman & Sons.

Joseph W. Kallay, of the Donewell Nurseries, has purchased the greenhouse formerly owned by Horace Everet and is erecting it at his nursery.

Ryehlik's Flower Gardens intend to start digging their gladioli next week.

W. H. Nichols & Son have a nice lot of perennials to offer this fall.

Fred Probst, landscape architect of Dover, O., purchased several truck loads of nursery stock here last week.

R. A. Cawley again carried away first honors in the rifle shoot of the Paradise Club, held recently. T. J. M.

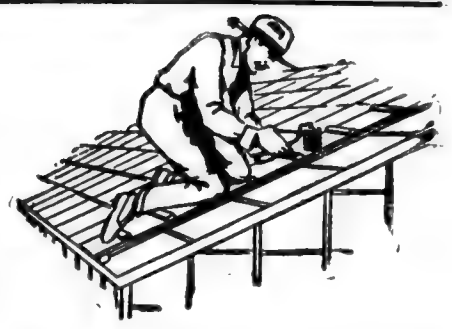
Asbestfalt

(REG. U. S. PATENT OFF.)



An Elastic Cement That Expands and Contracts With the Weather

Make your greenhouse weather-tight with Asbestfalt, the elastic cement that never gets hard, cracks or peels in cold weather or runs in hot weather.

$1.25 per gallon. Why pay more?

You can't get anything better no matter how much more you pay. The ingredients are of the purest; weighs but 10 pounds to the gallon.

With the scarcity of coal and its high prices, the careful application of Asbestfalt will more than pay for itself by keeping your greenhouse air-tight.

To insure best results, apply Asbestfalt with our Liquid Putty Machine, price $2.00. With every barrel purchase of Asbestfalt, one machine free.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

COAL OUTPUT STILL DROPPING.

The cooler weather of September has brought no improvement in the soft coal market and consequently production, already dangerously low, slumped still farther. It is feared that when the temperature falls to the point that consumers must make their purchases and reopening factories add to the demand, there will be a sharp rise in price, accompanied by a shortage that may prove disastrous to those whose bins are now empty.

Soft coal production went down again during the week ended September 3. The total output is placed at 7,571,000 net tons, a decrease compared with the week preceding of 200,000 tons. The following week, ended September 10, a still further drop, to 7,035,000 net tons, was recorded.

Production of bituminous averaged 1,279,000 tons in the twenty-seven working days of August, and the total output for the month is placed at 34,538,000 tons. Although an increase of 4,153,000 tons over July, this was far below normal for August. In the eight years preceding, the period over which records of monthly output extend, the lowest figure for August occurred in 1914. Yet that month showed 37,751,000 tons, or 3,213,000 tons more than August, 1920.

If the remaining four months of 1921 yield no greater output than the first eight months, the total for the year will be less than 400,000,000 tons. The last year in which the country required less than 400,000,000 tons was 1909.

& Baldocchi team consists of V. L. Podesta, captain; N. A. Baldocchi, E. Goeppner, E. Mangina, A. J. Podesta, and, in case of emergency, D. Bacigalupi. Their opponents are Louis Capurro, captain; A. Gillette, Gus Taylor, Dan Lichtenstein and Baptisto Pagano. Victor Ferrari will be the official score-keeper.

Fred C. Jaeger & Son are elated over the opening of the refrigerator car season and the way in which the entire staff has to man the packing boxes to get out the orders.

"Chrysanthemums are hard and ripe, in good shape for shipping," stated M. Domoto, of Domoto Bros. "The season is now here when they reach the whole country in excellent condition."

Enomoto & Co., Inc., are now in the thick of their chrysanthemum season, with a good crop of Chrysolora, etc., coming in. They are also dealing largely in strawflowers.

Kroeschell Boilers

Chicago's new Field Museum is the largest and most beautiful marble building in the world. It is 350 feet wide and 700 feet long.

A body of foremost experts was chosen to design this building, with the purpose of erecting a permanent structure that would be perfect to the minutest detail.

For the heating system the experts selected the best boiler known to them through their long experience in engineering. They selected the Kroeschell Boiler. The Field Museum is heated entirely by four 300-horsepower Kroeschell Boilers.

Select the Kroeschell Boiler for heating your greenhouses and you can be sure you have the best there is.

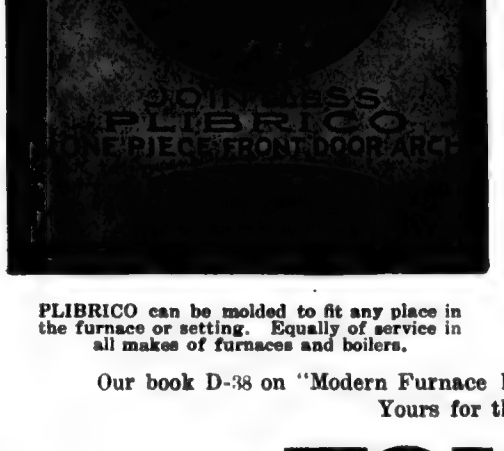
United Flower & Supply Co. that prices for chrysanthemums are more reasonable than they have been for at least two seasons and the stocks are exceptionally good. New crops of roses are coming in from some of this firm's growers.

Albert O. Stein has been able to take advantage of the warm September weather to stage a magnificent outdoor wedding at the fashionable summer colony at Ross. The bride, a daughter of Judge L. Schloss, was married in the garden of the beautiful family home, the breakfast also being an outdoor affair. September is completely eclipsing June as a wedding month, according to Mr. Stein's experience. On one recent day the firm had four weddings.



An out-or-town funeral of imposing proportions took several members of Joseph's staff to Stockton recently and they were busy there for two days. Joseph's is doing a rushing business in California jam, the glass jars being tastefully packed in oriental boxes. For local consumption, flowers are sent with the jam.

The florists of Oakland all express themselves as being highly pleased that the strike in the building trades is now settled and large numbers of homes are being rushed to completion. The growth of Oakland has been rapid and, though business was retarded by the trouble in the building trades, just as was the case in San Francisco, both the bay cities now seem to have overcome the late unpleasantness.

"Even through the strike, we never have had an unprofitable day, since our store opened fourteen months ago," declared J. J. Thomas, of Thomas & Harris, 1525 San Pablo avenue, Oakland. The Thomas & Harris store is artistically equipped. The fall social season is opening and Thomas & Harris are finding it especially promising in wedding orders. P. C. Harris is in Sacramento, on a business trip.

Hogan & Evers, florists of 1439 Broadway, Oakland, stated that business is better at present than it was a year ago. "There are numbers of new people coming into Oakland, and 15,000 to 20,000 homes are being put up," said George E. Hogan.

"Business is going on nicely," stated Fred Seulberger, of Seulberger's "Say It with Flowers" store, 418 Fourteenth street, Oakland. "We have had a lot of funeral orders recently, among them the Ebell Club luncheon and several wedding orders. Florists do not seem to have felt the business depression that the country has been experiencing in other lines. they hear complaints of business, but, when they go into florists' stores they get orders.''

Mori, Florist, of 1510 Clay street, Oakland, stated that the trans-bay social season has opened promisingly with orders for cut flowers, especially for weddings and luncheons.

Henry F. Voght, secretary of the board of park directors, Oakland, had taken bids for 38,700 bulbs up to September 20. M. M.

DENVER, COLO.

The Market.

An excellent demand continued through the last week. Shippers, especially, did a big business. Local demand was good, though somewhat erratic. Both roses and carnations are coming in more heavily now, although there is still a shortage of carnations, for no apparent reason. Fewer carnations are being cut than were cut for the same season in many previous years. Probably the hot summer has kept old stock from breaking so freely. Growers are predicting an advance in price as the quality improves. Although frost has kept off longer than usual and outdoor stock has had a long season, stock of gladioli and asters still clears readily. The shortage of indoor stock, together with a good demand, is, no doubt, responsible. Indeed, with most mums still weeks away, a killing frost now would make a decided dearth in cut stock.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Erickson, of Greeley, Colo., were visitors last week.

Conrad Lengenfelder and Harry Harlow opened the duck season Friday morning. They brought in nine. Mr. Lengenfelder is having his delivery car refinished, as the result of an almost disastrous fire some time ago. He is cutting a good rose crop now.

Fred Maler is building a large terrace. Mr. Maler evidently considers the demand for houses as profitable as that for flowers. This firm is cutting its first mums now.

The Elitch Gardens Co. has a splendid lot of begonias and cyclamens this year. Glazing has just been completed on the new greenhouse and the new propagating house is already being put to use.

Leo Grimes is cutting a good crop of carnations of fine quality.

There is only a short time left now to prepare for the flower show, November 2 to 4. It is to be hoped that the splendid spirit of coöperation that characterized the advertising campaign will prevail through this anticipated event, bringing in many who have given it no backing in the past. NURSERY ADVERTISING.

and into the country. Our people are, by inclination and because of ability, home-owners. That means tree-buyers. Ours is the richest country in the world; if it were not, we couldn't pay a federal tax of $5,000,000,000 in a year of peace. We have over half the world's supply of gold in our vaults. Our bank deposits are the largest in our history. How much of this money are you going to get for your goods? Every home-owner is a customer. A man can wear only one hat at a time, but every garden has a place for another plant. And there are the great estates, the parks, the cemeteries, the highways, all needing the things we produce.

And all that market throughout the whole country is open to every nurseryman, no matter where located. Ours is not a local industry; few things are so widely distributed; Texas peaches are planted in Michigan; Maryland apples go to Missouri; Illinois evergreens find place in Massachusetts parks. Outside of a few nurserymen whose varieties and distribution are limited by climatic extremes, this market is open to all. The average nursery is limited in its possible growth and expansion by just two things and by nothing else, the capacity to produce and the ability to sell. A territory so vast can be covered only by printed matter—advertising copy and catalogues. Traveling salesmen can reach only a few. Each can well supplement the other; they go naturally together.

Writing the Copy.

No business that I know of needs advertising as the nursery business needs it; no business that I know of so readily responds to the effect of intelligent advertising. I don't mean to imply, now, that buying advertising space and distributing printed matter is going to make you or anybody else rich. There is a lot of money wasted on what some folks fondly imagine is advertising. I have already admitted that I think good nursery advertising copy is mighty hard to write. If I had any suggestions to offer, they might be these: Have something to say. Say it in few words; count 'em as you count the words in a cablegram, for they cost a lot more. Let every statement be frank, straightforward and absolutely truthful. Select a single line or a single idea relating to your business and feature it conspicuously in every advertisement. Vary the rest with the season. Talk about one thing at a time; talk about what the buyer is interested in. Avoid humor as you would a pestilence; you may be as ponderously dull as you can and likely as not it will be accepted for wisdom, but beware of wit. I'd rather advertise in a big paper than in a small one; its readers are apt to be better prospects. I'd rather advertise on the same page with a dozen other nursery firms than on a page alone; competition helps. The prestige of the editorial page gives weight to what appears in the advertising pages; therefore, the paper with a following is a good place to advertise. I'd rather have six inches in the biggest and best paper than one inch in six other papers. Large space is more effective and therefore cheaper than small space; but, large or small, remember the effectiveness of the wide margin. And when you have told your story, stop. Use short, everyday English words, and few of them. Offer one thing; but suggest others. Make it much meat and little gravy.

The Wise Way.

You advise folks to go to a nurseryman for trees, don't you? Now, we nurserymen are not advertising experts. It's hard to grow good trees; but it is harder to write a good advertisement than to write a good novel. A good advertising agency can present your story better than you can. The nurseryman must furnish the idea, the "reason why" as applied to his particular business, but the man used to doing that can dress it up better than you can. The advertising, the catalogue and all other printed matter must be in perfect harmony. They should be prepared together. Those in an orchestra play from the same score. Decide on what sum you want to invest in a catalogue and then you or your advertising agency tell your printer that you want so many copies of a catalogue of so many pages and to give you the best he can for the money. If the printer is a wise merchant, he wants your future orders; he is a fool if he doesn't give you all he can for your money. If you buy like the planter who shops around for the cheapest trees, you may possibly have an experience like his.

With our great, rich country and its buying prospects open to every last one of us, with our people largely the owners of their own homes and having a native wish to have those homes lovely and livable, with the greatest undeveloped market in the world ours to supply, we need not worry about surplus or prices if we just go about getting the business intelligently and aggressively. It seems to me that the way to do that, the way for those who sell through catalogues and those who sell through agents, is with good, truthful, convincing advertisements backed up by catalogues that must be real sales-messengers rather than handbooks on trees and plants. And in both there must always be emphasized that "reason why" —the thing that gets customers and makes them friends and holds them. Confidence and good-will must come first; the orders will follow. Nor must we overlook the value of continuity in advertising and its cumulative effect.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The floral tributes at the funeral of former United States Senator George Peabody Wetmore, twice governor of Rhode Island, which was held Tuesday, September 13, at historic Trinity church, were among the largest and handsomest seen here in many years. While Leikens had charge of the arranging of the flowers and had the family orders, all the florists of this city and vicinity were kept busy supplying the demands, while numerous pieces came from Providence, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and elsewhere. The casket was concealed by a floral blanket, by Leikens, of Aaron Ward roses, white bouvardia and adiantum. Governor Wetmore for many years had one of the most attractive show places in the entire summer colony, his gardens, shrubbery, trees and greenhouses being the delight of horticulturists from all sections of the country. At the time of the convention of the S. A. F., at Providence in 1896, Governor Wetmore's place was one of the few that were thrown open to the members of the convention on the occasion of their day's outing in this city.

SKINNER SYSTEM OF IRRIGATION
"Saved Their Bacon"
Last August, Louwerse & Company, of Perry, Iowa, wrote us:
"We have been having one of those old-time Iowa hot spells, and it is stil the same. Our bottom soil is all sand, and the stock began to burn up just as your System showed up.
To say, we are pleased with this watering system, isn't saying anything. From our little patch we sold $344.00 worth of cut flowers in the last two weeks; which would have been burned up if it hadn't been for your System. So, we figure it doesn't owe us a cent. It paid for itself in a few days."
So you see it pays to pay for it, because it pays for itself.
Give us the length and width of the piece of ground you want to irrigate, and we will send you some interesting facts.

W. J. PALMER & SON

LANCASTER, N. Y., July 20, 1921.

431 South Dearborn Street,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

Find enclosed check covering the last shipment of Pulverized Poultry Manure. We think very well of this fertilizer; getting extra good results wherever used. We have been feeding the rose beds in the greenhouses and like it better than any fertilizer we have ever used.

Yours Respectfully,
W. J. PALMER & SON.

For all Glazing — new work, tightening leaky roofs and repairing broken glass.

EVERTITE GLAZING CEMENT

Applied easily, quickly and economically with the new "Oh Boy" automatic glazing gun.

EVERTITE GLAZING CEMENT remains elastic at all times—forming a waterproof and airtight joint over the sashbar. It will stand the extreme expansion and contraction that a greenhouse is subject to and will not check or crack—nor will it harden. It lasts from five to ten years.

Mail us your name and address and we will send you full information.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

On the threshold of the new season, it is interesting to look backward for a brief survey of the last few months. The summer of 1921 has been a somewhat peculiar one, although, notwithstanding weather conditions and the general business depression, the trade has held its own with other summers to a satisfactory degree. Excessively dry, with frequent hot spells of brief duration, outdoor crops have suffered and the light rains of recent date have come too late to assist vegetation materially. Gladioli have done well and dahlias are coming into their prime, but asters have advanced little beyond the mediocre.

Roses are coming abundantly from the early house benches, although they are of short stem. They are of good foliage and stem and promise well. Carnations are making their initial appearance, but are only of passable quality. They have done well in the field and the growers have benched fine crops of strong, healthy plants.

Various Notes.

Theodore Peterson has been building entirely new benches at the Hogg Greenhouses, Benefit street, this summer and his plants all show good promise.

A new range of greenhouses has recently been completed by the Pomham Greenhouses, near the grounds of the Pomham Club, about a half mile from Riverside, East Providence.

Farquhar A. Macrae, 1138 Smith street, was granted a marriage license last week; the bride-to-be is Miss Gladys S. Barker.

The Lowood Greenhouses, at East Greenwich, have just completed a new office building which fronts on the main highway.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Nock, of Wheeler avenue, are on an automobile tour in Canada.

Scott the Florist, Broad street, furnished the small corsage bouquets of asters for nearly 100 ladies at the Town Criers' outing Wednesday, September 14.

Otis Corbin, 240 East Central street, Franklin, reports a big call for aster and dahlia bulbs.

A mortgage of $2,500 on property of Alexander H. J. Johnson has been discharged by the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co.

An addition is being erected to the greenhouses of N. E. Blake, on Avenue A, in East Providence. A barn on the premises is to be altered into a dwelling house. W. H. M.

Xenia, O.—The decorated automobile of the Engle Floral Co., owned and operated by E. Lampert, won first prize of $50 in a recent automobile parade, held as a part of the fall festival.

I ain't a blockhead 'cause I'm square.—JIM.

I'm busy right now turning out JIM'S ELASTIC for the greenhouse men and sending them a real glazing material in a GRAY COLOR that is QUICK to go on and SLOW to wear out.

Folks, JIM'S ELASTIC is a square deal article and it's made right and is good for bedding on new houses and fine for running over the top on old leaky ones.

When I get to it, I'm aiming to build a nice range of glass and putter around once more and even do a little watering and when I get old, I've got a little Jim Junior (named after the old boy) that I'm going to start out right and turn over these houses to, but believe me he's got to promise me first that he'll always use his Pappy's JIM'S ELASTIC.

The best way to learn about my SQUARE DEAL glazing putty is to try it and if you don't want to buy a cat in the bag, I'll send you a free sample. Respectfully yours, JIM.

BULBS

AMERICA FOR THE AMERICANS!!

You need no longer be dependent on The Netherlands for your Tulip supply.
Since 1914 we have raised Tulips in Michigan with great success and we are strong for them. You, too, can raise your own supply of Tulips. (See official report by the Department of Agriculture in the Florists' Review of April 28, 1921.)
If you are alive to a paying proposition, act at once and take advantage of this.

Owing to limited space on our farm at Grand Rapids, we are forced to sell the following named varieties at a sacrifice:
Early Tulips, Yellow Prince and Artus.
May-flowering, or Cottage Tulips, Caledonia, Gesneriana Lutea, Gesneriana Spathulata, Golden Crown and La Merveille.
Darwin Tulips, Clara Butt, Gretchen and Inglescombe Pink.
Planting stock, 2-year-old.....$6.00 per 1000
Planting stock, 1-year-old..... 3.00 per 1000

Grasp this: Next year you will pay $4.00 per 1000 duty on Tulips. Please send cash with order.

POINSETTIAS

TRUE CALIFORNIA POINSETTIAS.

This stock is grown from stock plants grown in California. They can be grown quite different from the old variety of Poinsettias. Last winter at times we would grow them real dry, then real wet, then in a 70 degree temperature, again in a 50 degree temperature to try them out.

After such treatment, we grew them with beautiful foliage from the ground up, and with an extra large bloom of the most dazzling splendor.

We are offering 2-in. stock of this same variety, as we grow no other, at $10.00 per 100.
Cash with order.

Great Falls, Mont.—It has been announced that Feiden's Flower Shop has moved from its former location in the Mecca Inn to the new store in the Liberty theater building, at 305 Central avenue. The greenhouses of the company are three miles southwest of the city.

Heacock's Hitchings House

The Joseph Heacock Co., at Roelofs, Pa., has three big iron frame rose houses.
The last one is Hitchings Built.
It is practically a duplicate of the recent Coddington houses at Murray Hill.

In fact, it was after visiting the Coddington range, and then looking over our factory facilities, that Mr. Heacock decided to place the order with Hitchings.

Mr Coddington puts much stress on the way his gables are braced and his freedom from glass loosening.
In fact, we are happy to say that Mr. Coddington's oft expressed satisfaction has been the deciding factor a good many times in the purchase of Hitchings Built Houses.

Having, in the last quarter of a century, built dozens of houses for Mr. Coddington, covering acres and acres, you can see why Mr. Heacock was influenced in our favor.

After all, what is more satisfactory than a satisfied customer?
If you would like to hear straight from some of our satisfied customers, the reasons for their satisfaction, we will gladly arrange to call on as many as you incline.

And you know we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

The Heacock house is 70 ft. wide and 600 ft. long. The gable center door slides and has a door within the door.

We have just been awarded the contract to add a 36x231 ft. greenhouse to the above.

These are the type of houses we have been recommending so frequently and they are the ones which have made so many friends among greenhouse men.

They are money-makers and no two ways about it. Will you give us a chance to tell you why?

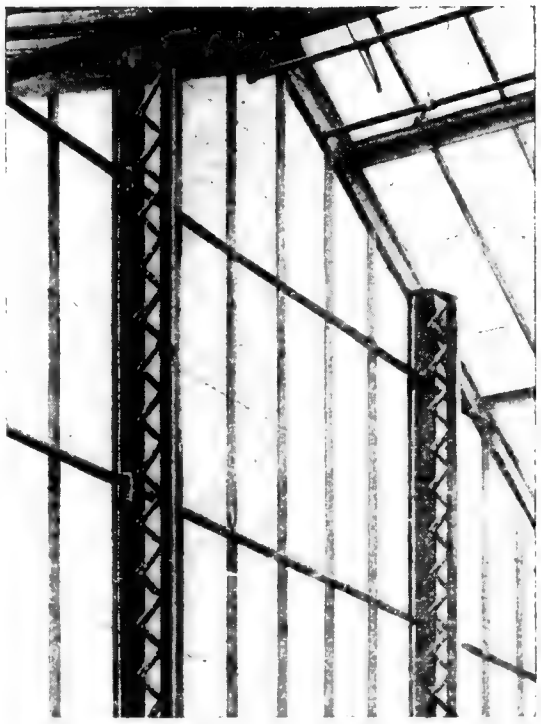
INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND FOUR

Speaking of Gables Let's Speak of This One

It has sides seven feet to eaves.

It is 60 feet 7 inches wide, and 22 feet 3 inches high at the ridge.



It has six steel gable posts, two of which are latticed.

These are the two longest ones, on each side of the doors.

These latticed posts are made of a 5/8-in. x 4½-in. flat bar steel, latticed to two 1½-in. x 1¼-in. x ¼-in. steel angles.

Light as these rafters are in appearance, their strength is equivalent to a solid rafter 5/8-in. x 10-inch.

They have a 300 per cent margin of safety over and above normal needs.

All gable posts or rafters run in one solid piece from the roof rafter down into the concrete footing.

The steel angle purlins are connected to the posts by a two-bolt angle knee, on each end of the angle purlin.

Although totally free from any cumbersome back bracings, this gable, big as it is, with 888 square feet of surface exposed to a direct thrust of the wind, is as staunch and strong as needs be.

It is so put that it stays put.

If the gable stays put, so will the putty.

You know full well that much glass loosening all over the house is caused by weak gables that weaken the entire frame. When a gable gives, so does the frame.

It's the alternate give-and-take that makes the trouble.

When ready to build let's talk it over together.

SWEET PEAS, Early Winter Orchid Flowering

I have the agency for Burpee's Seed, also Zvolanek's Seed; you will not make a mistake by buying Irwin's Seed, so take your choice.
TERMS: Less 5% cash with order. On charge orders, postage will be charged. New Seed is ready.

IRWIN'S VARIETIES

All the following are grown for me on contract, by one of the most reliable growers in California.

NOVELTIES

Prices on the following, 1 oz., $1.00; 4 ozs., $4.00; 1 lb., $15.00

Columbia—The best large flowering pink and white, same as Xmas Pink and White Orchid, but a decided improvement.

Prices on the following, 1 oz., $2.00; 4 ozs., $6.00; 1 lb., $20.00

All White—Early Giant White, long stems, one of the best White Sweet Peas to date.
Early Irene—Lavender, like Florence Nightingale, very fine.
Fair Maid—Early, finest blush pink, suffused salmon on white ground.
Rose Charm—Early, bright rose, with very large blooms. Produces four flowers on long stems.
Madonna—Early, surpassing any black seeded white variety, the best pure white, with extra large blooms, measuring 2½ inches across. Best novelty of the year.

Do You Receive What You Pay For?

Consider the different price lists published in the Florists' Review of September 8th, 1921. Read any four of them and note, if you will, the first Roses listed. One calls for Select, 12 to 15 cents; another, Select Long, 12 to 20 cents; another, Fancy Long, 20 cents; another, Fancy Long, 10 to 12 cents; another, Special, 25 cents.

WE ASK A QUESTION: Do any of them give you any idea as to the exact length of these so-termed grades? One does not know if these Roses are fifteen inches, twenty inches, or thirty inches. It is pot luck what will be given for any of these grades.

A retail florist, when ordering, knows what length is wanted and is disappointed if his order is not filled as anticipated.

Consider our system of grading. It cannot be more explicit. It is not necessary to order by inches, since, for the sake of brevity, we have employed a code to indicate lengths. For instance, when a customer desires 30-inch Columbia, the order would be written thus:

"100 COLUMBIA, FIRSTS"

It is understood that 30-inch—not 24-inch or 20-inch—stock is specified (which might be received when ordering one hundred Long Fancy, or Selects, or any of the various terms used).

If you want 24-inch Roses, why pay for 30-inch stock? Difference in length means difference in price. WITH OUR SYSTEM WE HAVE BEEN ABLE TO BRING A CONSIDERABLE SAVING TO FLORISTS. We have had many new satisfied customers. ORDER ROSES BY CODE. Try it for a time and note the advantages it gives you.

DUTCH BULBS

All these are Holland-Grown

Florists who have visited us and have seen our bulbs, expressed satisfaction as to our quality. We handle one grade only—THE BEST.

Holland has had a very favorable growing season and by having our own experienced Holland buyer on the ground we were able to select the best from the large number of bulb growers. There are more than three thousand well organized establishments engaged in growing bulbs in Holland. We gladly invite florists to visit and inspect our stock, as we are then assured that you will purchase your bulbs from us.

IMPORTANT—Prices quoted here are F. O. B. CHICAGO. You have no duty or broker's fees to pay. Freight charges are much less, as we ship from Chicago and save you the heavy freight charges from New York. The prices are very reasonable for the high quality of bulbs we offer and are Twenty to Fifty per cent lower than last year. ORDER TODAY.

John Watson Says:—

(You all know he knows the trade.)

"I'd rather advertise in a big paper than in a small one; its readers are apt to be better prospects.

"I'd rather advertise on the same page with a dozen others in my line than on a page alone; competition helps.

"I'd rather have six inches in the biggest and best paper than one inch in six other papers.

"Large space is more effective and therefore cheaper than small space."

[From an address before the Southern Nurserymen's Association.]

Many advertisers in The Review already are practicing what Mr. Watson preaches to all—and they find IT PAYS.

"Have had very good business from my ads in your paper and expect to use a good many more in the spring, as The Review seems to give me the best results I have obtained anywhere."
—William P. Yeagle, Bristol, Pa., July 26, 1921.

THE NEW SENSATION

(REGISTERED)

Seedling of 1917.

A beautiful, brilliant pink, shading to white center. Immense trusses, composed of double flowerets. Flowerets measuring two inches in diameter.

Habit compact, bright green foliage, no Jonnell, prolific bloomer, flower stalks forming in every, or every other, joint, and quite often two from the same joint at the same time.

It is a self-branching and very early bloomer, an extra good pot plant or bedder.

A money maker for Mothers' and Decoration Day.

Plants will be ready November 1, 1921.

Out of 2¼-inch pots.

$6.00 per doz., $45.00 per 100

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

TORONTO HOSTS OF THE F. T. D.

Next month, for the first time a Canadian city has had the privilege, Toronto will welcome the F. T. D. That visitors may get a more intimate knowledge of those whom they will meet there, some personal notes regarding the leading florists of Toronto are given in these pages.

TORONTO, where the 1921 F. T. D. convention will be held October 11 to 13, is the center of a large number of important cities: Kingston, the Limestone city; Peterborough, the Electric city; Ottawa, the Capital city; London, the Maple city; Brantford, the Telephone city; Hamilton, the Birmingham of Canada. Toronto herself is the Queen city. All these cities are the homes of many live, up-to-date florists. Visitors coming from Niagara through Hamilton and those motoring from Detroit through London will meet many friends in the trade along the way.

The Queen city is most beautifully located on the northern shore of Lake Ontario and covers an area of thirty-two square miles. It is the capital of the province of Ontario and is an important manufacturing city. The population of the city proper is 550,000 and there are many populous suburbs adjacent to the city.

The land devoted to parks totals over 1,472 acres and there are in addition 400 acres of water park lots. The parks include Island, Exhibition, High and Riverdale parks and the Humber boulevard.

There are about eighty flower shops in Toronto and new ones are being opened continually. This article gives a few facts about some of the old, established shops and growers. It does not presume to be complete. It can only give an idea of the extent of the business and point out those florists whom visitors, in seeing the sights of the trade in Toronto, will not wish to miss.

H. G. Dillemuth.

H. G. Dillemuth, the vice-president of the F. T. D., whose store is at 123 King street, west, is one of the personally best known florists in the city. He was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., March 28, 1876, and started in the florists' business early in life, with Fred Burki, president of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. Mr. Burki, a former president of the S. A. F., is an uncle of Mr. Dillemuth and gave him a good insight into the florists' business. Later, Mr. Dillemuth was connected with Patterson Bros. and A. M. Murdock, of Pittsburgh. He was always interested in anything pertaining to the development of the business and he advanced rapidly. He had an opportunity to go to Toronto as manager of one of the leading firms there and he accepted the position.

Seeing the possibilities for business in the Queen city, he decided to go into business for himself in 1907.

He is one of the few retailers who know plants and flowers, having had considerable experience in greenhouses and with outside stock. He is in demand at many shows to judge stock. A few years ago, when competition was keen at local shows, he was always found to be among the leaders when the prizes were distributed.

His first store was on Spadina avenue, but finding that business was better downtown, he moved to the present address, where he has built up a large trade.

He is always active in association work and is a past-president of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the Toronto Retail Florists' Club. He is vice-president of the F. T. D., of which organization he was a director for several years.

A greenhouse is operated in connection with his store, for growing decorative stock. He has had many large decorations, including the immense armories for the governor-general's ball when the Duke of Connaught was governor.

Mr. Dillemuth is a Mason and a Presbyterian. He is the Rotarian florist in Toronto and never loses a chance to boost the slogan, "Say It with Flowers." During the past season he addressed the Rotary Club, the Electric Club and the Business Club on floriculture and the F. T. D.

H. G. Dillemuth.

Head of the Toronto Hosts of the F. T. D., October 11 to 13.

John H. Dunlop.

Famous as rose grower as well as retailer, John H. Dunlop is known all over the continent. He was born in New York, January 7, 1855. He went to Toronto at the age of 7. Returning to New York, he went again to Toronto in 1875, when he opened a telegraph office in the Queen's hotel. In 1880 he erected a small greenhouse on Markham street, north of College street. The next year the 6x12 greenhouse was doubled. In 1882 he erected an 8x50 house and the following year this was replaced by a house 12x50 feet. This was a three-quarter span house.

With Henry Winnett he erected a large greenhouse on Lansdowne avenue in 1885. This was enlarged until they had 400,000 square feet. Mr. Dunlop was the first to force lilies of the valley and to use butted glass and raised benches.

Mr. Dunlop opened a retail store on Yonge street, near College, and then moved to 5 King street, west, where he was located for years. He moved to 96 Yonge street and was located there for fifteen years. In 1913 the property at Lansdowne avenue was found not suitable for growing flowers, owing to the influx of factories, and Mr. Dunlop and Mr. Winnett decided to sever their partnership of thirty-five years. Mr. Dunlop moved to Richmond Hill, where he has carried on business under the name of J. H. Dunlop & Son.

The store on Yonge street being found too small for the growing retail business, he moved to 8 and 10 Adelaide street, west, and in 1914 increased quarters were secured, which enabled the wholesale department to be housed in the same building.

The store was always conducted separately from the greenhouses, but in 1919, after Frank had come home from the war, it was deemed advisable to incorporate the retail department as a separate concern, the name of Dunlop's, Ltd., being given to it. The building on Adelaide street, with a frontage of sixty-five feet and three stories high, was purchased. The store is one of the finest in the country and has every convenience of a modern flower store. The retail department is capitalized at $150,000. The officers are: President, John H. Dunlop; vice-president, Frank D. Dunlop; secretary-treasurer and managing director, George M. Geraghty. Mr. Geraghty is a most capable manager, who has been with Mr. Dunlop for fourteen years. He was the first president of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club and of the Canadian Retail Florists' Association.

The growing department was incorporated at $350,000, with John H. Dunlop as president and treasurer and Frank D. Dunlop as secretary. Mr. Dunlop is widely known as a rose grower, the Dunlop rose having received awards from several growers' organizations.

Simmons & Son.

Simmons & Son was one of the earliest established florists' firms in Toronto. This was in 1894. The first store was opened at the corner of Carleton and Mutual streets by John Sanderson Simmons, after he had spent several years in the greenhouses and stores of some of Toronto's pioneer florists. The store was soon moved to Yonge street, just below College, and after a few months at this address to 266 Yonge street, where the business was carried on until 1917. During the stay at this address business prospered and the store was enlarged by taking in 268 Yonge street.

In June, 1914, another important move was made, when the beautiful, large store at the corner of Yonge and Elm streets was opened. The store has a frontage of fifty-one feet on Yonge street and extends along Elm street one hundred and ten feet.

The store is finished in ivory and is well equipped, with office, two refrigerators, large windows on both frontages, well arranged store room and large workrooms. In the basement is a large mossing room and under construction is a large cooling room for surplus stock.

The business was carried on under the name of J. S. Simmons until a few years ago, when a partnership was formed with his son, Ernest Stevenson Simmons, and the name was changed to Simmons & Son.

In 1919 they started their own greenhouses at Brampton, the South End Greenhouses being purchased. The stock is used wholly in their own retail store, none being sold to outside florists.

Simmons & Son do a large telegraph business. They carry a fine stock of flowers and a wide range of baskets. They deal in pottery and are specializing in this at the present time, as a large demand has developed for it.

Tidy & Son.

Tidy & Son are the oldest retail florists in Toronto, having been established in 1878. Three generations have been connected with the business. The firm has a rather lengthy history. They started with greenhouses on Bleeker street, but these were pulled down eighteen years ago. The store was first located on Yonge street, where Simpson's large department store is now located. The first move was to 49 King street, west, and then to 75 King street, west, where they carried on business for fourteen years. Eight years ago they moved to their present store, at 79 King street, west.

The store is 21x100 feet. They have two stories and a basement. Upstairs is a small conservatory. In the basement are the storage cupboards, refrigeration plant and a large, airy workroom, 50x 100 feet. Both the store and the large garage at the rear are owned by Mr. Tidy. They have a large staff, who have been with them from ten to fifteen years.

In 1913 the company was incorporated with a capital of $50,000. The officers are: President, C. J. Tidy, and secretary-treasurer and managing director, S. A. McFadden. Mr. McFadden has been with Tidy & Son for twenty years. They enjoy a select trade and are noted for their wedding decorations, both church and home.

Mr. McFadden is president of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, president of the Canadian Retail Florists' Association and is an active member of other floral organizations.

Mrs. Percy Waters.

The store of Mrs. Percy Waters, at 445 Danforth avenue, is one of the finest along that thoroughfare. It has a frontage of eighteen feet and with the extension that was made this year is now sixty feet long. It has a fine display window, which attracts great attention. Among other improvements, a large new icebox was installed this year for keeping surplus stock.

The store was established by the late Percy Waters in 1913. When he died, in 1917, the business was continued by Mrs. Waters. She is an active business woman and has made a success of the store. She is a member of many organizations, including the various Canadian associations, the S. A. F. and the F. T. D.

Charles Cooper.

Charles Cooper, who has a store at 73½ King street, west, near Bay street, is one of Toronto's successful young business men. Four years he was in the employ of J. H. Dunlop, when the store was at 96 Yonge street and Frank Smith, now of Hamilton, was manager. Mr. Smith now has a fine store on King street, west, Hamilton. After leaving Dunlop's, Mr. Cooper spent ten years with H. G. Dillemuth.

Seeing the florists' business developing in Toronto and realizing there were great opportunities in this line of business, he opened a store of his own on King street, west. He carries the best grade of stock and enjoys a good trade among the younger people.

He is a member of the Parkdale Canoe Club and for years has been an enthusiastic supporter of this organization. He is a member of several organizations and a director of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club.

J. A. Neal.

J. A. Neal served a good apprenticeship before going into business for himself. Twenty-five years ago, when the Dunlop conservatories were on Lansdowne avenue, he worked there. Later he was found in the retail stores of his father, at 11 Queen street, east, and 556 Queen street, west. A third store was operated on Bloor street, west, for a time. Mr. Neal started in business for himself about seventeen or eighteen years ago. He was located at 368 Yonge street for a time and has been at the present address, 328 Yonge street, for about fifteen years.

Mr. Neal opened a fine, large new store at 135 to 137 Danforth avenue this fall. It is a large store, well equipped with all the modern requisites of a flower store, and overshadows some of the older stores in other parts of the city.

He does a large telegraph business, knows both retailing and growing, and gives special attention to delivery. In this way he maintains a long list of regular customers.

In the summer he spends much time at his summer home at Lorne Park, where he gives his time to the growing of pears, apples, corn, etc.

Thomas Manton.

One of the prominent individuals at the Canadian conventions is a grower near Toronto, Thomas Manton. He was born near London, England, September 1, 1851, and learned gardening with the late James Wier at Hampstead and at his father's place at Highgate.

He came to Canada in 1876 and was gardener for George Brown, at Brantford, for two years and for John MacDonald for four years. In 1882 he started a retail store with his brother on Yonge street, but six years later he gave up the store and started growing for himself at Eglinton on the site where he now is. He is greatly interested in association work and is popular with all the Toronto florists.

People's Florists.

The People's Florists is a well known institution in Toronto. It was established over thirty years ago by Mrs. Moore, and she has built up a large trade. She is an active worker in the various trade organizations and gives the same attention to building up her own business. The growth of trade made it necessary to open a branch store at 92 Queen street, east, sixteen years ago.

The west end store, at 336 Queen street, west, is under the management of Harry James, the secretary of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club. Mrs. Moore and Mr. and Mrs. James are all active workers in the club, where Harry James is ever ready to recall his southern home by telling some of his large fund of darky stories.

The east end store has been under the management of Miss Alice Hurley for fifteen years. A good connection has been built up on the east side of the city and a large annual turnover is enjoyed by the branch store.

S. A. Frost.

S. A. Frost is a Canadian by birth, born of English parentage at the top of Bathurst street, where the Canadian Pacific railway now runs. In the wonderful old English garden that his mother looked after, he first began to know and love flowers, many of which had never been seen in Canada before. From there he went to his older brother's greenhouses and he got there his first insight into commercial flower growing. Later he was at the greenhouses of that noted rose grower, John H. Dunlop, where he made a success as an American Beauty grower.

After a few years at growing flowers, he started in the retail florists' business at 284 College street, where he has been for the past fourteen years. Starting in a small way, he now has a well established business.

J. J. Higgins.

J. J. Higgins operates two stores, one at 273 Yonge street and the other, known as the Parkdale store, at 1450 Queen street, west. The stores are under the direct management of John J. Higgins and enjoy a large and growing trade. When the Pantages theater was opened on Yonge street, a year ago, the Yonge street store was moved across the street to a fine, large building adjacent to the new theater. During the past year the trade in the new location has grown considerably and many new customers now patronize the new store.

Mr. Higgins is an active worker in the various florists' organizations of which he is a member, the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, of which he is vice-president, the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association, the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the F. T. D. His summer home is at Long Branch, where he and his family enjoy the cool breezes of Lake Ontario.

W. J. Hoath.

W. J. Hoath is an Englishman from London, England, who is well liked by all in the trade. He knows both growing and retailing, having learned the business in an efficient manner before crossing the Atlantic. He is therefore always in demand at flower shows to arrange exhibits. It is noticeable that none of his work ever lost on arrangement.

He came to Canada in 1911 and opened a flower shop at 272 College street, near Spadina avenue. Here he has built up a good trade. He is a member of several organizations.

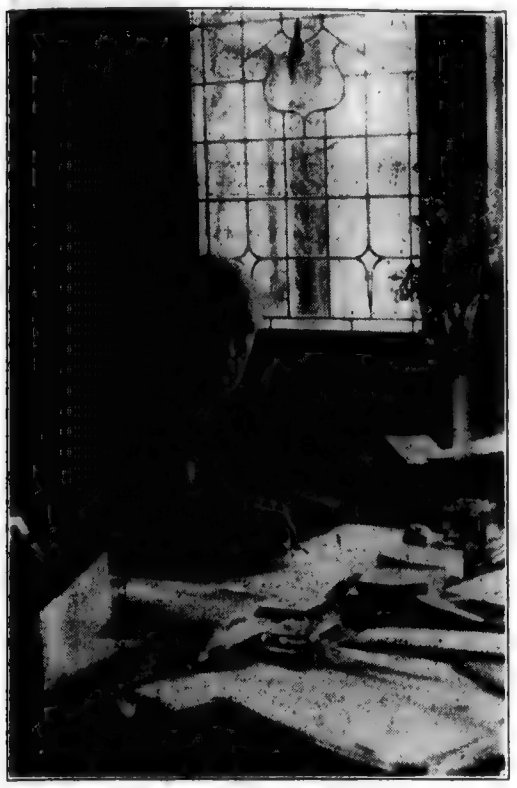
When he opened his shop he took into his employ James Lawrie, who became an active and efficient helper, eager to learn the trade. Under Mr. Hoath as a teacher, he became thoroughly proficient, and when he returned from overseas in 1918, he was taken into partnership. Mr. Lawrie celebrated the event by entering the state of matrimony, but Mr. Hoath continues in the lone star state.

Miller & Son.

Immediately north of St. Clair avenue and easily reached by a St. Clair car is the range of Miller & Son, on Lauder avenue. The range is located in York county, adjacent to the city. Fred Miller has been reeve of York county for years. He has been devoting much time to building operations and has erected hundreds of houses. These have been built on the Miller property, which has become quite valuable. In fact, it is forcing them to move to a new location. Fred Miller has been making many visits to United States establishments to get ideas on the latest practice and when the new range is erected it will be up-to-date in every respect.

Ed. Miller has been traveling through Europe, visiting England, Holland and Switzerland and getting supplies for a supply department which they intend opening.

Miller & Son are large growers of roses of all kinds, carnations, etc. They are members of the F. T. D.



Carl Grobba.

Carl Grobba, of Mimico, started business in 1895 with a small house, 10x35 feet. In 1921 he has thirty-seven houses, a large packing house and three cement storage buildings. The storage houses hold 200,000 bulbs, boxwood, bay trees, etc. One storage house is 65x160; one, 65x200, and the other, 20x150 feet.

A large range of houses holds 80,000 palms of all sizes, about 80,000 Boston ferns and about 100,000 small ferns.

Store of J. J. Higgins, on Yonge Street.

T. W. Duggan.

Mr. Grobba has three trucks on the road. Each autumn he holds a show at the greenhouses and this is visited not only by Toronto florists but by all within a large radius. The stock is fine and he has been adding continuously to his plant. Mr. Grobba is known as the "bulb king of Canada."

Arcade Florists.

A few years ago the store of the Arcade Florists was started by George Yavner in a small way at the entrance to the Yonge street arcade. Today he has a retail store in the Arcade and 1,400 square feet of space devoted to rooms for making up designs and supplies, as he has entered the supply field, carrying a large stock.

Aberdeen Florist.

The Aberdeen Florist is a member of the F. T. D. He is one of the more recent florists, but has a good trade. The store is operated by S. Dahlgorf.

CANADA'S LARGEST RANGE.

Forty-five Minutes from Toronto.

One of the most famous greenhouse ranges in Canada is that of the Dale Estate, at Brampton, about three-quarters of an hour's train journey from Toronto.

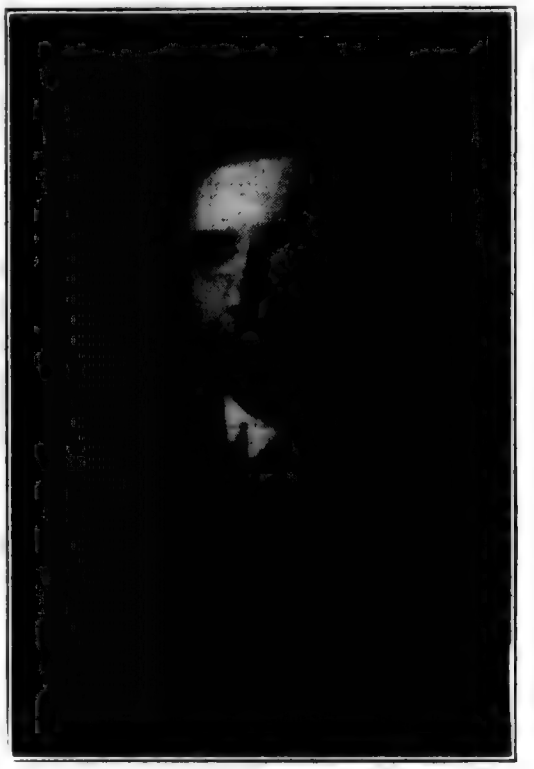
It is now just forty years since first the name of Dale became associated with the growing of flowers, in connection with market gardening, but when two or three greenhouses were erected twenty-five years ago, the history of the greenhouse business as a commercial undertaking in Canada practically began.

From one small house, fifty feet in length, attached to the homestead, the cultivation of roses and carnations developed year after year to such an extent that today the visitor has miles of walks to traverse, through the orchid house, up and down the four different rose sections 800 feet in length, across the vast ranges in the carnation area, while he is tempted to linger now and again to admire the many varieties of chrysanthemums that are to be seen to advantage during October and November.

No florist considers the visit complete without having seen the up-to-date heating plant, which has been in course of erection during the past two years and is now completed, with all the conveniences that will tend to make this part of the work in future a pleasure rather than what it is usually looked upon.

Flowers to All Canada.

Since the death of Henry Dale, the business for the past twenty-five years has been under the management of T. W. Duggan. The heirs have recently taken possession, and the business is now going as a joint stock company with exactly the same organization as formerly.



Flowers are shipped all over the Dominion, as far west as Calgary and Regina and as far east as Newfoundland. Fifteen years ago the flower-loving public had been educated to the advantages pertaining to the love of flowers for nearly all occasions. Roses were grown in large quantities for the Buffalo and New York markets, but in recent years the demand for all kinds of flowers has grown to such an extent in Canada that it is difficult to supply the needs of florists throughout the year.

The remarkable development of the orchid section has always been a matter of comment on the part of florists from the United States, and the reputation of the orchid blooms grown on the 64,000 plants at the Dale Estate has become such as to warrant daily shipments to Detroit, Chicago, Buffalo, Cleveland and other large centers across the line.

Three large greenhouses, 650 feet in length, have been added during the past two seasons, bringing up the total area to twenty-six acres, comprising about a million and a quarter square feet of glass.

Supply End Developing.

The florists' supply end of the business has grown considerably during the past ten years. It has been run in conjunction with the cut flower business so that it has been possible for the trade to count on quick delivery. In fact, the Dale Estate prides itself on its dispatch work and the supply end of the business is so handled as to enable the florists in a hurry for cycas leaves, ribbons or baskets to have these sent along with the flowers that they may be ordering over the telephone, to be sent out by the first express train leaving Brampton.

W. G. Peacock.

W. G. Peacock, who has been looking after the firm's books for the past seventeen years, has also been watching closely the development of the florists' supply business and last May took a long trip to the European markets in search of novelties for Canadian florists, who have been handicapped rather severely recently in the matter of exchange on the American dollar, running between ten and twenty per cent against Canadian money.

Samples of English and French goods will be seen at the forthcoming convention in Toronto and it will be interesting to make comparisons between the articles of the different countries.

After a few years at growing flowers, he started in the retail florists' business at 284 College street, where he has been for the past fourteen years. Starting in a small way, he now has a well established business.

J. J. Higgins.

J. J. Higgins operates two stores, one at 273 Yonge street and the other, known as the Parkdale store, at 1450 Queen street, west. The stores are under the direct management of John J. Higgins and enjoy a large and growing trade. When the Pantages theater was opened on Yonge street, a year ago, the Yonge street store was moved across the street to a fine, large building adjacent to the new theater. During the past year the trade in the new location has grown considerably and many new customers now patronize the new store.

Mr. Higgins is an active worker in the various florists' organizations of which he is a member, the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, of which he is vice president, the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association, the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the F. T. D. His summer home is at Long Branch, where he and his family enjoy the cool breezes of Lake Ontario.

W. J. Hoath.

W. J. Hoath is an Englishman from London, England, who is well liked by all in the trade. He knows both growing and retailing, having learned the business in an efficient manner before crossing the Atlantic. He is therefore always in demand at flower shows to arrange exhibits. It is noticeable that none of his work ever lost on arrangement.

He came to Canada in 1911 and opened a flower shop at 272 College street, near Spadina avenue. Here he has built up a good trade. He is a member of several organizations.

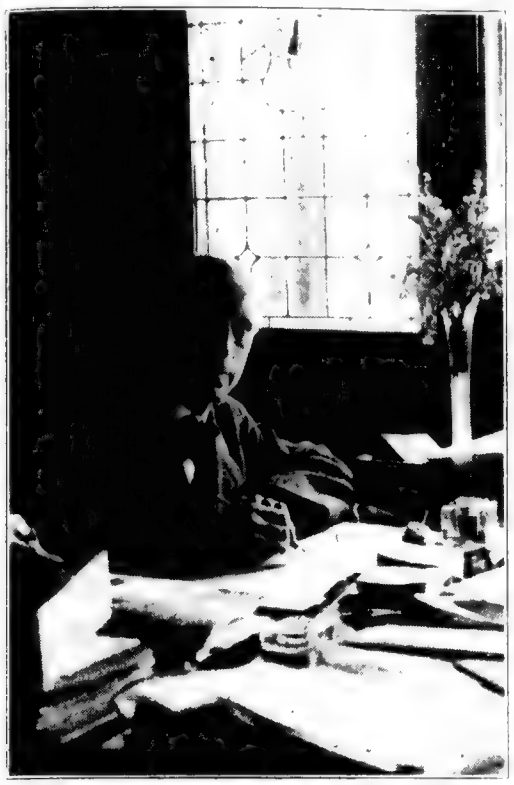
When he opened his shop he took into his employ James Lawrie, who became an active and efficient helper, eager to learn the trade. Under Mr. Hoath as a teacher, he became thoroughly proficient, and when he returned from overseas in 1918, he was taken into partnership. Mr. Lawrie celebrated the event by entering the state of matrimony, but Mr. Hoath continues in the lone star state.

Miller & Son.

Immediately north of St. Clair avenue and easily reached by a St. Clair car is the range of Miller & Son, on Lauder avenue. The range is located in York county, adjacent to the city. Fred Miller has been reeve of York county for years. He has been devoting much time to building operations and has erected hundreds of houses. These have been built on the Miller property, which has become quite valuable. In fact, it is forcing them to move to a new location. Fred Miller has been making many visits to United States establishments to get ideas on the latest practice and when the new range is erected it will be up-to-date in every respect.

Ed. Miller has been traveling through Europe, visiting England, Holland and Switzerland and getting supplies for a supply department which they intend opening.

Miller & Son are large growers of roses of all kinds, carnations, etc. They are members of the F. T. D.



Carl Grobba.

Carl Grobba, of Mimico, started business in 1895 with a small house, 10x35 feet. In 1921 he has thirty-seven houses, a large packing house and three cement storage buildings. The storage houses hold 200,000 bulbs, boxwood, bay trees, etc. One storage house is 65x160; one, 65x200, and the other, 20x150 feet.

A large range of houses holds 80,000 palms of all sizes, about 80,000 Boston ferns and about 100,000 small ferns.

Store of J. J. Higgins, on Yonge Street.

T. W. Duggan.

Mr. Grobba has three trucks on the road. Each autumn he holds a show at the greenhouses and this is visited not only by Toronto florists but by all within a large radius. The stock is fine and he has been adding continuously to his plant. Mr. Grobba is known as the "bulb king of Canada."

Arcade Florists.

A few years ago the store of the Arcade Florists was started by George Yavner in a small way at the entrance to the Yonge street arcade. Today he has a retail store in the Arcade and 1,400 square feet of space devoted to rooms for making up designs and supplies, as he has entered the supply field, carrying a large stock.

Aberdeen Florist.

The Aberdeen Florist is a member of the F. T. D. He is one of the more recent florists, but has a good trade. The store is operated by S. Dahlgorf.

CANADA'S LARGEST RANGE.

Forty-five Minutes from Toronto.

One of the most famous greenhouse ranges in Canada is that of the Dale Estate, at Brampton, about three-quarters of an hour's train journey from Toronto.

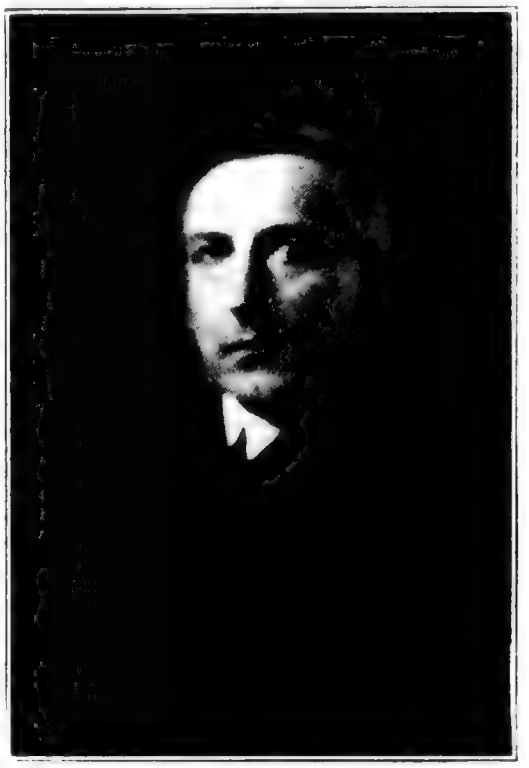
It is now just forty years since first the name of Dale became associated with the growing of flowers, in connection with market gardening, but when two or three greenhouses were erected twenty-five years ago, the history of the greenhouse business as a commercial undertaking in Canada practically began.

From one small house, fifty feet in length, attached to the homestead, the cultivation of roses and carnations developed year after year to such an extent that today the visitor has miles of walks to traverse, through the orchid house, up and down the four different rose sections 800 feet in length, across the vast ranges in the carnation area, while he is tempted to linger now and again to admire the many varieties of chrysanthemums that are to be seen to advantage during October and November.

No florist considers the visit complete without having seen the up-to-date heating plant, which has been in course of erection during the past two years and is now completed, with all the conveniences that will tend to make this part of the work in future a pleasure rather than what it is usually looked upon.

Flowers to All Canada.

Since the death of Henry Dale, the business for the past twenty-five years has been under the management of T. W. Duggan. The heirs have recently taken possession, and the business is now going as a joint stock company with exactly the same organization as formerly.



Flowers are shipped all over the Dominion, as far west as Calgary and Regina and as far east as Newfoundland. Fifteen years ago the flower-loving public had been educated to the advantages pertaining to the love of flowers for nearly all occasions. Roses were grown in large quantities for the Buffalo and New York markets, but in recent years the demand for all kinds of flowers has grown to such an extent in Canada that it is difficult to supply the needs of florists throughout the year.

The remarkable development of the orchid section has always been a matter of comment on the part of florists from the United States, and the reputation of the orchid blooms grown on the 64,000 plants at the Dale Estate has become such as to warrant daily shipments to Detroit, Chicago, Buffalo, Cleveland and other large centers across the line.

Three large greenhouses, 650 feet in length, have been added during the past two seasons, bringing up the total area to twenty-six acres, comprising about a million and a quarter square feet of glass.

Supply End Developing.

The florists' supply end of the business has grown considerably during the past ten years. It has been run in conjunction with the cut flower business so that it has been possible for the trade to count on quick delivery. In fact, the Dale Estate prides itself on its dispatch work and the supply end of the business is so handled as to enable the florists in a hurry for cycas leaves, ribbons or baskets to have these sent along with the flowers that they may be ordering over the telephone, to be sent out by the first express train leaving Brampton.

W. G. Peacock.

W. G. Peacock, who has been looking after the firm's books for the past seventeen years, has also been watching closely the development of the florists' supply business and last May took a long trip to the European markets in search of novelties for Canadian florists, who have been handicapped rather severely recently in the matter of exchange on the American dollar, running between ten and twenty per cent against Canadian money.

Samples of English and French goods will be seen at the forthcoming convention in Toronto and it will be interesting to make comparisons between the articles of the different countries.

SAN ANTONIO AFTER THE FLOOD.

The great flood that recently raised havoc at San Antonio, Tex., included among its victims the establishments of a number of San Antonio florists. F. E. Suchy, who operates his place at 412 East Ramona street, lost heavily. At one time the water was up to the ceiling and soaked almost the entire establishment. The Ideal Floral Shop suffered to about the same extent and was flooded just as badly. M. Monard, of 515 Center street, had only three feet of water in his store and he did not experience so much damage. The retail store of Paul Poppe, at 110 Jefferson street, was flooded to a depth of between three and four feet.

The retail establishment of Mrs. G. Jung, which is located at 105 Commerce street, right on the river, had water in the store to the depth of five feet and suffered considerably, although the place is in shape again after much hard work. In fact, all the stores are busy and coöperating in an attempt to get back into the game just as soon as possible, and, as one of the florists says, "the entire city has looked like a beehive. Everybody is busy cleaning and scrubbing. It will look like a new San Antonio. Everybody is getting something new."

F. T. D. PROGRAM

F. T. D. PROGRAM.

At Toronto, October 11 to 13.

The preliminary program for the meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at Toronto October 11 to 13 contains a long list of interesting subjects which are to be either the subjects of papers or of discussions. If they are all covered in the course of the three days, those who attend will get a great deal for their money in the way of suggestions and exchanged experiences.

The day preceding the convention the board of directors will meet at the King Edward hotel from 4 to 10 p. m.

All sessions of the association will be held at the King Edward hotel. The first one, at 10 a. m. October 11, will be devoted to the customary opening exercises. The afternoon and evening of that day and the following morning will be devoted to the topics for discussion as laid out in the program. Wednesday afternoon and evening, October 12, will be devoted to pleasure. The entire afternoon is to be given up to individual wishes to shop, to visit where one wishes and to drive around the city. Automobiles will be provided at 2 p. m. for those who wish to do the last-named. The ladies will be entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Waters for the ladies' committee. In the evening will be held a dinner dance and entertainment for visiting members under direction of the entertainment committee, of which Ernest Simmons is chairman.

Thursday morning, October 13, business will be resumed, and an afternoon session will finish the meeting.

The program of the business sessions is as follows:

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 10 A. M.

Meeting called to order, by H. G. Dillemuth, vice-president F. T. D.

Invocation, by the Rev. Canon Cody.

Address of welcome, by Mayor Church.

Response, by Chas. H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia.

Address, by S. A. McFadden, president of the Retail Florists' Association of Canada.

Welcome for Canada extended by President W. E. Groves, of Hamilton, Ont., in behalf of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association.

Response, by Philip Breitmeyer, president F. T. D.

Address of welcome from Canadian F. T. D. members, by W. W. Gammage, of London, Ont.

Response in behalf of American F. T. D. members, by W. J. Smyth, Chicago.

President's address, by Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.

General introduction of members in attendance by the F. T. D. roll call committee.

Treasurer's report, by Wm. L. Rock, assisted by the F. T. D. unit on finance, Herman Knoble, W. J. Smyth and Karl P. Baum.

F. T. D. news report, by M. Bloy, Hilmer V. Swenson and H. E. Larsen, assisted by unit of F. T. D. news, Max Schling, W. W. Gammage and Irwin Bertermann.

Secretary's report, by Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 2 P. M.

Selection of next meeting place.

Nomination of officers for the ensuing year.

Talk and discussion on cost of doing business: Credits and bookkeeping. Uniform accounting and bookkeeping. Suggestions to our members who are more or less at sea in regard to this end of their business. Has the present business depression affected the florists' business and where did it strike the hardest? A few years ago the Pittsburgh district was hit the hardest. It seemed to have had a far wider spread and more districts this year.

The F. T. D. from the viewpoint of the Canadian National Telegraph Co.

Our Canadian clearing house, facts and figures by Miss Helen Wick, F. T. D. office.

Our finances at present and for the ensuing year. Increase of dues to be voted on.

Our future October annual F. T. D. business meetings and suggestions for next year's meeting. Is it advisable to stop or discourage all trade exhibits and souvenir programs and cut down any expenditure for the local men in the towns where our meetings are held?

The cost of delivery: Could coöperation in localities by F. T. D. members be made to work out satisfactorily by combining some of their automobile delivery?

Standardizing and uniform sizes of flower boxes: Why not teach and practice a special F. T. D. box of flower service at $3 and $5? Geo. Stumpp and his $5 hobby box.

Refrigeration: Natural ice, or gas or ammonia machines. Discussion by retailers who have had experience in their shops.

F. T. D. window display and "Say It with Flowers" week to be held the same week throughout the United States and Canada.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 8 P. M.

Address by British commissioner of foreign trade.

Paper on F. T. D. in Europe, by Carl Engelmann, of Saffron Walden, England.

Connecting up link by link the florists of the world, by the F. T. D. and the coöperation shown by foreign florists.

Practical demonstrations of floral arrangements, also illustrating salesmanship, by Max Schling, Geo. Stumpp and chorus. Also in addition to last year's minstrel show as promised by the various famous actors who did so well at Indianapolis and who promised to do more for the Toronto meeting.

Films and lantern slides, by F. C. Weber, St. Louis, Mo., and Hilmer V. Swenson, Chicago.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 9 A. M.

Open discussion relative to business in all parts of the United States and Canada. Question box and answers.

Announcement of F. T. D. window competition and awarding of prizes.

Sunday closing: Should members who are now absolutely closed on Sunday be marked with a star on our membership list?

Debate on the question of filling F. T. D. orders for less than $5. Why not make a mutual or a binding rule to surrender the discount on all orders for less than $3?

The necessity of confirming orders and also mailing bills for orders at once: Make it possible to have all F. T. D. members get receipts from recipient for all out-of-town orders. The curtailing of orders; what stand should the F. T. D. take in a proven case? The secretary has on file facts where this undignified method of doing business has been proved.

Local advertising: Which brings the better results, newspaper or direct by mail advertising?

International Rotary convention at Edinburgh, Scotland: Report of W. F. Gude of how he lined up the American Rotary florists to have flowers delivered during the week of meeting.

Wording of telegrams, the importance and the results thereof.

Appreciation for all F. T. D. helpfulness, by Edward Sceery, Passaic, N. J.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 9 A. M.

Reports of F. T. D. clearing house and its benefits on exchange between Canada and United States, by John Besemer, F. T. D. accountant.

"Relation Between Retailer and Grower," by J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.

"Progress of the Next National Flower Show at Cleveland," by Herman Knoble and George Asmus.

The grading of flowers as it ought to be done to make it just from wholesaler to retailer as well as from retailer to public, especially roses. W. F. Gude and Irwin Bertermann have had this on their hands to take up with the growers and they will state their findings.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 2. P. M.

Suggestions from all in attendance for the benefit of our next year's meetings.

Debate on who is eligible to be a member of the F. T. D. and who is not. The versions and opinions of a good many members vary so much that a debate on the floor where everyone can partake is more than welcome.

Report of district representatives and work to be outlined in a more systematical way. Karl P. Baum's statistical report as given to board of directors was of such concrete form that it was of great benefit to F. T. D. office.

FERN SHOW WINS FAVOR

BOSTON'S BIG FERN SHOW.

Tropical Varieties Featured.

The halls of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society have held many notable exhibitions, but it is safe to say that none was more charming than the show of tropical ferns and orchids which opened September 22. September is classed as a poor month for plant and flower displays, but all the halls of the society were crowded with beautiful displays; in fact, some of the groups would have shown to better advantage if they had been allotted double the amount of floor space. The somberness of the ferns and selaginellas was relieved by the groups of rare and beautiful orchids, which were shown in great abundance. The general arrangement was excellent and pleased everyone.

The lecture hall was entirely occupied by the exhibit of Albert C. Burrage. It included magnificent groups of orchids, rockeries planted with ferns, grottoes with special lighting effects, grand collections of ferns, selaginellas and Rex begonias. W. A. Manda fairly outdid himself and occupied nearly half of the main exhibition hall, his groups being beautifully arranged. Not only ferns, but bromeliaceæ, cacti, Rex begonias, rare stove and greenhouse plants and dracænas were featured in his extensive collection, which required ninety large cases to hold them.

Wollrath & Sons, of Waltham, were extensive exhibitors and surprised everyone by the taste and originality of their display as well as its extent. Their rockwork, stream of water and pool were well placed and telling features, and their specimen ferns elevated on birch pole tripods were effective. The large collections of Brooklyn Botanical Gardens, F. R. Pierson Co., Thomas E. Proctor, R. & J. Farquhar Co., Mrs. A. F. Estabrook and others all added interest to a most noteworthy show, the first of its kind to be held here, if not in America, destined to be the forerunner of others of a similar nature. The attendance, rather small at first, grew as the beauty and extent of the show became noised abroad, and it is believed that the exhibition has done a good deal to cause a greater interest in the extensive and beautiful fern family.

The Ferns.

For a group of tropical ferns of at least 200 square feet, for commercial growers, W. A. Manda was first. He had a most notable display. Columns nine to ten feet high, encased in moss and planted with polypodiums, cyrtomiums, adiantums, nephrolepis and selaginellas, were effectively used and a wealth of old, new and rare varieties were included. Wollrath & Sons were second. Their group was charmingly arranged, nephrolepis, adiantums and polypodiums being mainly used. The rockery and water effects showed originality and were much admired.

For a similar sized group for private growers, Albert C. Burrage, Douglas Eccleston, superintendent, was first. His rockery work, grotto and general planting arrangement left nothing to be desired and showed the master hand. In all 158 species of ferns were included in Mr. Burrage's great display. Thomas E. Proctor, James Marlborough, superintendent, was second. In this group were perfect specimens of Davallias fijiensis plumosa, Mooreana, bullata and elegans; Adiantum Farleyense and Farleyense gloriosum; Polypodium Mandaianum, Pteris Wilsonii and Nephrolepis Verona. The group had a fine cibotium as its central feature.

W. A. Manda was first for a 100-foot group of tropical ferns; Wollrath & Sons, second. Mr. Manda also led in the commerical classes for a 50-foot group, twelve specimen ferns distinct and six specimen ferns distinct.

For a 100-foot group of nephrolepis ferns the F. R. Pierson Co. led. Included in their fine collection were splendid plants of N. elegantissima compacta, plumosa aurea, muscosa, Macawii, Victoria, General Pershing, Harrisii, Scholzelii, elegantissima compacta cristata, Smithii, Scottii and bostoniensis; W. A. Manda, second.

For collection of cibotium ferns, covering at least 100 square feet, Albert C. Burrage was first with some beautiful specimens elevated on tall bark-covered columns in the center of the lecture hall; W. A. Manda, second, also showing some beautiful specimens. For single specimen cibotium, W. A. Manda was first with a huge plant; Albert C. Burrage, second.

W. A. Manda had the best 100-foot group of adiantums, while for a single specimen Thomas E. Proctor was first with a magnificent plant of A. Farleyense gloriosum; W. A. Manda, second.

Platyceriums were largely shown. For twelve specimens Albert C. Burrage was first with some grand specimens. These, growing from picture frames, were especially striking; W. A. Manda, second. For a single specimen platycerium W. A. Manda won with an immense plant of grande.

For collection of polypodium ferns W. A. Manda was once more in the lead. P. Mandaianum specimens were especially noteworthy. For a single specimen of polypodium Mrs. A. F. Estabrook won with a grand plant of P. Mandaianum; Albert C. Burrage, second.

More Winners.

For collections of selaginellas and lycopodiums covering fifty square feet, W. A. Manda won. Included were fine specimens of Braunii, serpens, cæsia, Emmeliana, Emmeliana aurea, caulescens, Mandaiana and Pitcheriana. Mr. Manda was also first for twelve specimens of selaginellas and six selaginellas.

Albert C. Burrage had the finest group of selaginellas in the private owners' class. Included were some superb plants six to eight feet high. Specially fine were cæsia arborea, patula, Martensii variegata, cæsia, Emmeliana aurea and Mandaianum. This group was as greatly admired as anything in the show, the plants being remarkably well grown and the colorings beautiful.

Many Types.

W. A. Manda had the best specimen tree fern, with Alsophila australis. For specimen tree fern with plants or flowers growing on the trunk, Albert C. Burrage won. The trunk was encircled by quantities of beautiful cattleyas and oncidiums. W. A. Manda had several stones covered with bromeliaceæ and various fine-foliaged plants, which were quite effective.

One of W. A. Manda's Prize-Winning Exhibits at Boston Show.

For two specimen ferns in hanging baskets, commercial growers, Wollrath & Sons won with huge, well grown specimens. In the amateur class, Albert C. Burrage won with handsome specimens of Goniophlebium subauriculatum. For specimen hanging basket, commercial only, W. A. Manda was first and Wollrath & Sons, second. Albert C. Burrage had the best basket among the private growers.

Some immense fern balls were shown, W. A. Manda having the finest; Wollrath & Sons, second. For collection of fern plants which best show the fern growth from the germination of the spores through the series of different growths until the plant is fully developed, W. A. Manda, first.

For the best new fern not yet in commerce, Henry A. Dreer, Inc., first, with Dryopteris viridescens. This was awarded the gold medal. The Julius Roehrs Co. received the gold medal for the best specimen fern plant in the entire exhibition with a grand plant of Angiopteris evecta.

The Brooklyn Botanical Gardens had a comprehensive and instructive display of ferns, not for competition. Among the interesting plants included were Woodwardia orientalis, Cyrtomium Davianum, Campyloneuron Phyllitidis, Pellæa viridis, Polystichum varium, Elaphoglossum crinitum, Cyrtomium Rochfordianum compactum, Cyclophorus Lingua corymbifera, Diplazium zeylanicum, Angiopteris evecta, Polypodium punctatum, Nephrolepis biserrata, Polypodium glaucum, numerous nephrolepis, including rivalaris, Westonii, Randolphii robusta, Gretnai, Superior, Mayi, Zollingeriana, cordifolia tessellata, Milleri, Victory, Giatrasii and Mayi cristata.

W. A. Manda had a great number of interesting varieties, some old and now rarely seen, others new. Some of these were Aspidium capense, Lomarias platyptera and Gibba, Alsophila Mandaiana, Aspidium lepidocaulon, Polystichum setaceum, Aspidium cristatum variegatum, Nephrolepis davallioides, furcans and Duffii, Polypodiums Lingua, incanum, fraxinifolium, vacciniifolium, Juglandifolia and Knightii; Pteris Wallichianum, Didymochlæna lunulata; Aspidium longissima, Goniophlebium subauriculatum and Polypodium heracleum.

C. U. Liggit, Philadelphia, showed a table of nephrolepis, Macawii being noteworthy. L. J. Reuter was in charge.

The Orchids Attract.

The groups of orchids and tropical ferns were beautiful and wonder was expressed that such a wealth of orchid flowers could be had in September, when such flowers are scarce and high-priced. For the best group from private growers Albert C. Burrage staged a magnificent collection, beautifully arranged, covering 500 square feet. In the center was a large cibotium, rising from which were scores of grand spikes of Oncidium varicosum Rogersii. Included were numerous plants of Odontoglossum grande, Oncidium incurvum, Dendrobium Dearei; Cattleyas Moira, labiata, Hardyana, Fabia, Fabia alba, Mantinii, Iris, Carmen, adula, Hardyana alba, gigas, etc.; Cypripediums Maudiæ, Gaston Bultell, gigas, gigas Corndeani, Boltonii, insigne Sanderæ, etc.; Brassia maculata, various brassocattleyas, odontiodas, odontoglossums, vandas and other fine things.

For a 50-foot group of ferns and orchids A. N. Cooley, Pittsfield, Mass., was first with a collection which included some wonderful hybrids. Some of the best were: Cattleyas Fabia, Fabia alba, Lady Veitchii superbissima, a magnificent pure white variety; Moira; Princess Royal; Fabia alba, var. Her Majesty; Lady Ingram alba; Prince John Peetersii; Brassocattleya Ilene; Brasso-lælia-cattleya the Baroness; Orchidhurst, variety awarded the gold medal as the finest orchid in the show; Odontioda euterpe; Cypripedium Maudiæ; Brassocattleya Sedenii, Moeres var., and Brasso-lælia-cattleya Arderniæ. The second prize went to Henry Stewart, who showed a fine lot of Oncidium flexuosum.

For a group of tropical ferns and vanda orchids Albert C. Burrage won. Included were some fine V. tricolor and V. cærulea. E. B. Dane, Donald McKenzie, gardener, had the best group of cypripediums and ferns. Some beautiful varieties were included. Some of the most striking were Maudiæ, Lord Ossulton, Henry Graves, Jr., Watsonianum, Juno, Fairy Queen, Lord Derby, Princess May, Oakes Ames, Frau Ida Brandt, Rothschildianum superbum and Emil Johanson.

Albert C. Burrage had the best specimen odontoglossum, showing a fine O. grande. He also had the best vanda, showing a fine specimen of the rare and remarkable V. Lowii, carrying two of its long racemose spikes with forty flowers in all. The best cattleya in the show was C. Princess Royal (Fabia x Hardyana) from A. N. Cooley, Oliver Lines, gardener. For a 25-foot group of orchids, Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J., won. Some of his finest hybrids were Cattleyas Prince John Peetersii, Hardyana x Peetersii, Fabia alba, labiata alba, Cooksonii and Sophrocattleya A. C. Burrage.

George E. Baldwin & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., received an Appleton gold medal for a choice group of hybrids, included in which were C. Fabia, Fabia alba, Kienastiana, Hardyana, Moira, Mantinii, Minucea, Princess Royal, eximia and Iris; Brassocattleyas Carmen and Veitchii and Læliocattleyas carmencita, Nysa and H. Greenwood.

The Julius Roehrs Co. had a large and choice group of orchids. Some of the fine things included were Læliocattleyas Soulangi, eximia and Colmaniæ; Vanda cærulea; Cattleyas Peetersii, Fabia, Fabia alba, Brenda alba, Raphael alba x eximia, armainvillierense, Maggie, Raphael and labiata; Cypripedium Maudiæ; Brassocattleya Veitchii. They also showed a fine lot of foliaged plants and ferns.

Joseph Manda, East Orange, N. J., had a centerpiece of cut Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ and nepenthes, also Cattleyas Fabia alba, Maronia, Fabia and adula; Læliocattleyas Mita and Langleyensis. Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., showed Vanda Miss Joachim, Lycaste cruenta and varieties of Cattleya Fabia.

J. T. Butterworth had a table of choice cypripediums and oncidiums arranged with ferns.

Miscellaneous Plants.

W. A. Manda captured first prize for a splendid collection of cacti artistically arranged, which seemed to attract a lot of interest. The rustic looking pieces of what many visitors took to be stone from New Mexico or Arizona, were large clinkers dipped in cement. They looked rustic and deceived about everyone. Wollrath & Sons were second in this class. They had their plants rising from a bed of pure white sand. W. A. Manda had the best collection of bromeliaceæ, with a representative display. He was also first for a 100-foot group of dracænas and twelve specimen dracænas. Mrs. A. F. Estabrook had the best single specimen dracæna.

For a 50-foot group of Rex begonias, W. A. Manda won in the commercial class and Albert C. Burrage in the private growers' class. Mr. Manda had the best twelve Rex begonias and A. C. Burrage the finest single specimen.

went to George F. Stewart, head gardener to Arthur Lyman, who showed some grand specimens of cultural skill. A superb Dipladenia splendens profusa, nine feet high, was smothered with flowers. Dipladenia Ella Lowell Lyman, somewhat paler pink in color, was a gem. Two large pyramidal specimens of Clerodendron Balfourianum were covered with flowers. Other fine plants were Allamanda Williamsii and Lasiandra macrantha. W. A. Manda, who was second, had some nice things, among others Fourcroya Watsoniana, sansevieziа Laurenti and Mandaianum, a new philodendron, Dracæna Longii, Dracæna grandis, a crested form of Begonia manicata and Hedera versicolor.

Show Notes.

A luncheon was tendered exhibitors and some others at Horticultural hall on the opening day through the courtesy of President Albert C. Burrage.

W. A. Manda put in some strenuous work preparing and arranging his extensive groups. He won no less than twelve gold medals, nine silver medals, twenty-four first prizes, six second prizes and $1,150 in cash premiums. Mr. Manda and Mr. Burrage were the two giants of the show and I hope both will show the Cleveland people next spring how to set up groups artistically.

Ralph C. Benedict, of the Brooklyn Botanical Gardens, delivered a stereopticon lecture on "Ferns," with numerous slides, before a large and appreciative audience September 24, under the auspices of the American Fern Society. The lecture was most interesting and held the close attention of the audience.

W. R. Maxon, of Washington, showed herbarium specimens of ferns to many members of the American Fern Society and friends September 24. Quarantine 37 was well discussed. To thwart the debarring of new ferns, there were opinions expressed that our tropical colonies offered fine locations for the propagation of new things and a botanical garden in Porto Rico, Hawaii or one of our island colonies was commended heartily.

Assisting the regular committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in making awards were Robert Cameron, Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.; A. J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass.; W. R. Maxon, R. C. Benedict and J. T. Butterworth.

On the opening evening President A. C. Burrage entertained the officers and executive committee of the American Orchid Society at dinner at the Algonquin Club. There was a full discussion of the society's affairs. The membership was reported to be nearly 100 and steadily growing. It was decided to issue a pamphlet on American native orchids at an early date. Those present were, in addition to Mr. Burrage, Oakes Ames, George E. Baldwin, W. A. Manda, J. A. Manda, L. D. Towle, Edward Roehrs, Oliver Lines, A. J. Loveless, Thomas Roland and E. H. Lincoln.

BELGIAN GLASS TRADE.

Manufacturers in Belgium are in shape to export glass to any of the world markets, including the United States, and are hesitating only where the rate of exchange makes trade unprofitable, according to Richard Melchers, European representative of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. and general manager of this company's factory at Charleroi, near Antwerp. Mr. Melchers arrived on the Red Star liner Lapland September 17 to confer with executive heads of his company regarding conditions in Europe.

"More than 25,000,000 francs have been spent in rebuilding the factory of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. at Charleroi, yet there is a good deal of work still to be completed before operations can be resumed," he said. "This shows how completely the Germans wrecked this American factory, while leaving intact the seven Belgian plate glass fac-

For two specimen ferns in hanging baskets, commercial growers, Wollrath & Sons won with huge, well grown specimens. In the amateur class, Albert C. Burrage won with handsome specimens of Goniophlebium subauriculatum. For specimen hanging basket, commercial only, W. A. Manda was first and Wollrath & Sons, second. Albert C. Burrage had the best basket among the private growers.

Some immense fern balls were shown, W. A. Manda having the finest; Wollrath & Sons, second. For collection of fern plants which best show the fern growth from the germination of the spores through the series of different growths until the plant is fully developed, W. A. Manda, first.

For the best new fern not yet in commerce, Henry A. Dreer, Inc., first, with Dryopteris viridescens. This was awarded the gold medal. The Julius Roehrs Co. received the gold medal for the best specimen fern plant in the entire exhibition with a grand plant of Angiopteris evecta.

The Brooklyn Botanical Gardens had a comprehensive and instructive display of ferns, not for competition. Among the interesting plants included were Woodwardia orientalis, Cyrtomium Davianum, Campyloneuron Phyllitidis, Pellæa viridis, Polystichum varium, Elaphoglossum crinitum, Cyrtomium Rochfordianum compactum, Cyclophorus Lingua corymbifera, Diplazium zeylanicum, Angiopteris evecta, Polypodium punctatum, Nephrolepis biserrata, Polypodium glaucum, numerous nephrolepis, including rivalaris, Westonii, Randolphii robusta, Gretnai, Superior, Mayi, Zollingeriana, cordifolia tessellata, Milleri, Victory, Giatrasii and Mayi cristata.

W. A. Manda had a great number of interesting varieties, some old and now rarely seen, others new. Some of these were Aspidium capense, Lomarias platyptera and Gibba, Alsophila Mandaiana, Aspidium lepidocaulon, Polystichum setaceum, Aspidium cristatum variegatum, Nephrolepis davallioides, furcans and Duffii, Polypodiums Lingua, incanum, fraxinifolium, vacciniifolium, Juglandifolia and Knightii; Pteris Wallichianum, Didymochlæna lunulata; Aspidium longissima, Goniophlebium subauriculatum and Polypodium heracleum.

C. U. Liggit, Philadelphia, showed a table of nephrolepis, Macawii being noteworthy. L. J. Reuter was in charge.

The Orchids Attract.

The groups of orchids and tropical ferns were beautiful and wonder was expressed that such a wealth of orchid flowers could be had in September, when such flowers are scarce and high-priced. For the best group from private growers Albert C. Burrage staged a magnificent collection, beautifully arranged, covering 500 square feet. In the center was a large cibotium, rising from which were scores of grand spikes of Oncidium varicosum Rogersii. Included were numerous plants of Odontoglossum grande, Oncidium incurvum, Dendrobium Dearei; Cattleyas Moira, labiata, Hardyana, Fabia, Fabia alba, Mantinii, Iris, Carmen, adula, Hardyana alba, gigas, etc.; Cypripediums Maudiæ, Gaston Bultell, gigas, gigas Corndeani, Boltonii, insigne Sanderæ, etc.; Brassia maculata, various brassocattleyas, odontiodas, odontoglossums, vandas and other fine things.

For a 50-foot group of ferns and orchids A. N. Cooley, Pittsfield, Mass., was first with a collection which included some wonderful hybrids. Some of the best were: Cattleyas Fabia, Fabia alba, Lady Veitchii superbissima, a magnificent pure white variety; Moira; Princess Royal; Fabia alba, var. Her Majesty; Lady Ingram alba; Prince John Peetersii; Brassocattleya Ilene; Brasso-lælia-cattleya the Baroness; Orchidhurst, variety awarded the gold medal as the finest orchid in the show; Odontioda euterpe; Cypripedium Maudiæ; Brassocattleya Sedenii, Moeres var., and Brasso-lælia-cattleya Arderniæ. The second prize went to Henry Stewart, who showed a fine lot of Oncidium flexuosum.

For a group of tropical ferns and vanda orchids Albert C. Burrage won. Included were some fine V. tricolor and V. cærulea. E. B. Dane, Donald McKenzie, gardener, had the best group of cypripediums and ferns. Some beautiful varieties were included. Some of the most striking were Maudiæ, Lord Ossulton, Henry Graves, Jr., Watsonianum, Juno, Fairy Queen, Lord Derby, Princess May, Oakes Ames, Frau Ida Brandt, Rothschildianum superbum and Emil Johanson.

Albert C. Burrage had the best specimen odontoglossum, showing a fine O. grande. He also had the best vanda, showing a fine specimen of the rare and remarkable V. Lowii, carrying two of its long racemose spikes with forty flowers in all. The best cattleya in the show was C. Princess Royal (Fabia x Hardyana) from A. N. Cooley, Oliver Lines, gardener. For a 25-foot group of orchids, Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J., won. Some of his finest hybrids were Cattleyas Prince John Peetersii, Hardyana x Peetersii, Fabia alba, labiata alba, Cooksonii and Sophrocattleya A. C. Burrage.

George E. Baldwin & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., received an Appleton gold medal for a choice group of hybrids, included in which were C. Fabia, Fabia alba, Kienastiana, Hardyana, Moira, Mantinii, Minucea, Princess Royal, eximia and Iris; Brassocattleyas Carmen and Veitchii and Læliocattleyas carmencita, Nysa and H. Greenwood.

The Julius Roehrs Co. had a large and choice group of orchids. Some of the fine things included were Læliocattleyas Soulangi, eximia and Colmaniæ; Vanda cærulea; Cattleyas Peetersii, Fabia, Fabia alba, Brenda alba, Raphael alba x eximia, armainvillierense, Maggie, Raphael and labiata; Cypripedium Maudiæ; Brassocattleya Veitchii. They also showed a fine lot of foliaged plants and ferns.

Joseph Manda, East Orange, N. J., had a centerpiece of cut Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ and nepenthes, also Cattleyas Fabia alba, Maronia, Fabia and adula; Læliocattleyas Mita and Langleyensis. Incontrovertible proof that the Germans planned to destroy every American and English industrial plant in Belgium, figuring they were thus eliminating competition with themselves when they should take over the Belgian industries, has been brought out through investigations into the manner in which this and other American plants in Belgium were destroyed. Work on the Pittsburgh company's Charleroi factory has been in progress more than two and a half years and it will be but a short time before the plant is in running order.''

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Market conditions continue quite dull, with a spasmodic demand not at all lively. The best day of the week was Saturday, but this has been the case for many weeks. As indicating what the condition of the market is, it might be mentioned that September 23 roses were selling on the streets at 10 cents a dozen, and the offerings were anything but passé. Avalanches of outdoor flowers daily arrive at both markets, and the ash barrel is the biggest consumer. Asters still dominate the market, with dahlias a good second, and there is much waste with both. Many shippers of this material do not realize enough to pay express charges on their shipments, but if a conscientious wholesaler warns a shipper as to conditions, it is ten regulars and commands a better price, as a novelty, than other varieties.

Carnations are in better supply, but, with asters so abundant, meet only a moderate demand. The quality of arrivals generally is good for this early in the season.

Cattleyas are in heavy supply, and prices have dropped to a lower level than for some time, even the hybrid varieties going downward. The quotable range of prices is 25 cents to $1 per flower, but sales have been made at 20 cents. A few oncidiums are coming in, but the demand for them is small.

White lilies continue in rather short supply, and prices are unchanged. Lilies of the valley are in good supply, and prices vary from day to day as growers manipulate their cut. Today $6 is the top price, but tomorrow it may be $8.

With the exception of asters and dahlias, there is a notable shortening in the supply of outdoor flowers. There is a moderate demand for delphinium, cosmos, tuberoses, gypsophila, marigolds, zinnias and centaureas. October Frost chrysanthemums are arriving and the best bring $4 per dozen, with a limited demand.

Various Notes.

Traendly & Schenck are receiving a cut from a new rose which originated at their Rowayton, Conn., establishment. It is a yellow, somewhat paler than the parent, but pleasing both in color and form.

tubers have not done amiss. These conditions, perhaps, account for a great increase in the cut flower market supply of dahlias this year.

Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., is the author of an interesting article on ''Chrysanthemums for the Autumn Garden,'' in the October number of House and Garden.

The Horticultural Society of New York, coöperating with the New York Botanical Garden, staged a most creditable dahlia show in the museum at the Botanical Garden Saturday and Sunday, September 24 and 25. It was the best show seen there for some years, and the attendance was surprising, the hall being crowded continually. Despite recent wind and rain storms, the quality of the exhibits was good. C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn., took first in the big open class for largest and best collection, with A. T. Clark, Netcong, N. J., a good second. Mills & Co., of Mamaroneck, N. Y., took several firsts in the other classes. The amateur classes were well filled, and many seedlings of promise were on exhibition. Prof. J. B. S. Norton, of the Maryland State Agricultural College; Mrs. C. H. Stout, of Short Hills, N. J., and J. H. Pepper, Hempstead, N. Y., were the judges.

The flower show committee of the New York Florists' Club had a meeting Monday afternoon, September 26, at which preliminary arrangements for a show next spring were discussed.

chances to one that his warning will be disregarded, and shipments made to a competitor. It is truly a case of ''passing the buck.'' This comment, of course, applies only to the ordinary run of stock. Superior material moves without special effort, and there is enough of it to meet the demand, and the passing of gladioli brings an atom of comfort to the wholesaler.

Roses are quite plentiful and prices are about at the minimum. American Beauty is more abundant than for some time and the range of prices reflects this condition. Hybrid teas are also in heavy supply and move slowly at quoted prices; long-stemmed stock is rather short, but this is not at all regrettable. American Legion, the new red, has made an appearance among the

ROCHESTER DECORATES GRAVES.

Thousands of asters and other flowers were used last week at Rochester, N. Y., to commemorate the dead. The custom of ''blessing the graves,'' as the practice is known, originated among the Catholics of Rochester about ten years ago. On September 25 of each year not only the Catholics, but the Protestants alike, decorate the graves with as many varieties of flowers as are available. It is not a national custom, but one which is spreading to many of the neighboring towns and should be encouraged by all florists.

The illustration shows how extensively some of the graves are decorated. The decoration in the foreground is made up entirely of asters, and is worked out in a pink and white design. Large baskets and bouquets are also used, as shown by the illustration.

RECORD DAHLIA SHOW

DAHLIA SOCIETY'S SHOW.

At New York This Week.

The seventh annual exhibition of the American Dahlia Society opened Tuesday, September 27, on the top floor of the Pennsylvania hotel, New York, to continue for three days. It was the banner exhibition of the society and perhaps was the finest and most extensive exhibition held anywhere of the people's flower. The big "roof garden" hall of the hotel floor used last year to house the entire show was supplemented this time with the spacious conservatory, and both apartments were completely filled with exhibits. The attendance at the opening and throughout the remainder of the first day was large, so the officers of the society were assured that they need have no misgivings as to the success of the show. The outer portions of both exhibition floors were given over to trade exhibitors, and practically all salable space was taken.

The artistic value of the dahlia was fully represented, many of the exhibits being made up of baskets of flowers arranged for effect. Notable in this connection were the exhibits of the Peacock Dahlia Farms, Berlin, N. J.; Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, and the Dahlia Farm, East Moriches, N. Y.

The stock exhibited was generally of high quality. Among the flowers from seedlings there were some which were evident candidates for dissemination. Bigness was not a particular feature of the show, although three or four flowers were noted measuring nine inches in diameter. New varieties coming up to the commercial standard were hardly in evidence and old varieties, of course, were not to be seen. Staging was not completed until a late hour Tuesday and the judging was prolonged.

The Awards.

The awards in the classes open to commercial growers were as follows:

One hundred varieties, at least four species.—John H. Wiegand, New Haven, Conn., first; Mrs. Sarah M. Wakeman, Southport, Conn., second; Alfred F. Clark, Netcong, N. J., third.

Fifty varieties.—John H. Wiegand, first; Edgar M. Darling, New Bedford, Mass., second; John Lewis Childs, Inc., Flowerfield, N. Y., third.

Twelve show.—W. D. Hathaway, New Bedford, Mass., first; C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn., second.

Twelve hybrid show.—N. Harold Cottam, Wappingers Falls, N. Y., first.

Twelve decorative.—John H. Wiegand, first; C. Louis Alling, second.

Twelve cactus.—C. Louis Alling, first; Edgar M. Darling, second.

Twelve hybrid cactus.—C. Louis Alling, first; John Lewis Childs, second.

Twelve peony.—Meachem & Sherman, Stratford, Conn., first; Edgar M. Darling, second.

Twelve single.—Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., first; Alfred F. Clark, second.

Twelve collarette.—C. Louis Alling, first; Mrs. Sarah M. Wakeman, second.

Twelve pompon.—Alfred F. Clark, first; Mills & Co., second.

Best general display.—Mills & Co., first.

Best vase red dahlias.—John Lewis Childs, first.

Best vase, white.—John Lewis Childs, first; Mrs. Sarah M. Wakeman, second.

Best vase, yellow.—John Lewis Childs, first.

Best vase, pink.—John Lewis Childs, first.

Best vase, variegated.—John Lewis Childs, first.

Best vase, any other color.—E. Slocombe, New Haven, Conn., first.

Largest hybrid cactus bloom.—John Lewis Childs, first.

Largest show bloom.—Edgar M. Darling, first.

Best vase, twenty-five blooms cactus.—John Lewis Childs, first.

All regular classes and awards were to be duplicated Thursday, so that exhibits would be fresh to the close of the fourth day. The attendance was most satisfactory. The gate receipts were nearly $600 on the first day.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the American Dahlia Society was held Wednesday morning, at 10:30, in a room on the exhibition floor and was well attended. Secretary-treasurer Rathgeber made a lengthy report verbally, during which he explained disbursements and receipts, and showed the society to be in good financial condition, although the membership dues barely covered the running expenses, which included the cost of the bulletin. The expenses attaching to exhibitions and other expenses were met from the exhibition receipts, admissions and trade space.

This year 4,000 feet of trade space had been sold, and the receipts this year were about double those of last year. There were about 1,300 members in good standing and 1,000 in arrears. Some discussion ensued as to the status of those in arrears, but the matter was finally referred to the committee on membership.

The publicity work of the show, undertaken by Joseph J. Lane, was commended and a vote of thanks passed to him.

Prof. George W. Fraser reported on the society's trial grounds at Storrs, Conn. The heat and drought this season were harmful to the plantings and a scoring report on varieties could not be made until two weeks later. There were more exhibits in the garden than ever before, but scoring of a good many of them this season would be unjust. A vote of thanks was given Professor Fraser.

Prof. J. B. S. Norton reported for the society's trial garden at College Park, Md. Drought and other troubles had made it advisable to hold over the fifteen exhibits planted until another season. A vote of thanks was passed.

It was resolved that none be allowed to exhibit at future shows unless a member of the society.

President Vincent read his presidential address and received a rising vote of thanks.

Officers Elected.

A nominating committee presented the following names as candidates for election and they were duly elected on one ballot by the secretary, the president being reëlected on a separate and rising vote: President, Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary-treasurer, William J. Rathgeber, New Haven, Conn.; first vice-president, George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; second vice-president, James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; third vice-president, W. W. Willmore, Denver, Colo.; fourth vice-president, J. W. Davies, San Francisco, Cal.; fifth vice-president, J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.; executive committee, I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, N. Y.; C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn.; C. E. Walker, Paterson, N. J.; Myron E. Douglas, Woodbury, N. J., and Ed. Bedette, Huntington, N. Y.

Many questions bearing upon dahlia culture were asked by members, all of which, it was arranged, should be answered in the society's bulletin.

Trade Exhibits.

Displays were made in the trade exhibits section by the Dahlia Farms, East Moriches, N. Y.; Dietz & Trivett Co., 86 Park place, New York; Albert F. Clark, Netcong, N. J., and the Mannetto Hill Nurseries, Hicksville, N. Y.

Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., staged a large group of Patrick O'Mara dahlias in the center of the conservatory floor, comprising 1,000 blooms. It was not for competition. C. H. Tobey Co. had a well arranged exhibit, in which mignon and star types of dahlias were prominent.

Stumpp & Walter Co. had two exhibits, one of dahlias handsomely displayed in baskets and vases, the other of Dutch bulbs. The United Bulb Co., New York, displayed cut gladioli and Dutch bulbs. The Tobacco Products Co., Lancaster, Pa., exhibited tobacco products for fumigating purposes. The Skinner Irrigation Co., Troy, O., showed a section of sprinkler system.

The Julius Roehrs Co. had a splendid group of orchids. W. A. Manda, Inc., South Orange, N. J., showed tubbed and potted plants of Dahlia Mandaiana and a table of cacti and decorative plants.

Wm. A. Finger, Jr., Woodbury, N. Y.; Alfred E. Doty, New Haven, Conn.; C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn.; J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.; N. Harold Cottam & Son; Huntington Dahlia Gardens, Huntington, N. Y.; Chas. E. Walker, Paterson, N. J.; John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y.; Miss Emily Slocombe, New Haven, Conn.; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; John Wiegand, New Haven, Conn.;

tories in the same district. Incontrovertible proof that the Germans planned to destroy every American and English industrial plant in Belgium, figuring they were thus eliminating competition with themselves when they should take over the Belgian industries, has been brought out through investigations into the manner in which this and other American plants in Belgium were destroyed. Work on the Pittsburgh company's Charleroi factory has been in progress more than two and a half years and it will be but a short time before the plant is in running order.''

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Market conditions continue quite dull, with a spasmodic demand not at all lively. The best day of the week was Saturday, but this has been the case for many weeks. As indicating what the condition of the market is, it might be mentioned that September 23 roses were selling on the streets at 10 cents a dozen, and the offerings were anything but passé. Avalanches of outdoor flowers daily arrive at both markets, and the ash barrel is the biggest consumer. Asters still dominate the market, with dahlias a good second, and there is much waste with both. Many shippers of this material do not realize enough to pay express charges on their shipments, but if a conscientious wholesaler warns a shipper as to conditions, it is ten chances to one that his warning will be disregarded, and shipments made to a competitor. It is truly a case of ''passing the buck.'' This comment, of course, applies only to the ordinary run of stock. Superior material moves without special effort, and there is enough of it to meet the demand, and the passing of gladioli brings an atom of comfort to the wholesaler.

Roses are quite plentiful and prices are about at the minimum. American Beauty is more abundant than for some time and the range of prices reflects this condition. Hybrid teas are also in heavy supply and move slowly at quoted prices; long-stemmed stock is rather short, but this is not at all regrettable. American Legion, the new red, has made an appearance among the regulars and commands a better price, as a novelty, than other varieties.

Carnations are in better supply, but, with asters so abundant, meet only a moderate demand. The quality of arrivals generally is good for this early in the season.

Cattleyas are in heavy supply, and prices have dropped to a lower level than for some time, even the hybrid varieties going downward. The quotable range of prices is 25 cents to $1 per flower, but sales have been made at 20 cents. A few oncidiums are coming in, but the demand for them is small.

White lilies continue in rather short supply, and prices are unchanged. Lilies of the valley are in good supply, and prices vary from day to day as growers manipulate their cut. Today $6 is the top price, but tomorrow it may be $8.

With the exception of asters and dahlias, there is a notable shortening in the supply of outdoor flowers. There is a moderate demand for delphinium, cosmos, tuberoses, gypsophila, marigolds, zinnias and centaureas. October Frost chrysanthemums are arriving and the best bring $4 per dozen, with a limited demand.

Various Notes.

Traendly & Schenck are receiving a cut from a new rose which originated at their Rowayton, Conn., establishment. It is a yellow, somewhat paler than the parent, but pleasing both in color and form.

Floral Decorations for "Blessing of the Graves" at Rochester.

Julius Roehrs last week was serving as a juror in the county court of Bergen county, N. J. He had the distinction of serving on the first jury in the county to have women jurors.

Many planters of gardens along the country roads around New York have this season been offering cut flowers at their gates for sale to passing automobilists, and it would be interesting to know whether the purchases made by the road tourists were in quantity sufficient to affect the business of the legitimate florists. Dahlias, gladioli, asters and cosmos were the offerings noted on a Long Island road trip a week or two ago. Judging from the large number of dahlia plantings seen, with a good sprinkling of the better varieties among many of them, the sellers of plants and tubers have not done amiss. These conditions, perhaps, account for a great increase in the cut flower market supply of dahlias this year.

Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., is the author of an interesting article on ''Chrysanthemums for the Autumn Garden,'' in the October number of House and Garden.

The Horticultural Society of New York, coöperating with the New York Botanical Garden, staged a most creditable dahlia show in the museum at the Botanical Garden Saturday and Sunday, September 24 and 25. It was the best show seen there for some years, and the attendance was surprising, the hall being crowded continually. Despite recent wind and rain storms, the quality of the exhibits was good. C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn., took first in the big open class for largest and best collection, with A. T. Clark, Netcong, N. J., a good second. Mills & Co., of Mamaroneck, N. Y., took several firsts in the other classes. The amateur classes were well filled, and many seedlings of promise were on exhibition. Prof. J. B. S. Norton, of the Maryland State Agricultural College; Mrs. C. H. Stout, of Short Hills, N. J., and J. H. Pepper, Hempstead, N. Y., were the judges.

The flower show committee of the New York Florists' Club had a meeting Monday afternoon, September 26, at which preliminary arrangements for a show next spring were discussed.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Akron, O.—In the case of Grossberg & Cahill, bankrupts, notice has been given in the District Court of the United States that the receiver has filed his final report and that a meeting of creditors to consider the same will be held October 3, 1921, at 10 a. m., at 316 Metropolitan building, Akron, O. Harry L. Snyder is the referee in bankruptcy.

New York, N. Y.—The first meeting of creditors of J. M. Thorburn & Co., whose petition in bankruptcy was reported in these columns last week, will be held October 4, at 11 a. m., at the office of Peter B. Olney, referee in bankruptcy, 68 Williams street, New York.

ROCHESTER DECORATES GRAVES.

Thousands of asters and other flowers were used last week at Rochester, N. Y., to commemorate the dead. The custom of ''blessing the graves,'' as the practice is known, originated among the Catholics of Rochester about ten years ago. On September 25 of each year not only the Catholics, but the Protestants alike, decorate the graves with as many varieties of flowers as are available. It is not a national custom, but one which is spreading to many of the neighboring towns and should be encouraged by all florists.

The illustration shows how extensively some of the graves are decorated. The decoration in the foreground is made up entirely of asters, and is worked out in a pink and white design. Large baskets and bouquets are also used, as shown by the illustration.

McPherson, Neb.—C. E. Charlson has purchased the business that formerly was owned by C. A. Simonsen. The store does both a retail and a wholesale business.

Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y.; W. D. Hathaway, New Bedford, Mass.; Edgar M. Darling, New Bedford, Mass.; Meachem & Sherman, Stratford, Conn.; George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; Babylon Dahlia Gardens, Babylon, L. I., all had exhibits of cut dahlia blooms.

Walker I. Daniels, New York, exhibited a line of metal flower holders for vases and bowls. John Scheepers, Inc., New York, had a handsome exhibit of the Judge Marean dahlias, generally conceded one of the most artistic exhibits in the show. The Henshaw Floral Co., New York, exhibited a line of pottery and baskets. J. H. P.

THAT NEW GREEN.

Last season a new decorative green appeared in the cut flower markets, being offered under various names. In some places it was offered as Erica fern, or under names spelled somewhat similarly. In other places it was called Coontie palm, although the spelling was not always correct. Still others called it cocos leaves. The green sold fairly well last season and is being offered in increased quantities this year.

The correct name is Zamia floridana. It is known locally in Florida as Coontie, or Comptie. It is a cycad native in Florida and in some portions of the state is found in considerable quantity, growing in open, comparatively dry pine woods.

The leaflets are mostly opposite and consist of from fourteen to twenty pairs. The zamia leaves can be used for the background of sprays or wreaths, or they can be used effectively in any place where cycas leaves, 18-inch or smaller, could be used. They can be sold on the wholesale markets at a fraction of the price of cycas leaves, but at low prices they afford little incentive to the wholesalers because of the high express rate on the heavy cases.

The zamia leaves are bright, shiny, dark green and they are moderately good keepers, though when they begin to dry out they lose their glossiness and the leaflets fall one by one. They should be kept in water and in a cool, moist place.

C. S. A. SHOW PRIZES.

The following is the list of special prizes offered by the Chrysanthemum Society of America at the annual exhibition to be held at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, November 16 and 17, in which competition is to be open to C. S. A. members only:

Class A—C. S. A. silver cup for the best seedling chrysanthemum not disseminated; six blooms, one variety, on long stems.

Class B—C. S. A. silver cup for the best six vases pompon chrysanthemums, six varieties, twelve sprays, not less than eighteen inches long, to a vase.

Class C—Naperville Nurseries' gold medal; for the best four vases, twelve blooms of one variety in each vase, commercial varieties of chrysanthemums. Offered by the Naperville Nurseries, Inc., Naperville, Ill.

Class D—Charles H. Totty Co. prize; for six vases, six blooms of one variety in each vase, open to all. First prize, $25, offered by Charles H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J.

Class E—Charles H. Totty Co. medals; for three blooms of any chrysanthemum introduced in 1921; first, gold medal; second, silver medal; third, bronze medal. Offered by Charles H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J.

Class F—American Bulb Co. prize; for twenty-five blooms assorted varieties of chrysanthemums in one vase, not less than five varieties. Silver cup offered by the American Bulb Co., Chicago.

Class G—Vaughan's Seed Store prize; for twenty-five blooms assorted varieties of chrysanthemums in one vase, not less than five varieties; open to private gardeners only. Silver medal offered by Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago.

Class H—Lord & Burnham Co. prize; for twelve blooms, twelve varieties of chrysanthemums on short stems, to be staged in separate vases. First prize, $20, offered by the Lord & Burnham Co., New York.

Class I—Hitchings & Co. prize; for vase of pompon, single or anemone varieties of chrysanthemums, arranged for effect. Silver cup offered by Hitchings & Co., Elizabeth, N. J.

Class J—The Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co. prize; for vase of six blooms white chrysanthemums, one variety, on long stems. First prize, $10, offered by the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago.

Class K—A. Henderson & Co. prize; for vase of six blooms, yellow chrysanthemums, one variety, on long stems. First prize, $10, offered by A. Henderson & Co., Chicago.

Class L—Henry A. Dreer prize; for vase of six blooms pink chrysanthemums, one variety, on long stems. First prize, $10, offered by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia.

Class M—A. N. Pierson, Inc., prize; for vase of six blooms bronze chrysanthemums, one variety, on long stems. First prize, $10, offered by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.

Class N—Muller Sealey Co. prize; for vase of six blooms crimson chrysanthemums, one variety, on long stems. First prize, $10, offered by the Muller Sealey Co., New York.

Class O—Michell's Seed House silver medal; for the six best largest cut blooms of chrysanthemums, any color or colors. Offered by Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia.

Class P—Elmer D. Smith & Co. prizes; for four vases of disbudded pompon chrysanthemums, four varieties, twelve blooms each; open to all varieties. First prize, $10; second, $5, offered by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Examining Committees.

President S. S. Pennock announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year, as follows:

Boston, Mass.—James Wheeler, chairman. Ship flowers to chairman, care of W. J. Thurston, manager, Boston Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop square and Otis street, Boston, Mass.

New York, N. Y.—Eugene Dailledouze, chairman; Wm. H. Duckham, A. Herrington. Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 55 West Twenty-sixth street, New York, care of chairman.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge, chairman; John Westcott, S. S. Pennock. Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Cincinnati, O.—R. Witterstaetter, chairman; James Allen, J. C. Murphy. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago, Ill.—N. J. Wietor, chairman; E. A. Kanst, George Asmus. Ship flowers to chairman, 30 East Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. They must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week the flowers are to be examined or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character. Not less than six blooms of each variety are to be shown. Special attention is called to the rule that sports, to receive a certificate, must pass at least three of the five committees. The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted to them on each Saturday during October and November, the dates of which will be October 1, 8, 15, 22 and 29, November 5, 12, 19 and 26.

Chas. W. Johnson, Sec'y.

MIDGE ON MUMS.

I am submitting a chrysanthemum plant infested with some sort of pest. Will you advise me regarding it and the remedy therefor? G. S. D.

The plants are badly infested with the chrysanthemum midge and there is little hope of saving them if all the leaves are as badly infested as the specimen submitted.

The plant pathologists have charted the life of the insect and have evolved a method of fumigating between the hours of 11 and 2 at night, when the insect hatches out. This method will kill the insect; there is no question about it. To get rid of this trouble, you will have to close your houses up every night just when the flowers are beginning to mature.

As a temporary expedient I would suggest covering the leaves entirely with tobacco dust every other night. This should hold the midge until the crop matures.

The midge, like many of our other troubles that have come and gone, will disappear again, although here and there will be found some virulent cases that will reinfest a large area if not properly handled. C. H. T.

PAINTING WITH CREOSOTE.

Will you advise us as to the advisability of using creosote for painting bench bottoms to preserve the wood? We are curious to know whether the fumes from the creosote paint are injurious to plants, as the replacement of wooden benches could be cut down considerably by its use.

W. M. R.—Can.

While it is positively unsafe to use coal tar as a paint on greenhouse benches or, in fact, anywhere about a greenhouse, one need not hesitate to use creosote or a similar preparation made by the distillation of wood tar. Several of these preparations have a marked effect as a wood preservative, particularly if the wood is saturated.

CHERRIES FOR CHRISTMAS.

I have a number of well fruited Cleveland cherry plants in the field, many of which are showing color. If these plants are allowed to come in now, will their beauty have been spent before the holiday season arrives? What can be done to retard them? Any suggestion you have to offer will be appreciated.

I. L. B.—Mich.

Cherries ripening in the field during the latter part of September will still be in excellent shape at Yuletide.

Carl Hagenburger.

Dublin, Ga.—A greenhouse is to be built in the near future by Morton Moffett, who has made his home at Waynesboro, Ga., for several years. The house will be opened on the farm of L. G. Moffett.

HICKS' RECORD OF SUCCESSES.

The record of successes in rose growing held by Elisha J. Hicks, of Hurst, Berkshire, England, is a most remarkable one, and the Berkshire Chronicle celebrated it by publishing photographs of Mr. Hicks and his numerous trophies in its September 2 issue. Of all his successes Mr. Hicks is most proud of his record of being the first Englishman to win the gold medal and certificate of the international rose test garden of the city of Portland, Ore., which he secured with Climbing Lady Hillingdon.

Another notable success by Mr. Hicks is the winning, for the fifth time in succession, of the Wigan challenge cup, presented at the Royal Horticultural Society's summer show, for the most meritorious exhibit of roses in the show. The week previous to that success Mr. Hicks exhibited at the National Rose Society's show and won the gold medal for the best exhibit of roses in the nurserymen's section. This year Mr. Hicks has won no fewer than nine medals from the Royal Horticultural Soci[illegible]. He has had three awards of merit for new pedigree seedling roses from the R. H. S. These were for Margaret Horton and Mrs. Hornby-Lewis, hybrid tea roses of yellow and copper shades, and Lady Verey, which is a pure white climbing rose. The winning of the National Rose Society's trophy and the Wigan cup establishes him as the champion decorative rose grower for the year. In addition to his trophies, he has received gold medals from all the principal rose and horticultural societies in Great Britain, and he has fifty-four gold medals, forty-two silver-gilt medals, fifty-three silver medals. He has won over 800 first and other prizes for roses.

Mr. Hicks has been at Hurst fifteen years, and some idea of his success in rose growing and the development of his beautiful gardens can be gathered from the figures of his roses then and now. Fifteen years ago he laid out 2,000 standard roses and 10,000 dwarfs; this years he is budding 17,000 standard roses and a quarter of a million dwarf roses.

PROBABLY CUTWORMS.

Early this spring we replanted all our roses in new soil. The old stock replanted is in good condition and so is most of the young stock, but here and there among the young stock a plant starts to turn pale and soon dies. On examining the plant we find that the bark from the graft to the surface of the soil has been removed slick and clean. The Manetti root system is still alive and has white roots, but the root system of the own-root plants is dead, with the bark removed on the stem to the soil surface. We find around some of the plants a half-dozen or more sow bugs. Do you believe it possible that these bugs could do the damage?

When we put in the soil we noticed a few cutworms, but we removed all we could see before planting. The soil was from a clover field. No manure, except a little well-rooted manure, was mixed with the soil after the benches were full. We can find no cutworms now.

The old replanted stock shows no signs of the trouble. It is worse among grafted White Killarney and own-root Premier. Grafted Ophelia seems to have little of it.

Can you tell of anything else that could affect our plants in this way? Is there any disease that would affect the bark? We have not lost many so far, but the trouble seems to be continuing.

W. N.—Minn.

It is reasonably sure that sow bugs are not the cause of the trouble. No doubt, the cutworm may cause this trouble, although, usually, the cutworm will crawl up the stems of the roses at night and eat off the buds. It will then drop off at daylight and will hide under the loose soil near the plants on which it has been eating. On that account, the cutworm is usually easily found. The writer does not know of any other insect that may cause this trouble.

W. J. K.

TO PUTTY GLASS.

What is considered the best way to putty the glass on a greenhouse?

G. E. S.—N. J.

In glazing a greenhouse, the putty is placed under the glass. When painting the roof, always take pains to "draw" the sashes, so as to cover the edges of the putty exposed both above and below the glass, in order to keep the water from getting under the glass and softening the putty. If the putty is placed above the glass only, it will soon become loosened by the action of water and frost and a leaky roof will result. The same will be true, although to a lesser extent, if the putty is placed both above and below the glass. The durability of ordinary putty may be increased by working in about five per cent of white lead.

Dugger, Ind. — W. H. Crawford is erecting a greenhouse, which was purchased from the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., of Chicago.

Long Island City, N. Y.—Hass the Florist is installing a new 60-horsepower boiler in his greenhouse, on Eighth avenue and Fifteenth street. Other extensive improvements are being made about the establishment.

Youngstown, O.—The Raven Avenue Flower Shop Co. has been incorporated. The capitalization is $5,000 and the incorporators are Patrick J. Joyce, John P. Navin, James K. Crishal, Frank M. Higgins and Clyde L. Morgan.

El Reno, Okla.—Having rented new quarters in the building adjoining the Burger Bakery, the Preston Floral Shop is moving from the Elliott undertaking parlors. The company's greenhouse space is being enlarged by the addition of a new greenhouse, 30x50.

Columbus, O.—Ohio State University will hold a horticultural festival November 3 to 5. This will include displays of apples, vegetables, forestry, landscape architecture and chrysanthemums. The event is controlled and operated exclusively by students of the department of horticulture, with the object of creating interest among students and growers in the production of first-class fruits, vegetables and flowers.

Petersham, Mass.—Clarence D. Hamilton recently purchased the greenhouse that had been used in connection with the high school's agricultural department.

Massillon, O.—Mrs. Alice D. Root, formerly well known in the florists' business at Wooster, O., is starting the Ideal Flower Store in connection with the Ideal Dry Goods Co., in the new Ideal building here.

Huron, S. D.—The Huron Greenhouses have again become the property of R. D. Whorton. Two years ago this property was sold to Charles Knadle on contract. Mr. Knadle died some time ago and the property was returned by Mrs. Knadle to Mr. Whorton, who is now repairing and restocking the entire place.

Cumberland, Md.—John Paul, proprietor of The Flower Shop, on North Center street, recently celebrated the twenty-ninth year of his career in the florists' business. Both he and his wife, who is his greatest aid in the business, received many tokens of congratulation from the host of friends that has grown up about the business. Mr. Paul started to work when he was a boy and his "salary" at that time was $1.25 per week. One of the biggest events in his life, he says, was when his employer raised his pay 10 cents a week.

WAR has come to the front this season as one of the best liked red gladioli.

No man is justified in shipping stock he would not be willing to receive if he were buying.

WHAT has become of all the beer kegs that are not busy now? Why, bless you, sawed in two and painted, they make everlasting plant tubs.

FLOWER shows are coming back. Another result of realization that we must go to the public with our wares, not wait for buyers to come to us.

AMERICAN BEAUTY will be little seen in the wholesale markets this season. Introduced in this country thirty-five years ago, it has lasted far longer than any other rose.

A WINDOW or store crowded with merchandise has a cheap appearance—witness the 5 and 10-cent stores. Fewer flowers well arranged will give an atmosphere more in keeping with our trade.

CRUSADER gains friends every day. It is practically the only red rose now seen in some of the wholesale cut flower markets and its only important competitor anywhere is Milady, a rose that does well only for a few.

FROM all accounts, the cyclamen crop is between hay and grass. Those who needed stock to grow on have pretty well satisfied their demands and those who want stock in condition for retailing have not yet begun to place orders in volume.

THERE is a lot of heartburn over the quality of the carnation plants which have been shipped this season. A good many buyers do not understand that quality stock is scarce and too many sellers have taken advantage of the shortage of good stock to work off plants they would not have thought of shipping in preceding seasons.

THE condition of some plant shipments on arrival at destination is due either to the sender's carelessness or to something else. Some of the senders of such shipments are not new and unpracticed hands in the trade. Though one would rather believe the reason is carelessness, there is occasional suspicion of something else. Too general suspicion of this character will ultimately have its reaction.

FLORISTS' merchandise will sell itself if given a chance. Arrange the stock in your store so that it looks attractive to you and it will be inviting to customers.

LEADING merchants in New York are promoting a fortnight of activity, to be called "Buyers' Weeks," early in November. Their example, if successful, might well be followed in retail lines in other cities.

TRAVELERS will have a breathing space between the Toronto meeting and the convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association at Chattanooga. It has been postponed a week. The new dates are November 1 and 2.

FLORISTS sometimes regret that their merchandise lasts no longer than it does, but there are times when it is an advantage. They now have no hold-over stock from a preceding season, on which to take a loss by reason of fallen prices. The seedsmen are less fortunate.

"DID you ever watch a fly trap?" The question was by George Wienhoeber, recognized as one of the shrewdest of Chicago flower merchants. "Bait it well enough and flies will find their way in, even though they can not find their way out again. Apply that reasoning to flower store fronts and you will decide the show window is more important than the entrance."

GOING TO TORONTO?

There are more than the usual reasons for attending the convention of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at Toronto October 11 to 13.

It is the first time the association has met in Canada, and the florists across the border are planning to spread themselves as hosts. A $5,000 fund has been the goal of those raising the finances. An afternoon and an evening for pleasure have been wheedled away from Secretary Pochelon, who is all for business, and generous entertainment will be provided. Thirty years ago, in 1891, Toronto acted as host for the S. A. F. The Canadians endeavor to make the trigesimal visits of florists from the United States memorable ones.

There will be ample discussion of retailers' business problems. This meeting, the first of three days' length held by the association, is laid out with the intention of covering a good number of outstanding questions of first importance. What ones are to be dealt with may be learned from a perusal of the preliminary program, printed on another page of this issue.

Plans are being made to provide for from 1,000 to 1,250 visitors. If the response is as expected, the meeting will be a notable one in the annals of this rapidly growing organization.

ENGELMANN'S COMPARISONS.

Carl Engelmann, the carnation specialist of Saffron Walden, Essex, England, whose visit to this country a year ago will be recalled, makes "The British and American Florist" the theme of a highly interesting article in the July issue of the Florists' Bulletin, the organ of the British Florists' Federation. While crediting the United States with being the El Dorado of the specialist, the land of standardization and mass production, he does not hesitate to assert that Great Britain appears "to have some better individual growers than there are in the United States." Where Americans are a long way ahead of his countrymen, according to Mr. Engelmann, is in the important matter of flower culture. The American grower, to start with, has greenhouses better adapted to his needs than the British grower's are, and he keeps the lead because "the wholesaler or commission man of the United States handles the flowers more carefully and does not waste so much as his brother in Great Britain." Finally, the greatest difference lies with the retail florist. In his country, says Mr. Engelmann, there are too many flower sellers and not enough florists in this branch of the industry.

SELLING SERVICE.

That 49 cents of every dollar the American consumer pays for goods represents the cost of service, was brought out in a statement issued by Representative Sydney Anderson, chairman of the joint congressional commission of agricultural inquiry. The moral which his remarks carry for florists is that our public is one willing to pay for more than just the value of the commodity it buys. If it be flowers, the actual cost of the blooms is not so important as the way they are sold and delivered to the buyer.

"Merchandising," said Mr. Anderson, "consists largely of selling the consumer what he wants when he wants it and making him pay for it. A witness before the commission recently put the elements of merchandising in the following order: First, the exact article or the exact type of goods desired or that will ultimately satisfy; second, a pleasing environment and a pleasing, dependable quality of service; third, quality of merchandise, and last, price.

"This viewpoint is fairly typical of merchandising today. Goods are sold not so much by offering a price as by offering service, convenience, dependability, reputation, credit. The consumer pays for all of this, as well as for what everybody does not know about running his own business. It is like the invisible tax—easy to pay because it is not apparent, camouflaged in the price. In general, 37 cents of the consumer's dollar represents the cost of producing the article and the cost of the material that went into it; 14 cents represents all profits and 49 cents the cost of service."

EASTERN FLORISTS, NOTE.

Readers prefer to buy of advertisers near home. As The Review has more subscribers in New York and Pennsylvania than in any other two states (Ohio is third), it is natural that florists and nurserymen in the east who make their offers known in this paper get specially good results. Like this:

Our recent ad brought results, so now we will try another.—Edward J. Mead & Sons, West Webster, N. Y., September 18, 1921.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Joseph M. Gasser.

When Joseph M. Gasser died at Flint, Mich., in 1908, the trade realized that a leader in the profession had passed away, and today the trade is equally grieved to hear that Mrs. J. M. Gasser died at the old home at Cleveland, O., Tuesday, September 20.

In 1872 Mr. Gasser and his wife made their first business venture, in the way of a little stationery and candy store in Cleveland. It so happened that at that time the mother of Mrs. Gasser had a beautiful flower garden at her home and, out of generosity and love for her daughter, she would send flowers to the store as gifts. These would be put in the window, where they succeeded in attracting many customers. At last, out of kindness, Mrs. Gasser would give a flower or two away with each purchase. After some time the demand for the flowers became so great that a little money was charged for them. Soon the business in flowers outgrew the business in candy and stationery and the specialization was gradually made in flowers.

Small bouquets at 25 and 50 cents apiece were sold, with a paper holder thrown in, the best part of the bouquet being pine and broom splints, the flowers being long-stemmed primroses, fuchsias, geraniums and other such stock. Mrs. Gasser, who knew well the art of waxing flowers, made many novelties that attracted customers and brought in profit. So from a small beginning, by faithful perseverance and careful methods, the holdings of the company grew, until now it is one of the greatest in the state, with the main stores on Euclid avenue and a large glass area.

The funeral of Mrs. Gasser was held Friday, September 23, and the floral offerings, which filled three large trucks to overflowing, were tokens of the many friends that Mrs. Gasser had made in her long and useful life.

Perry E. Green.

A host of friends in the florists' trade learned with deep regret of the death of Perry E. Green at his home, Menatiquot lodge, West Dennis, Mass., September 9, after two years of gradually failing health. Mr. Green's figure was a familiar one in the Boston wholesale market and he will be much missed. He was a comparatively young man, having been born at East Cambridge, Mass., in 1874.

He entered the florists' business at Quincy, Mass., after leaving school and carried it on successfully for about twenty-eight years. His establishment was taken over by the United States in 1916 for the purpose of the extension of the immense Fore river shipbuilding yards and he then returned to Cape Cod, where, at Menatiquot lodge, he maintained a high-class summer boarding house, which was greatly frequented by fishermen, farmers, tourists and many of his old florist confreres, who dropped in for visits from time to time. He had a large garden, which furnished quantities of splendid fruits and vegetables, while his poultry flock yielded an abundance of eggs and chickens.

While at Quincy Mr. Green specialized in bachelor's buttons and other salable annuals and shipped all his produce to the Boston Coöperative Flower Market, of which he had been a member for many years. For a long period he acted as one of its directors.

Funeral services were held at Mount Auburn cemetery, Cambridge, September 11, when many of his friends in the trade attended, the Coöperative Market and many friends sending handsome floral souvenirs. W. N. C.

Charles R. Dane.

A well known and highly esteemed retail florist passed away September 16 in the person of Charles R. Dane, who had conducted a high-class store at 2123 Washington street, Roxbury, Boston, Mass. Mr. Dane was a native of Maine, but had lived in Boston, Mass., nearly forty years. He was 84 years old at the time of his death, but had been wonderfully active until near the end. He is survived by a nephew and two nieces. Interment services were held September 19. W. N. C.

G. W. Scott.

G. W. Scott, of Seattle, Wash., a founder of Scott & Son, of that city, and one of the best known growers in the Pacific northwest, died at the family residence early in September. He was 76 years of age. Always an active man, he was in close touch with his business and the day before his death he had visited the greenhouses. Mr. Scott was a pioneer in the northwest. He went to Seattle prior to the Seattle fire and with his son established the range of greenhouses in 1906.

He was always willing to give younger growers the benefit of his experience and his passing leaves a niche which cannot be filled in the ranks of northwestern growers. During the war he was active in government work at the Bremerton navy yard and he was always an ardent civic worker. He was a member of the Seattle Florists' Association, the Grand Army of the Republic and the Woodmen of the World.

A wife, three daughters, Mrs. Portus Baxter, Mrs. Paul Crane and Mrs. E. P. Boyd, all of Seattle; a son, Walter, and several grandchildren survive him. H. M.

Mrs. Kazue Enomoto.

Many florists and growers attended the funeral, September 22, of Mrs. Kazue Enomoto, who passed away after several months' illness September 19. The deceased was the wife of S. Enomoto and a sister of T. Honda, members of the firm of Enomoto & Co., San Francisco, Cal. The funeral services were held in a well known Protestant church on Post street, and beautiful floral offerings testified to the esteem in which she had been held. In addition to her husband and brother, she is survived by a son, aged 18, and a daughter of 6 years. M. M.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

An increase in business has encouraged the retailers as well as the wholesalers the last week. Stock, however, is not plentiful and the market is well cleaned up at all times. Outside stock is getting scarce and to have to depend on inside stock makes it a little hard at times. Roses are the only thing plentiful, but none has gone to waste. Columbia, Ophelia and Killarney are seen most, and for fall weddings, which seem to be plentiful this season, Killarney has been put to good use. Carnations are still coming in small quantities, but they are beginning to look better and promise to be good this year. Dahlias still show the effects of the wet weather, but they are a little better than they were last week and have found more of a demand. With the majority of garden flowers off the market, dahlias are about all that are left and these would sell even if they were poorer. Cosmos is coming only in limited quantities and, as yet, has had no demand.

Various Notes.

Dutch bulbs are still arriving in large quantities. Most of the florists expect to have their bulbs in the next two weeks.

Edith V. Walker & Bros. report that they have been busy with funeral work the last week.

The William Walker Co., has remodeled the front of its Fourth avenue store.

Henry Heick, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, was here last week with a line of holiday goods.

Friends of Edith V. Walker regret much to hear of the accident which befell her the early part of last week. While playing with some children at a house party, she mistook a trap door for a closet and fell down the steps, suffering a scalp wound. She was taken to the St. Anthony hospital. Miss Walker is doing nicely and expects to return to her duties as manager of Edith V. Walker & Bros. soon.

The Jacob Schulz Co. has enjoyed a great number of visitors at the dahlia farm, on the Bardstown road. George Schulz, president of the firm, said that there were more this year than last, which, he says, "seems impossible." The place is a beautiful sight, indeed, and on Saturdays and Sundays one can see a great many motorists on their way to the farm. E. G. R.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There is a feeling of relief and immense satisfaction in the Chicago market, a confidence engendered by the sharp upturn in the shipping business, which has been progressive since the middle of September. Although the summer business, from July 1 to September 15, was at least as good as the market ever had before, there were features of it that gave rise to speculation as to what the new season holds in store for the trade. Although we are only a fortnight into the new season, the rapidity with which the out-of-town demand has increased during that time has dissipated all doubts. We are going to have another good season, possibly the best season yet. It may be that profits will depend, more than they did in the boom years, on industry and good management, but it is apparent that the demand for flowers will hold up with other seasons.

There is progressive change in the character of stock on the market. Day by day the supply of gladioli decreases and the quality deteriorates. The gladiolus no longer is an important factor, nor is the aster in a different case. There are more asters than gladioli, but the flowers show unmistakably the approach of the end of their season and they are in little request except when filling is wanted for a large or cheap design. Both the chrysanthemum and the carnation are coming up as gladioli and asters go down. Considerable quantities of California mums are received twice a week, when the refrigerator cars come in, and lesser numbers other days, when there is no refrigerator car service out of San Francisco. Several wholesalers buy the western mums because they do not yet have adequate local supplies and numerous retailers receive them direct from the coast. Express adds nearly fifty per cent to the cost, but they usually arrive in good shape, with little waste, and can be handled profitably until the local supply becomes large enough to meet the needs of the market.

Carnations are not yet plentiful enough to be an important factor and the stems still are short, but there are some good, clean flowers that sell well.

Roses continue to hold first place, especially in shipping. Year by year, it seems, increasing numbers of florists learn to rely on the Chicago market for their roses. There is a good supply and the medium lengths are selling well. At the moment there is no special demand for short roses and it looks as though this may not be a season of strong demand for the higher-priced grades; at least no such call has as yet developed. Prices have been firming up, but they are not yet better than fair, from a grower's point of view. Good prices cannot come until there is a stiff frost. The list of varieties is further reduced this year, the supply of Premier, Columbia and Ophelia probably exceeding all the others put together.

In miscellaneous flowers the supply is unimportant. Valley cuts considerable figure and sometimes runs short. Good lilies are not always at hand. Orchids are a negligible factor. Celosia is abundant, in many strange forms. Wool-flower and tritomas sell fairly well. Other outdoor flowers are in such shape as to indicate the approach of the reaper.

Mister Poehlmann, Mine Operator.

Three or four years ago August F. Poehlmann took a "flyer" in a coal mine just being opened in Kentucky. That the town nearest the mine was named Hazzard did not deter him and the venture now has developed into a substantial investment. Mr. Poehlmann has for some time been a director of the company and recently was elected as its secretary. The name of the corporation is the Kentucky River Coal & Mining Co. The general office is in the Transportation building. R. C. Whitsett, a coal man who has enjoyed a large business among florists, is president and sales manager. The company has built a town of seventy-five houses, stores, etc., at the mine and named it Whitsett. The output has grown to 13,000 tons per day and the company, with 22,000 acres of land, has grown to have assets of $475,000. The coal produced is high-grade bituminous and commands a ready market around Chicago in spite of a freight rate of $3.30 per ton. Since he went into the company Mr. Poehlmann has been steadily increasing the quantity of its output consumed at the Morton Grove greenhouses and plans to use no Illinois coal after this season. John Poehlmann is also a stockholder in Kentucky River.

Various Notes.

A. H. Schneider expects to open his new store in Oak Park October 1. In the last two or three years he has rebuilt all his greenhouses and service buildings at the corner of Harlem and Schneider avenues. He has finished the job by putting up a neat store building facing on Harlem avenue and adjoining the greenhouses. His residence is on the other side of the range. The store has been well fitted up by Buchbinder Bros., the work to be completed in time for the opening at the end of this week. For a time at least Mr. Schneider will continue his store on Lake street. He expects many florist visitors at the opening of the new place and plans to make them all welcome.

the late W. H. Amling, had his place at Maywood all in chrysanthemums and pompons, followed by sweet peas. It is an indication of the trend of growers' ideas that his space is all in roses this season. He cut his first Columbia September 24.

Before F. C. Goodman left for home last week he signed a contract with the A. L. Randall Co. for the fixtures for the new store Kemble & Goodman are about to open at Mason City, Ia.

A leak on the second floor of the Atlas block over Sunday gave Henderson's Seed Store and A. T. Pyfer & Co. a job of mopping up when they opened for business September 26. The damage was not so large as the muss.

William Trillow, formerly of Des Moines, has gone to St. Louis as one of the territory men of the A. L. Randall Co.

Charles Erne and family set out last week for a little drive in their car. The next heard from them they were at St. Paul. Home again.

Wietor Bros. have one range, used for chrysanthemums last season, all in Columbia roses this year, 32,000 plants.

V. Bezdek, of Gross Point, already is cutting about 2,500 carnations a day and will have his first crop off before pompons become plentiful. He has a bench of Maine Sunshine, Strout's new yellow, and says if it comes up to its present promise he will have several benches of it next season.

Jacob Mergen, whose flower store is at 2025 Roosevelt road, is one of the stockholders in the projected West Central State bank, to be located at the intersection of Roosevelt road and Ogden avenue.

Hans Jepson is gradually turning his attention from pompons to big mums, finding the latter more profitable. He has between two and three times as many of the latter as he has of the former. Next year he plans to grow only the large blooms.

Joseph Trinz, of Lubliner & Trinz, former florists and present moving picture magnates, has just taken title to several parcels of ground on Belmont avenue west of Lincoln avenue at an aggregate consideration of $140,000. It is the report $2,000,000 is to be invested in another movie palace.

The Evening American is conducting a "Home Beautiful" contest, with a home as the capital prize. The George Wittbold Co., through John G. Wittbold, at once got into the game with a letter to the editor offering to furnish free the necessary material and labor to complete the lawn and planting. Of course the editor featured the Wittbold offer for several days, making good advertising for the florist.

J. C. Nielsen returned September 23 from a trip through the south which took all summer and covered nearly 9,000 miles, nearly all of which was made in his automobile.

Paul R. Klingsporn reports that the E. G. Hill Co. shipped the first chrysanthemums of the season September 24. The variety was Smith's Advance.

Edward Mallinson reports that September 25 the Fleischman Floral Co. had an order for a casket cover to contain 4,000 red roses.

Martin C. Amling would like to sell his place at Maywood, about 75,000 feet of glass all in roses, and join his brother, Walter, at Pana. Walter Amling is doubling his glass area there this season and they consider Pana so favorable a location that if they can consolidate their interests they will keep right on building.

The contract price for Franklin county coal, deliveries to cover the season, is $3.50 per ton, but it has been possible for growers to pick up cars in the spot market for about $2.50 per ton, although that price probably spelled loss for the mine operator. C. A. Samuelson has tried many crops on his Snake river ranch, in Idaho, but finds seed growing most to his liking. He has done well with alfalfa and with clover, including the new annual sweet variety. This year he grew a small quantity of sweet pea seed, some of which he recently sent to the E. C. Amling Co., with the request that some of their good growers try it under glass and report results. Finer looking seeds never went into soil.

NEW YORK STATE FAIR.

Floriculture.

The floral exhibit of the New York state fair, held September 12 to 17, was in the Manufacturers' building, at Syracuse, N. Y., as in previous years. The various florists' clubs of the state are still working hard for a building adequate to display their product properly, which is of sufficient importance to warrant the construction of a building devoted to flowers exclusively. This building, which they had hopes of occupying this year, was again postponed for certain reasons of economy by the state authorities.

Fortunately, the space allotted to floriculture was not so congested as in former years. Due to the advanced season, many of the large growers of asters, gladioli, etc., were unable to exhibit, their choice varieties being out of bloom. These exhibits always are large and require much space to display them properly.

Their absence, at least in part, gave more space for the large groups of stove and greenhouse plants, which were effectively arranged in the center of the hall. One of these groups, comprising palms, ferns, crotons, etc., was splendidly exhibited by P. R. Quinlan. The other group, composed of some of the choicest collections of plants in central New York, came from the private conservatories of Miss Bernice Smith.

The various local florists' and gardeners' clubs occupied groups along the outer walls of the building. Spaces between the groups were occupied by large tables. On several of these tables were staged a fine exhibit of ferns by F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown. Mr. Pierson also had an excellent collection of roses, from the old stand-bys to the latest introductions, for which he captured many prizes.

The north end of the hall was occupied by the Syracuse Rose Society and much credit is due the society for the large collection and variety of roses. This exhibit was placed for educational purposes only and it fulfilled its mission admirably, for practically every variety of rose could be found here, correctly named. South of this exhibit N. H. Cottam, of Wappingers Falls, had a nice collection of dahlias, for which he is widely known.

In gladioli, J. J. Prouty, of Baldwinsville, had a good collection, considering the difficulty the growers of this beautiful flower had in obtaining a sufficient number of blooms to exhibit, owing to the advanced season. As usual, Mr. Prouty carred away many of the honors.

E. A. Lumsden, now connected with government work at Washington, was again in charge and much credit is due him for his untiring efforts in the promotion of floriculture and the effective way he arranged the exhibit.

First prize for a bridal bouquet was captured by Miss Beulah Slattery, of Buffalo. This talented young artist deserves much credit for her work; her bouquet, which was made of roses, orchids and valley, neatly showered, was a model of artistic arrangement. Mr. Snell, of P. R. Quinlan's staff, won second prize.

Other Awards.

Other awards were as follows:

Plans for New Building.

Wednesday, September 14, the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs met in Superintendent Williams' offices. A large delegation from many parts of the state was present, and a lively meeting was called to order by President F. R. Pierson.

Plans for the resumption of work for a new floricultural hall were again discussed, and a committee was appointed that will make a greater effort than ever to secure the necessary appropriation for this much-needed building. President Pierson gave an interesting talk on Plant Quarantine 37, and a resolution was drafted protesting against the invariably disastrous results of subjecting all plant importations, bereft of the least semblance of soil, to an unnecessarily long routine of inspection, which results in great loss to the importer and places an impediment in the progress of the trade in securing the best results from foreign introductions.

After this meeting automobiles were provided by the Syracuse Florists' Club, which conveyed a party of fifty members to the Anglers' Club House, on Oneida lake, where a banquet was given in honor of the out-of-town florists who visited the fair. During the course of the entertainment many talks were given on topics of interest to florists, and many good ideas of the best means of advertising were brought out.

L. J. Mulhauser,

TORONTO, ONT.

Gardeners' and Florists' Association.

During the last two weeks there have been a great many florists' meetings and last week there were at least three. The week opened with a meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Association, with the president, Fred D. Clark, in the chair. There was a good crowd for the first meeting of the season and it was one of the most interesting yet held.

Several questions were brought up for discussion. One of great importance was the plan of the executive committee to have a course at Toronto University under the extension plan. The subjects suggested were plant production, soil treatment and landscape gardening. From a show of hands the latter two subjects appeared to be quite popular. The executive committee was requested to proceed with this educational matter. The members will be requested to state if they will attend the course, the subject they wish to study and how often they can attend classes. The committee will then arrange for the course of studies. It is probable that classes will be biweekly.

F. T. D. Committee Meetings.

Tuesday, September 20, W. W. Gammage, of London, general chairman for Canada for the F. T. D. convention, met the members of the Toronto committee and went over the plans. All met with his approval. Mr. Gammage hopes that there will be the largest attendance at the 1921 meeting of the F. T. D. in its history.

Growers' Meeting.

The growers held a meeting Tuesday afternoon, September 20, at the King Edward hotel. They gathered at the call of W. E. Groves, president of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association, and there was one of the largest gatherings of Canadian growers that have yet been held. The question under discussion was the sales tax. The three per cent will be levied according to the regulations.

A committee was appointed to take up with the government the question of the date from which it should be levied. The circular issued in August gave May 10, which appeared unfair. The committee consists of T. W. Duggan, of the Dale Estate, Brampton, as chairman; W. E. Groves, of the John Connon Co., Hamilton; W. W. Gammage, London; John H. Dunlop, Richmond Hill, and Walter Muston, Toronto.

The regulations were gone over clause by clause, in order that all might have a correct interpretation of them.

George M. Geraghty and Thomas Manton reported on the Canadian National Exhibition and the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair, which is being enthusiastically supported by the association.

A contribution of $53 was made towards the F. T. D. convention. In addition, many members have made generous contributions individually.

Six new members were received.

For the October meeting Park Commissioner Chambers, of Toronto, will be invited to address the meeting and will be made an honorary member.

Others invited to address meetings during the year are W. E. Groves, of Hamilton; Professors Crow and Tomlinson, of Guelph; W. H. Potter, and W. H. Moore, of Toronto. J. J. H.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

This market continued dull from Monday to Thursday, September 22. Friday, September 23, brought an improvement, which continued Saturday. Cooler nights have improved the dahlias. They keep better and the retailers are buying with more confidence. The fine varieties of dahlias are always sold first when the market is active. The poorer varieties sell afterwards at lower prices. When the market is dull the latter do not sell at all. Varieties that led ten or even five years ago are often passed by as inferior today. Quality tells. A careful judge of the market is sure that the retailers are doing as much business as they ever did at this season. In many instances they are doing more business. He thinks that the depression in the wholesale market is due to the favorable growing season and to the open fall. He believes that we are going to have a good season.

Orchids are coming into bloom again. Cattleya labiata is here, fancy cypripediums; the pink spray orchid, Dendrobium Phalænopsis, and a few Vanda cærulea. Chrysanthemums are here, Golden Glow and Smith's Advance. Valley is again salable.

Beauties are sent in only on orders. This plan is adopted to save waste, the foliage being kept on the plant when the flowers are not needed. Roses are improving. American Legion, Butterfly and Pilgrim are all to be had in moderate quantity at summer prices. Asters are still plentiful, but the best are over. There are some nice gladioli that bring more than they did a month ago. Dracænas and celosias are in fair supply. There are some delphiniums and many hydrangeas and much foliage.

Pep.

One of our ablest business men gives it as his opinion that what we need most today is pep on the part of the retailers as a body. He thought they were too much inclined to make few sales and much profit rather than many sales and smaller profits. He believes that the general prosperity of the business is linked with the latter policy.

While on this subject, there was an instance of pep on the part of one of our retailers, which, while not pertaining to flowers, may be of interest. Many of us remember that when Charles H. Grakelow was the chairman of the entertainment committee of the Florists' Club, a high-class vaudeville entertainment was given in the Adelphia and was most successful. I think it was in March, 1918. Mr. Grakelow introduced his friend, W. Freeland Kendrick, on this occasion. Mr. Kendrick, who, as it chanced, was receiver of taxes, made a happy address. Well, a short time ago Mr. Grakelow gave a dinner to some chosen spirits selected with great care from among his large group of friends. At this dinner he asked those present if they would support W. Freeland Kendrick at the primaries for renomination as receiver of taxes, September 20. They agreed. The next day Mr. Grakelow had telephone and electric wire connections, stenographers at work and typewriters going at the Ritz Carlton, where he had selected quarters. That is pep. W. Freeland Kendrick was elected by a tremendous majority.

Return to the Adelphia.

The house committee of the Florists' Club, E. P. Klinger, chairman, has arranged that the meeting which is to be held Tuesday evening, October 4, will be held at the Hotel Adelphia, on Chestnut street, above Twelfth street. The committee believes that the central location of the Adelphia makes it more convenient for the members than the present quarters at the City Club. The election of officers will take place at this meeting.

The Market.

Business is once more normal and the supply of flowers is about equal to the demand for them. Asters are fast failing, as the weather has not been suitable for them. Gladioli are gone. Dahlias are plentiful and are being used to a large extent in design work, but they are, as usual, fragile and the loss of one petal means the loss of the entire flower.

Roses are now running along about even with the demand, but last week they were a glut on the market. Mums are slow in coming, but carnations are more plentiful than they were last week. Of potted plants there are none, and customers who wish them go away disappointed, but usually carry a box of cut flowers with them.

Various Notes.

The Mission Co. was busy with corsage work September 24, as several sororities at the university had social events scheduled for that day. Mr. Walker also said that several large funeral designs kept the staff quite busy.

Moving pictures of Ludwig's greenhouse and farm were taken in a moving picture advertising contest and were shown at the James theater.

The American Insurance Union gave an entertainment at Memorial hall, with Secretary of Labor James J. Davis and Miss Elsie Janis as the principal guests. Flowers for these people of note were sent in great profusion. A bouquet containing seven dozen long Premier, the gift of some of Miss Janis' admirers, was made by McKellar's. Many baskets of flowers for both Miss Janis and other visitors were made by McKellar, who likewise decorated Memorial hall for the occasion. This firm has just added a line of fancy canary birds and supplies to the new store on Broad street.

From reports it appears that the public is using more flowers for weddings, and many orders for decorating work are booked ahead with Columbus florists, indicating that the war-time depression has disappeared. J. W. T.

Carl Huber has been busy putting up another new house, which he intends to plant in carnations. He reports a great deal of funeral work lately.

Underwood Bros. have a good lot of chrysanthemums, which are in fine shape. Mr. Underwood reports business is picking up.

Brust the Florist has been cutting some fine carnations lately. Mr. Brust recently added a Dodge delivery truck to his delivery equipment.

The Rolf Zetlitz Co. is cutting some excellent roses now, long-stemmed and of fine color.

S. F. Stephens & Son have recently installed a new boiler and are adding another large house to their range.

SCRANTON CLUB'S SHOW.

The Scranton Florists' Club, which embraces a membership in the greater part of northeastern Pennsylvania, has made extensive plans for a flower show, to be held in the state armory of Scranton November 8 to 11. This will be the greatest show this section has ever seen, as the armory is large. A section will be trellised off for dancing. Election night a Mardi Gras will be staged, and a private wire will be installed for election returns. One night will be given to the Knights Templar, who will conduct their annual ball. Armistice day will be taken up by the American Legion. The interest that is displayed by the club this time surpasses anything in the past fifteen years and it is with a great deal of pride that the club boasts of having nearly 100 per cent membership and everyone enthusiastic and working together to put the show over.

The department of forestry of the state of Pennsylvania is making preparations for an extensive exhibit, and it is the intention of the local forester to see that every school child attending the show receives a potted evergreen.

The Market.

There was little change in the market last week, the stock being about the same, excepting that as mums got better, asters lost out. Funeral work seems to be the big outlet, using up a lot of stock. Roses from young plants are improving daily, both in quality and quantity, and the shipping demand, which has been only fair for several months, will now increase rapidly. Prices are well maintained. There is still a scarcity of stock that may be termed distinctive and the grower who bends all his energies toward quality rather than quantity is winning out all along the line. Dahlias are still cleaning up daily, the pompon, anemone-flowered and other small varieties useful for basket work being especially sought for. Judging by the inquiries and orders received by shippers, the prospects for a banner out-of-town business this season are great. The increase in the demand from the smaller outlying cities and towns is remarkable.

Various Notes.

The writer recently had the opportunity of seeing how Fraser & Son, of Pasadena, test out the seeds they offer to florists, and he was much interested in the process. The average seed grower is content to see the strains in the field, but here the seeds are sown, the seedlings pricked off in flats and planted in checks exactly as a florist would do for cut flowers, a large piece of ground and several lath houses being provided at considerable expense for this purpose. Stocks, forget-me-nots, schizanthus, antirrhinum, cinerarias, primulas and a host of other things are now well established in the flats from this fall's sowing, and the trial checks are being prepared. By this means individual habits and peculiarities of the plants are noted and filed for reference and the checks are constantly under observation. These trials are, of course, quite separate and distinct from the firm's seed-growing lands at El Monte.

Calling at Edward Rust's nursery, at South Pasadena, a new greenhouse for cool-growing plants was noted to be under way. This will be only partially glazed, the remainder being covered with removable curtains to insure an abundance of air at all times. Mr. Rust had just left for a couple of weeks' trip to the north, taking in San Francisco, Eureka, San Jose and other points en route.

A. F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., is leaving for Toronto to attend the executive meeting of the F. T. D.

Everyone connected with the American Florists' Exchange was glad to see the first lots of roses coming there from the new range of Amling Bros., at Santa Ana. Although, of course, being from young stock, the grades are only short and medium as yet, the flowers are fine and a welcome addition to the market, where good roses are not often too plentiful.

Roy F. Wilcox has just returned from a San Diego trip. He is working like a Trojan in the interests of the big show, as well as with his own business. He also visited Tia Juana, Mex., when in the south.

F. R. Hills and Mrs. Hills have gone to Murietta Hot Springs for a time.

T. H. Wright invited a number of the stockholders of the American Florists' Exchange to dinner at the Athletic Club September 19 and, although all of them could not avail themselves of the invitation, those who did had a most enjoyable evening, Mr. Wright being a prince among entertainers.

Walter Amling is sending in nice rose stock in short and medium lengths from the Normandie avenue greenhouses.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Dahlia Gardens, has been making frequent trips to San Diego in connection with his exhibit of dahlias at the San Diego fair. His show was most successful and received many encomiums from visitors and others interested.

The Southern California Dahlia Association has decided to hold its show in connection with the big show of the California Association of Nurserymen, October 20 to 26, at Exposition park, Los Angeles. Although at first there was some opposition to this, wiser counsel prevailed and the big publicity that is bound to accrue to the association is sure to be an asset in the future.

The roses from the Volkman range, at Sawtelle, are being handled by the E. C. Amling Co. at the store on Wall street and are now coming in fine shape.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Pittsburgh, is calling on the trade this week.

Fine mums are being handled by Wolfskill's & Morris Goldenson and business is reported fine here.

The attendance at the opening of the flower store of Herbert Bateman, Inc., September 20, was large and everyone present was loud in praises of the exceptionally attractive display. Now that everything is complete and in running order, the store must be regarded as one of the finest in the city, with many original ideas that make for convenient and successful handling of a high-class business. Some valuable and unique Italian art objects are well worth a visit.

Paul Ecke has good reason to be well pleased with the condition of his poinsettias this year and he needs nothing but good weather now to have much the finest lot he has ever grown. In all, there are about sixteen acres in the Hollywood foothill country, some 60,000 young stock having been planted this season. At present they vary from three to six feet in height and, apparently, every plant is perfect, so he will have an immense number to ship this season. Practically all these are the true red Christmas-flowering type and all are for cut flowers. Mr. Ecke has the fertilizer from a large dairy at his disposal, and this, used on the light, decomposed granite soil of the neighborhood, leads to wonderful results. The plants are perfectly leaved right to the ground and are just beginning to spread out at the top. Just how many he will have would be difficult to say, but the plants are magnificent in every way. A surprise here was in the form of the pink poinsettias. Although not in bloom, the plants are attractive, the broader foliage being of a light green; so attractive, in fact, that they will be worth growing for the foliage alone. The flowers, according to Mr. Ecke, are a beautiful clear pink, quite distinct from the washed-out red that formerly passed as a pink poinsettia. The double form and the white are both grown in small numbers, but they are not highly thought of. This will be a magnificent show later in the season, when all this big mass of plants comes into bloom. A new variety growing here is probably a hybrid between the early-flowering variety and the late red and having the good qualities of both its parents. The flowers are perfect in color and the plants hold their foliage clear to the base. Owing to his consistent advertising in The Review, Mr. Ecke has sold out entirely on his stock this season, but he will have an immense stock next year. Mrs. Hartman, Mr. Ecke's sister, has a fine baby girl, 4 months old.

George Hall & Co. have started shipping mums and, as usual, are handling the best class of stock. This firm is successful in long-distance shipping, the details being taken care of by George Hall himself, who has had a great deal of experience along this line.

G. K. Parkinson, of the staff of Darling's Shop, has returned from his vacation, which he spent driving through some of the northern counties. He looks fit and well.

The shipping season has opened up well with W. Armacost & Co., and everybody around the store is busy. Mr. Williamson reports orders coming freely from southern and southeastern

A. W. Liefgreen, president and manager of the Arizona Seed & Floral Co., of Phoenix, has been in the city this week. Mr. Liefgreen took the place of Mr. McNabb, who is now connected with the Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., of this city.

John Sievers, well known florist, formerly of San Francisco and more recently of Phoenix, Ariz., has been in the city on his honeymoon trip, which is extended to San Francisco. Mr. Sievers married Miss Hanson, formerly of the Arizona Seed & Floral Co., with which firm he has also been connected, and is now going into business at Phoenix under the firm name of the Grand Central Flower Shop. His success should be assured in this thriving city.

The Market.

Recent rains have somewhat reduced the supply of mums. As the demand is steadily increasing, prices have gone up somewhat, though they are well below last year's level. The quality of the chrysanthemums is excellent and the market is cleaned up daily on them. A few gladioli are still in the market, but the end of their season is near and the quality shows deterioration. Some of the new-crop carnations are in the market, but only in small quantities. There are plenty of good dahlias. The popular pompon dahlias are still good and plentiful. Roses are going up, both in quality and price. From now till Christmas, there is expected to be a good supply of roses. There are still a few asters and the market is daily showing lots of marigolds and outside stock generally. Violets are starting their fall season. Orchids and gardenias are both scarce.

Various Notes.

Thousands of people attended the annual show of the Dahlia Society of California at the Palace hotel, San Francisco, September 15, 16 and 17. In accordance with the usual custom, President J. M. Davis and Show Manager Frank C. Burns, having agreed to the list of judges submitted to the executive committee, withheld the names from publicity until after the show. One of the features was a complete educational exhibit, showing how to grow, cultivate, water and generally treat dahlias in order to obtain satisfactory results. A dahlia hat attracted much attention in the Pelicano, Rossi & Co. exhibit. Frank D. Pelicano won the first prize for the best general display. There was a long list of prizes in the three classes, professionals, semi-professionals and amateurs. An examination of private gardens was made by Frank D. Pelicano, R. McWhirter and Arthur Twitchett. Beautiful dahlias grown by prisoners at San Quentin penitentiary were given special mention by the judges. The University of California was an exhibitor, its display coming from the university's trial gardens. Certificates of merit were awarded to C. C. Morse, the Hallawell Seed Co., Golden Gate park and the University of California. Ambassador, declared the finest dahlia in the California show, is of the hybrid cactus variety and comes from Santa Paula, Cal. It was grown by A. Waldie.

Purple asters were used for decorations on Elks' day.

The Charles C. Navlet Co. did not exhibit at the dahlia show, but the San Francisco store of this firm seems to have been about the only local store that had a dahlia exposition of its own. The dahlias displayed aroused much interest. The firm's Holland bulbs have just arrived.

A rousing event was made of the bowling contest between the Podesta & Baldocchi bowlers and a scratch team, captained by David Lichtenstein, the Terminal Florist. Spectators' seats were packed, largely by florists, and the rooting sounded like a riot. The Podesta & Baldocchi team won by 99 points. "A hard fought contest," said Victor Ferrari, scorekeeper. Robert Geppner, Jr., led the rooting for the victorious team as mascot. J. A. Axell could not play because of a sprained ankle, and Gus Taylor had sprained his wrist cranking a Ford. The Podesta & Baldocchi team consisted of V. L. Podesta, N. A. Baldocchi, E. Mangina, A. J. Podesta and D. Bacigalupi. The contesting team's members were Louis Capurro, A. Gillette, D. Lichtenstein, Bap. Pagano and A. Steinburg. A return match is being arranged.

S. Rosaia is planning an extensive campaign in violets this fall. He has, he states, about 100 acres in violets at his Colma ranch, in addition to having growers. He will ship from his San Francisco residence, 67 San Gabriel avenue.

Committees for the fall flower show, to be held in the Municipal Auditorium, are holding a number of meetings.

J. A. Axell is handling large quantities of roses and cleaning up every day. Ten thousand chrysanthemums were packed and shipped by his staff on the last refrigerator car day.

George Scatina, who is in charge at the new Coöperative Market, says it is cleaned out every day.

The nurseries of Domoto Bros. are now in the height of the chrysanthemum season. The firm has plenty of roses, some of which it is shipping locally.

H. T. Oishi, of the United Flower & Supply Co., states that I. Inoue, manager of that firm, is now in Chicago, studying the results of various systems of packing mums and strawflowers. The company has a kind of helichrysum suited for Christmas decorations. A drying house has been especially built for them, to preserve the dark velvet red of the flowers.

Fred Bertrand, of the Palace hotel, states that the tourist trade is now active.

Clarence McLaughlin, of Joseph's, arranged a luncheon at the Fairmount hotel with ripe pomegranates, flaming Tokay and white grapes and russet-colored mums. The grapes hung to the table from a crystal chandelier, and the pomegranates and mums were in half overturned baskets.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have been busy with funeral work.

Avansino Bros. & Co. say that business is picking up. The wealthy grand opera fans are clamoring for gardenias and orchids, which are scarce at present.

Arnold Belli, decorator for the Art Floral Co., had a whole window filled with a huge gilt basket containing a splendid assortment of Chrysolora mums.

F. C. Jaeger, Jr., states that business is quite equal to that of last year. The reduction in price of chrysanthemums has appealed to the public, with the result that people are buying.

General and Mrs. Gooch, of the firm of Darbee, have returned from an extended automobile trip, during which they visited the trade in northern California and Oregon. They are especially enthusiastic over the scenic beauty of the new Columbia highway from the Dalles to Portland, Ore. They also visited a number of little frequented spots, including Mount Lassen, the only active volcano in the United States.

H. N. Lowe, of Lowe's Flower Shop, Long Beach, is a San Francisco visitor.

Thomas Luke, of Smith's Flower Shop, Portland, Ore., with Mrs. Luke, has left for home, after a long motor trip, which included Los Angeles. They were escorted to Vallejo by General and Mrs. Gooch, and went on to visit Mark Ebel, at Sacramento. M. M.

TACOMA, WASH.

Chrysanthemums of first-class quality made their appearance in the Tacoma market last week. The season has been most favorable for their development. A slight improvement in the retail trade was noticed last week, according to the managers of several stores, and a cheerful aspect for the next few weeks is predicted. Three heavy frosts cleaned up most of the outdoor flowers of growers outside the city limits, but near the city little damage is noticeable.

Prices here have been badly cut the last summer, leaving the margin of profit small for both retailers and wholesalers. It is a local condition, caused by favorable growing conditions for small dealers who peddle their stuff about town for any price they can get. Several stores have rented space to these dealers, who offer large bouquets at figures far below prices based on the regular wholesale quotations. Old Jack Frost has regu-

At the regular meeting of the Florists' Club it was decided to hold a special meeting September 21 to make arrangements for a florists' building at the western Washington fair, at Puyallup, in October. It is proposed that all the dealers, both retail and wholesale, make an exhibit as a whole. The building is to be called Floral hall. The fair lasts one week and 40,000 people visit it each year. L. B. M.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

A demand for funeral pieces of medium price and light deliveries kept the market cleaned up in good shape last week and retail establishments indicate rather a scarcity of stock.

Potted plants are beginning to command a good share of the consumer's interest. These have been featured in the window displays of nearly all the shops. At present, cyclamens, begonias and primroses are offered and the quality of the first named plants is everything that could be asked. Ferns in the smaller sizes are also good sellers.

California mums are being shown and last week saw the first real offerings of full-sized home-grown stock. The southern stock is not being shipped in freely, however, since the prices asked discourage buying. Local growers of pompons are delivering all that the market will care for at this time. Good stock is being grown this year. Dahlias are still being shown, but not in such large quantities as were shown before. Some of the yellow shades are being featured in a number of shops, with good results. The most common long-stemmed flowers are gladioli, which are still present in profusion, and only active sales efforts on the part of retailers have prevented an oversupply from developing.

The cut of roses has increased, but there is no difficulty in moving all the good lots. Butterfly is probably the leader in quality. Several growers advise that the late crop of Ulrich Brunner promises to make an exceptional showing and that deliveries will be starting soon. Carnations are in light supply and demand. Orchids continue scarce, with lilies and stephanotis plentiful enough to meet all needs. Growers have been offering a variety of shrubbery and these highly colored offerings have been substituted for the more common maple leaves in a number of recent decorations.

Walter Scott, of Scott & Son, is receiving the sincere condolence of the entire trade over the sudden death of his father, G. W. Scott, last week.

An unusual luncheon setting was developed by the Hollywood Gardens for one of the local clubs last week. Yellow dahlias, red barberry and maidenhair fern were combined in the long center pieces, while two Japanese baskets containing red apples, white grapes, barberry and mountain ash took the place of conventional end pieces. The idea of this decoration was to secure a

ORCHID is one of Kunderd's creations. I bought the entire stock of him when he first originated it, and own every bulb of it. It resembles the Chicago White in color, but is a far better white, and in every way superior to that popular variety; has a larger flower, is more vigorous in growth, and a far better bulblet maker. It is not more than five days later. It will supplant Chicago White wherever it is tried.

new effect through the use of berries and flowers and the general result was oriental.

Mrs. Amundson, of the Annavee Flower Shop, at Yakima, Wash., was a visitor last week, coming over to attend the season of the Scotti Grand Opera Co. She reports some fine stock coming on in Yakima valley greenhouses at this time.

A better run of general business is reported by McCoy's. Several large funeral pieces were developed the latter part of last week. Cut cyclamen has proved a popular seller lately.

Fred Gust, representing the McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., in the western states, has returned from an extended road trip covering a number of states. In nearly every section it seemed to him that the florists' business had held up as well as could be expected.

Some of the finest pink gladioli seen here this season were shown in tall baskets last week by Melby's Flower Shop. The number of home decorating jobs has increased lately.

Funeral work has been unusually heavy with Felix Rosaia during the last week. Miss Emma Bennili, of this shop, has returned from a two weeks' vacation trip spent on islands in the Puget sound.

The early fall touch in local flower shops was seen last week in initial shipments of California chrysanthemums for the Woodlawn Shop, and some of these showed exceptionally fine color. This shop has handled a number of large decorations, and press comment was received on one club event, in which hydrangeas and greens were the only items used.

The Orpheum Floral Co. has been showing some of the finest late dahlias seen on the market and has also featured some fine potted begonias and cyclamens.

At the last meeting of the Seattle Florists' Association, President Moore outlined the plans for winter work to be done by the association and plans were laid for increasing the membership to cover every eligible person in this city. A letter was read from the secretary of the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association thanking the florists for their part in entertaining the recent convention. The address of the evening was given by F. G. Cooper, of the Richmond Greenhouses, on "Shrubs," particular attention being paid to the fall and spring items that can be useful to the retail florist. Examples of the various shrubs shown were passed among those present.

Kenney's Home of Flowers has been receiving some of the finest asters coming into the market at this time, some in pastel shades being especially attractive.

The City Flower Shop last week showed some of the first home-grown mums brought to this market, but the demand on this is still a little slow in meeting the prices which must be charged.

A large number of wedding decorations have been handled during the last week by Rosaia Bros. The heavy cut of gladioli continues, and there has been an increase in the shipment of roses from the greenhouse.

Irving Harris, who operates the flower shop in the Bon Marche, has been holding a dahlia show at which large numbers of bulbs were sold for later delivery.

Mrs. L. J. Shaffer, who was formerly in business at Twenty-fourth avenue and West Fifty-ninth street, has opened a new flower shop at 5432 Ballard avenue. She will make a specialty of funeral work, special designs, cut flowers and potted plants.

C. E. Wallgren, of the City Flower & Seed Shop, at Everett, Wash., was a visitor last week. H. M.

GLADIOLUS BULBS

I hereby offer my entire stock of Gladioli for sale at reduced prices. These bulbs are true to name, are first-class, and the larger sizes just the thing for forcing for early cutting by florists. October is the best month for outdoor planting in southern California and Florida, to cut for Memorial Day.

25,000	A-No. 1 size America	$12.50 per 1000
3,500	ORCHID (see description below)	35.00 per 1000
1,000	Autumn Queen	20.00 per 1000
1,500	Mrs. Francis King	15.00 per 1000
5,000	Chicago White	15.00 per 1000
1,500	Halley	15.00 per 1000
2,500	Mixed	10.00 per 1000

All of the above are A-No. 1 size bulbs.

Planting Stock

5,000	No. 5 ORCHID	$15.00 per 1000
75,000	No. 5 and 6 America	8.00 per 1000
5,000	No. 5 and 6 F. King	4.00 per 1000
5,000	No. 5 and 6 Halley	6.00 per 1000
6,000	No. 5 and 6 Chicago White	6.00 per 1000

ORCHID is one of Kunderd's creations. I bought the entire stock of him when he first originated it, and own every bulb of it. It resembles the Chicago White in color, but is a far better white, and in every way superior to that popular variety; has a larger flower, is more vigorous in growth, and a far better bulblet maker. It is not more than five days later. It will supplant Chicago White wherever it is tried.

new effect through the use of berries and flowers and the general result was oriental.

Mrs. Amundson, of the Annavee Flower Shop, at Yakima, Wash., was a visitor last week, coming over to attend the season of the Scotti Grand Opera Co. She reports some fine stock coming on in Yakima valley greenhouses at this time.

A better run of general business is reported by McCoy's. Several large funeral pieces were developed the latter part of last week. Cut cyclamen has proved a popular seller lately.

Fred Gust, representing the McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., in the western states, has returned from an extended road trip covering a number of states. In nearly every section it seemed to him that the florists' business had held up as well as could be expected.

Some of the finest pink gladioli seen here this season were shown in tall baskets last week by Melby's Flower Shop. The number of home decorating jobs has increased lately.

Funeral work has been unusually heavy with Felix Rosaia during the last week. Miss Emma Bennili, of this shop, has returned from a two weeks' vacation trip spent on islands in the Puget sound.

The early fall touch in local flower shops was seen last week in initial shipments of California chrysanthemums for the Woodlawn Shop, and some of these showed exceptionally fine color. This shop has handled a number of large decorations, and press comment was received on one club event, in which hydrangeas and greens were the only items used.

The Orpheum Floral Co. has been showing some of the finest late dahlias seen on the market and has also featured some fine potted begonias and cyclamens.

At the last meeting of the Seattle Florists' Association, President Moore outlined the plans for winter work to be done by the association and plans were laid for increasing the membership to cover every eligible person in this city. A letter was read from the secretary of the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association thanking the florists for their part in entertaining the recent convention. The address of the evening was given by F. G. Cooper, of the Richmond Greenhouses, on "Shrubs," particular attention being paid to the fall and spring items that can be useful to the retail florist. Examples of the various shrubs shown were passed among those present.

Kenney's Home of Flowers has been receiving some of the finest asters coming into the market at this time, some in pastel shades being especially attractive.

The City Flower Shop last week showed some of the first home-grown mums brought to this market, but the demand on this is still a little slow in meeting the prices which must be charged.

A large number of wedding decorations have been handled during the last week by Rosaia Bros. The heavy cut of gladioli continues, and there has been an increase in the shipment of roses from the greenhouse.

Irving Harris, who operates the flower shop in the Bon Marche, has been holding a dahlia show at which large numbers of bulbs were sold for later delivery.

Mrs. L. J. Shaffer, who was formerly in business at Twenty-fourth avenue and West Fifty-ninth street, has opened a new flower shop at 5432 Ballard avenue. She will make a specialty of funeral work, special designs, cut flowers and potted plants.

C. E. Wallgren, of the City Flower & Seed Shop, at Everett, Wash., was a visitor last week. H. M.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

The window of the new store of Lewis Henderson, Omaha, Neb., is made strikingly attractive with a collection of blue ribbons awarded at the recent state fair. These are arranged as a panel surrounded by flowers and foliage.

* * * *

Hess & Swoboda, Omaha, Neb., received a shipment, September 14, of chrysanthemums from California in fine shape and of excellent quality. They were easily disposed of at a handsome profit. Fine blooms of Chrysolora and October Frost had arrived from California in perfect shape and at a price that allowed such a wide margin of profit that J. J. Hess said it did not pay the company to grow early varieties.

* * * *

J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia., have their usual high-grade stock of roses, carnations and chrysanthemums in sight. Both local and shipping trade is reported good.

* * * *

The Andrew Bather Co., Clinton, Ia., reports a good run on funeral work and gives credit to both the F. T. D. and the pink section of The Review for the variety and size of the orders. Some fine designs were noted, particularly one composed of red roses, Milady and Crusader, in which the last named did not compare favorably, having less substance, both in stem and bloom, than the first named.

* * * *

The New York Floral Co., Madison, Wis., is well located, directly facing the Capitol, and makes a fine showing. Dutch bulbs, attractively placed around the outside of the store, command attention. Some sales are reported, but Jack Frost will be welcomed to make folks buy freely.

* * * *

The Janesville Floral Co., Janesville, Wis., is making a fine store and window display of Dutch bulbs, ferns and early chrysanthemums. A steady business is reported, the result of constant publicity.

* * * *

Currie Bros. Co., Milwaukee, Wis., is in the optimistic class. "No use being in any other," observed William Currie, "if one wishes to continue in business."

* * * *

The Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis., is cutting fine early chrysanthemums at Deer Park.

* * * *

C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis., returned from an automobile tour through the neighboring country. It was an exciting and strenuous trip. Someone suggested that the weight of orders booked contributed to the excitement.

* * * *

The Alpha Floral Co., Rockford, Ill., is inaugurating the fall season with an attractive window, taking a recent illustration in The Review for a model.

* * * *

H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., has a combined bulb and floral window display. Stock at the greenhouses is in fine shape. The seed and mail branches have held up well, comparing favorably with former years.

R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill., reports having passed through a strenuous season, but feels that from henceforth the seed situation cannot but improve. Smaller stocks are being grown and the quantity on hand means a good clean-up, according to the founder, now passing his eightieth milestone. Mr. Shumway was recently badly hurt by an automobile, the first accident in his long career. His wonderful vitality aided in his recovery.

A. F. Barbe, Kansas City, Mo., while growing a large variety of blooming plants and cut flowers for cemetery use, finds increasing sales for strawflowers in baskets and wreaths, the strawflowers taking the place of immortelles to a large extent. Located near one of the largest cemeteries, with downtown store ideas, the secret of success is evident.

The Chandler Floral Co., Kansas City, Mo., has its up-to-date place in tiptop shape for fall business, which is anticipated to be the best ever. W. M.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The conditions in the local wholesale market during the last week were not all to the liking of the wholesalers. The hot weather caused these conditions. The stock was there, but the demand from the retailers slumped badly.

Funeral work was all that caused any flurries in the market the latter part of the week, but the hot spell killed whatever seasonable improvements brought a short time ago. The retailers say cooler weather with frost is the only thing that will revive business.

Next week the Veiled Prophet's ball and Centennial week to follow should create a considerable amount of work for the retailers who are ready for the opening of the season, with the coming of these fall festivities.

In looking over the various markets, there was found an abundance of cut stock, especially so in roses of all varieties. The great bulk of the roses were Columbia, Premier and Ophelia. The choice stock sold fairly to the leading stores, while many roses were jobbed off for special, advertised sales at low prices. There is also an

Being "Shavings" and Making Shavings

Have just had a wonderful auto ride down on Cape Cod, Mass.—the store house of characters in Joseph Lincoln's delightful books.
You who have enjoyed the play, "Shavings," know one of his most interesting of them all.

On the ride I met Shavings himself—a real honest-to-goodness man by the name of Edwards.
Met him in his little windmill shop at Chatham by the sea.
At first he was mighty close mouthed.
Answered my observations with a nod or plain "yep."
But when he finally did loosen up, what a wealth of life's philosophy and keen humor he did have.

All winter long he makes charming Cape Cod Windmills which he sells to the summer tourists.
If you don't look at them carefully they seem quite like others. When you do, you discover that they are made with exactness and have a full fledged thrust ball bearing.

Shavings' Mills are ALWAYS TURNING.
Others are ALWAYS STICKING.
Some florists sell bunches of flowers.
Others add the touch of artistry and extra care that makes them a bouquet.
Some make lots of shavings in anything they make.
But making shavings isn't being "Shavings."

It isn't WHAT you do, but HOW you do it, that counts.
It's a thought worth thinking when you send your F. T. D. orders.

abundance of short-stemmed carnations, with good flowers coming in daily. Asters are slowing down a bit; still there are more than the demand consumes. Choice gladioli demand good prices, as the supply has shortened considerably.

Dahlias are coming along well and a big cut is looked for in the next two weeks. Valley and orchids have been scarce, with a good demand. There are enough Easter lilies for the demand. Mums are slow in arriving. So far only a few Golden Glow and Smith's Advance have been received.

Smilax, asparagus, adiantum, etc., are in good supply and always in demand.

Pot Plant Growers Meet.

C. E. De Wever, chairman of the pot plant growers' committee of the St. Louis district growers' organization, called a meeting of all the pot plant growers in St. Louis, which was held September 20 at the establishment of the Bourdet Floral Co. The following responded: L. J. Bourdet, Charles Beyer, Albert Senger, W. H. Kruse, Robert Windler, F. J. Fillmore, and Joseph Mathias. National Secretary J. F. Ammann was there also, as was District Secretary Beneke.

Chairman De Wever called the meeting to order and outlined the objects of the meeting and the benefits that can be derived by the pot plant growers if they become fully organized and he stated that a committee on this subject had been appointed by President Amling. Mr. De Wever said that he thought it best to call a meeting of all the pot plant growers and to get their views on what can be done to better the conditions of those interested in the pot plant business.

Then came a general discussion upon the remarks of the chairman, in which all took part and gave their views on the betterment of conditions of those in the pot plant business. At the conclusion of the discussion, Chairman De Wever called upon Secretary Ammann, who responded with an interesting talk and gave his views on how to proceed in the aim of the pot plant growers.

After a lengthy discussion on the remarks of Mr. Ammann, it was by motion decided that Chairman De Wever report the proceedings of the meeting at the quarterly meeting of the St. Louis district of the National Flower Growers' Association, at Peoria, Ill., October 18.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will hold its regular monthly meeting at the W. A. Rowe greenhouses, at Kirkwood, October 5, at 8 p. m. President Martin Ude expects a large attendance, as much business is to come up for discussion.

George Schrieffer, for many years with C. A. Kuehn and later with George H. Angermueller Co., has accepted a position with the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., in the cut flower department.

of the S. A. F., and Arthur Newell, of Kansas City, Mo., spent September 20 in the city, calling on the trade in general. They say that Kansas City is already planning for next year's S. A. F. convention.

The Art Floral Co., with Oscar Turkniepe as manager, has opened for business in the new Market bank building, 4056 Olive street. The manager was until recently with Mullanphy Florists' Grand avenue store.

L. H. Archias, of Sedalia, Mo., spent September 19 in the city on his way to Cape Girardeau, Mo., to act as judge at the fair. While here he held a conference with President W. A. Rowe, of the Missouri State Florists' Association.

Fred C. Weber and Grimm & Gorly used a great deal of space in the daily papers last week, advertising special sales, which brought them splendid returns.

Charles Ostertag, of the Ostertag Bros. Floral Co., says business has been satisfactory during the last month. Mrs. Richards, his cousin, is back with the firm as designer. She is one of the best designers among the lady artists.

Among those who say they will attend the F. T. D. meeting at Toronto next month are Fred C. Weber, Vincent Gorly and F. H. Weber. Efforts are being made by District Manager Weber to induce other retailers to make the trip.

Samuel Roth, manager of the Famous-Barr floral department, has moved his department to a better location in the building. Now he has more room, of which he was badly in need.

The officers of the Florists' Club will hold their monthly conference at the home of Trustee A. W. Gumz, on Botanical avenue, October 6. They will arrange a program for the regular monthly meeting of the club the week following, at President Rowe's Dewey road establishment.

At H. G. Berning's a world of fine roses was noticed last week, cut from the establishments of Otto Berning, at Olivette, Mo., and Walter A. Amling Co., Pana., Ill. Both places promise a heavy cut all through the season.

August Hummert, of the St. Louis Seed Co., says he never saw the quality of the bulbs as fine as at this season. The heavy demand from florists, both local and outside, will cut the retail supply considerably this season.

Manager O'Leary, of the east side branch of Grimm & Gorly, has everything in readiness for the season.

The Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., at Clayton, Mo., has had a most successful season, with seasonable outdoor flowers. At present the company is cutting a lot of excellent dahlias, which are handled by the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

Otto Klinger is back on the job as buyer for Grimm & Gorly, after several weeks of confinement at his home with sickness.

The supply department of C. A. Kuehn, managed by Charles Kuehn, Jr., is splendidly equipped for the season with a full line of new goods used by the trade.

The members of the bowling league enjoyed a pleasant evening September 21. There were many visitors of the trade present to watch the excitement. The Sweet Pea team had an easy time defeating the Violets in all three games, rolling the highest single game, 855. The Daisies also won their three games from the Carnations, while the Orchids won two of their three games with the Roses. The Sweet Pea team retains the lead, with the Daisies second. The Orchids

Executive Committee Reports.

A meeting of the executive board of the St. Louis district branch of the National Flower Growers' Association was held at St. Louis September 20 in publicity headquarters at 2 p. m.

The meeting was called to order by President Walter Amling and there were present J. W. Ross, of Centralia, Ill.; W. J. Hembreiker and A. C. Brown, of Springfield, Ill.; James N. Cole, of Peoria, Ill.; J. F. Ammann and Henry Blixen, of Edwardsville, Ill.; W. A. Rowe and W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, Mo.; C. E. De Wever, of Olivette, Mo.; Joseph Deutchmann, of Webster Groves, Mo., and Secretary J. J. Beneke, of St. Louis. The only absentee was Ludwig Stapp, of Rock Island, Ill.

The minutes of the board meeting held at Centralia, Ill., were read by the secretary and approved. The secretary's report showed sixty-one members to date. The receipts to date were $1,395.99 and the disbursements on vouchers No. 1 to 17 were $1,029.63, leaving a balance on hand of $366.36.

Treasurer Rowe's report showed a balance on hand of $366.36. Joseph Deutchmann, chairman of the membership committee, reported that Mrs. Minnie Lillie Copeland, of Marion, Ill., had been favorably investigated by the committee and her election to membership followed. W. A. Rowe, chairman of the purchasing committee, reported that many members had made purchases through his committee and that the committee would issue a monthly bulletin of what is for sale and the prices on various articles needed by the members.

Plan Altering By-Laws.

Chairman De Wever reported that his committee would meet all the pot plant growers that night and that he would have a good report at the Peoria meeting of the district, October 18. In the absence of Frank L. Washburn, of Bloomington, Ill., who was chairman of the committee, Henry Blixen read a resolution adopted by the committee on the percentage basis. The report stated that twenty per cent should be the maximum. The resolution, on motion, was accepted by the board and ordered read for the second time at the Peoria meeting for final action.

J. F. Ammann, secretary of the National Flower Growers' Association, then read the changes in the by-laws, beginning with article 4, after which Mr. Ammann stated that these changes would come up for final adoption at the annual meeting of the association, at Hartford, Conn., next January.

Plans for Peoria Meeting.

The matter of issuing a monthly bulletin to all members then came up for discussion, which ended in a motion that this matter be placed in the hands of the purchasing committee to work out for report at the next board meeting. The fourth quarterly meeting place of the board next came up for discussion. As Peoria, Ill., had been selected, James N. Cole, of that city, said that several meetings had been held with Peoria florists; that the Jefferson hotel had been selected as headquarters; that the meetings would be held in the Gold room in the hotel and that the entertainment committee had been selected. The members of this committee are: Charles Loveridge, Henry Baer, L. Becker, O. Siebenthal and C. E. De Wever. After a discussion, it was decided that sectional meetings of all committees would be held at 9 a. m.; the executive committee meeting at 10 a. m., and the meeting of the district at 1:30 p. m. The secretary was requested to assist the entertainment committee. A new committee was then announced, to be known as the cut flower growers' committee. W. J. Pilcher and J. F. Ammann were appointed on this committee. They are to appoint the third member.

It was moved, on the request of J. F. Ammann, that all payments of dues to the national body be withheld until the final adoption of the proposed amendments to the by-laws. The motion prevailed. There being no further business to come up for transaction, the meeting was adjourned. J. J. B.

with the exception of miniatures, which are still a little off. Pink roses continue rather scarce, while Ophelia and Ward are arriving in quantity. Carnations are beginning to come in regularly, but still have short stems and only medium flowers. A considerable amount of green in the line of Asparagus plumosus is coming in and has been moving slowly. Fancy fern is good and still remains reasonable in price.

Various Notes.

The South Main Gardens Co., of Akron, was incorporated lately with a capital of $10,000 and will operate greenhouses and flower gardens. The incorporators were L. O. Beck, R. S. Grant, C. A. Barbian, L. J. Callinan and L. W. Harter.

Morris Cohen, of New York, stopped in again on his return trip.

Mr. Blackshaw, of the Ove Gnatt Co., Laporte, Ind., was a visitor in town, as was also Mr. Bulloch, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago; Jack Levine, of New York, and S. Edelman, of the S. Hanfling Co., New York.

Miss Evans is on another week's vacation.

About seventy-five florists took a trip Thursday, September 22, under the auspices of the Florists' Club, to the Daisy Hill Farms, where lunch was served, then out to the place of the Heepe Co., at Macedonia, and thence to Buskirk's place. All had an enjoyable time.

The Market.

With the advent of cool weather, business has taken a decided turn for the better. Summer has not gone entirely. Several days last week were uncomfortable, but there were some chilly days, and these were noticeably good. Florists believe that when the first heavy frost gets in its work business will settle to a steady basis. Preparations are already under way for a bigger Christmas than last year. Saturday was extremely heavy in the wholesale houses. More cut flowers were shipped that day than anything else. The remainder of the week brought good orders from out of town, but supplies were also big items. September 23 and 24 were also heavy in the retail stores, as there were two big funerals, for which nearly every water was so muddy that he had little success. He bought a carload of plants from the Pinehurst Floral Co. The lot included hydrangeas, begonias, cinerarias, Mrs. Sander daisies, stevia, ferns and orchids. The blooms were cut from the orchids and made up the first consignment for the new Stuppy Supply Co. here. They were bought by the W. L. Rock Flower Co.

The Kansas City Florists' Club has been invited to hold its next meeting in the salesroom of the new Stuppy Supply Co., 1020 Oak street.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Manson, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Blake October 23.

S. Bryson Ayres will have an exhibit of his celosia and strawflowers at the King Edward hotel, in Toronto, for the F. T. D. convention. He has received so many orders from all parts of the United States for seed that he will be unable to fill them all this season. Consequently, he has decided to let one florist in each city handle the seed.

E. E. Farnham, of Carrollton, Mo., was a visitor last week.

T. J. Noll, of the T. J. Noll Floral Co., is having a successful trip through southern Kansas and Oklahoma. He is sending in some good orders.

Another one of the S. A. F. signs, "Say It with Flowers," has been placed in Kansas City. This one is on S. Bryson Ayres' farm.

The Market.

Conditions at this market have taken a turn for the better, which is welcomed by everyone concerned. Stock can now be had at a right figure and can be used to advantage, being suitable for work of all kinds. Roses, as usual, are the most popular and move well at prices ranging from $4 to $15 per hundred, including Premier, Columbia, Madame Butterfly and the new white, Angelus. The latter has become popular, due to the fact that white roses are something which this market has lacked for some time.

Dahlias are arriving in larger quantities and in better condition than before and they promise speedy sales. Gladioli have passed their zenith and now are on their downward path. Only a few stragglers are to be found these days. Some exceptional asters were shipped in last week and they went well because of the large flowers and good stems. Miscellaneous stock of all kinds moves well and is easy to be had.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Powers, formerly Miss Cunningham of the H. W. Sheppard force, has returned from her vacation and honeymoon through the east and Canada and she certainly looks as though she thoroughly enjoyed her trip.

H. W. Sheppard's shop has been kept going all week on a number of openings and weddings, this being an extremely good month for him in that line of work. A new Dodge truck has lately been purchased.

Julius Baer reports business not so good as it could have been the last week, but that a number of orders for fall weddings have been booked, so the future looks brighter than the present for him.

C. E. Critchell is receiving a lot of good dahlias and feverfew from John C. Rutenschroer, of Price Hill, and also good asters from White & Co., of Toledo. He reports a record week in southern smilax and fern plant sales. Frank Friedman, of the Critchell force, has been ill for the last week, and was much missed by all the retailers because of his ability to make himself heard, but he will be seen on the job soon again.

Miss Laura Murphy, of the William Murphy Co., leaves soon for the Pacific coast, to join her mother and sisters. Her brother, Ray Murphy, will take the place in hand by himself. As it was, Miss Murphy did much of the work that Ray Murphy will now do.

L. H. Kyrk, who is the Cincinnati agent for the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., reports a good week in basket sales the last week. He also reports a record week in his zinnia sales.

Fred Gear, of Upper Vine street, has just returned from his summer vacation in Michigan. His capable son, Irwin, has been taking care of affairs during his father's absence.

Philip Popp, of Covington, Ky., is now the father of a bouncing baby boy. Mr. Popp's actions on the market last week showed he was proud.

The Market.

The hot weather continues to exert its influence on the quality of cut flowers, as well as on the market. It is claimed that the weather has averaged several degrees above normal this September. Although the schools are opening and so necessitating the return of many families to the city, everyone who can find any excuse for doing so still stays at his summer home. Nevertheless, business is gradually picking up.

Carnations are becoming fairly plentiful and the quality is surprisingly good, considering the weather. Roses continue to be abundant. In fact, there is still a considerable surplus that goes to the dump every week. The quality is improving, which helps some. Valley is arriving again in fair quantities, but more could be used to advantage. Dahlias continue to be of poor quality and they are not overabundant. Recent rains give promise of rapid improvement, if we ever get cool nights. No chrysanthemums have appeared on the market as yet. Nashville growers have come to the conclusion that it is not profitable to grow early mums. They do not sell readily enough and merely take the place of other salable material that then has to go to the dump.

Various Notes.

The city parks are looking exceptionally fine just now. The hot weather, combined with an abundance of rain for the last month, has given wonderful results in the cannas, crotons and other tropical plants. Again this season we are impressed with the superiority of xanthosoma over the ordinary caladium.

The state fair is in session here this week, with a large attendance. Ordinarily this does not seem to make any difference in the florists' business, but this year it has been a decided help.

The floral exhibits at the fair, while not large, are of good quality and are exciting considerable interest. The local trade is missing a good opportunity to get valuable publicity by not making more elaborate exhibits at the fair.

Floyd Bralliar expresses himself much pleased with tests of some of the new cannas. Mohawk is by all odds the best bronze-leaved canna yet seen. The flowers are fully as large as The President and are even a more brilliant red, while the foliage is equal to King Humbert. After two years' experience with this canna, he is convinced that it is a free bloomer and is superior in every way to King Humbert. As soon as it becomes cheap it is bound to be popular, he thinks. Sunset is a desirable variety, that would probably pass as a white, although in reality is a pale pink. The flowers are of largest size and are produced freely, while, as yet, the foliage has shown no weakness. Although it does not come up to that best of white cannas, Snow Queen, it is more beautiful at close range and gives a better effect at a distance than Eureka.

Oscar Geny, who was reported as being ill, is now able to be up most of the time. He had a close call, but it is hoped that he will be able to be back on the job soon.

charge of the floral exhibit at the state fair and, with the assistance of his head landscape man, Mr. Moulton, has done some effective planting on the grounds.

Every one is getting ready for the Tennessee State Florists' Association's meeting at Chattanooga November 1 and 2. Tennessee florists claim to have one of the most wide-awake associations in the United States and, as a result, the members have come to look to each other whenever they are short of stock, thereby saving hundreds of dollars to the members. F. B.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Market.

The market last week, while by no means brisk, was satisfactory for this season of the year. The supply has fallen off and the demand is becoming better each day. The business is just going through the natural process of getting back to normal. There was plenty of good stock to be had last week for all purposes. One of the principal features of the market was the quality of the carnations that were to be had. For this season the size was remarkable and the stems were equal to midwinter stock, with varieties that certainly speak well for the supply for the coming winter. Roses, while they are still inclined to be full-blown, are of excellent color, with stems and foliage that are fine. Here, again, all of the best varieties are represented. Asters are splendid, the late crop having arrived in fine shape. Gladioli are fast becoming a thing of the past. There is a large supply of miscellaneous stock to be had. Green goods of all sorts are to be had in any quantities that may be desired. The best feature of the market to be noted is that the buyers themselves seem to be taking on new life.

Club Holds Special Meeting.

The special meeting of the Florists' Club, called to order in the warerooms of S. S. Pennock Co., Tuesday, September 20, was a business meeting from start to finish. Robert L. Graham, Jr., the president, upon calling the meeting to order, outlined the object of the call, which was to consider the matter of sending a committee to the annual business meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, at Toronto, in October, with instructions not to come home until it had secured the 1922 meeting for Baltimore. Charles Feast took the floor and told those present the advantage it would be to Baltimore to have this meeting. After some discussion, a vote was taken and it was found that the club was unanimously in favor of having the meeting here. President Graham appointed eight F. T. D. members a committee to go after this convention. The committee is as follows: Charles Feast, of Samuel Feast & Sons; Wm. J. Johnston, Robert L. Graham, Jr., Isaac H. Moss, James J. Cummings, Jr., William F. Keys, Jr., C. Smith and Clarence Ritter. Not only is the club behind the committee, but also the mayor of the city, the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association and the governor of the state.

The next question was the flower show. At a recent meeting of the club, when many of the members were on vacation, some asserted it was too late in the season to stage a good show and the question was voted down. At the last regular meeting of the club, William F. Ekas asked to have the question reconsidered; so it was made a part of the special business of the called meeting. Mr. Ekas took the floor and made a plea for the members to reconsider their former action and to hold a show in November. His argument was that a street parade held on Saturday fell short of being a "Say It with Flowers" week celebration; that the show that would be the best advertising feature was not one in which freak specimens would be exhibited, thereby creating a demand for a thing that did not commercially exist, but a show in which the stock dealt in by the florists every day would be displayed. After some discussion, it was seen that Mr. Ekas' suggestion was a wise one. The club voted to hold the show and instructed the president to appoint a committee to have full charge of working out the details. The committee is as follow: William F. Feast, Joseph S. Merritt, William F. Ekas, George Black, H. Clay Primrose, C. R. Jones, Howard I. The Market.

There was no relief from the shortage of cut stock during the week ending September 24. The demand, especially on shippers, was, if anything, heavier than that of the preceding week. There is a fair supply of roses of excellent quality, but the carnation situation still remains as serious as ever. It is apparent now that this is due to a poor growing season, for growers who planted early are still cutting few. Gladioli and asters are scarce, the season being longer than usual, and practically everything has been cut off. Frost has hit some localities, but some good dahlias are still to be had. A few mums are coming in, but not enough, as yet, to help out any. There is some demand for cyclamens, but few are flowered enough for sale yet. Potted ferns are plentiful.

Various Notes.

M. Weiland, a retail florist of Chicago, visited his uncle, Henry J. Weiland, of this city, while on his honeymoon trip last week.

Albert Mauff has just returned from Kansas City, where he visited the trade. Mr. Mauff says stock seems to be pretty backward there, owing to the heat.

Materials are arriving at Fred Maler's for the construction of a large steel house. This firm is coming in more heavily with carnations now.

J. Roberts, of the Roberts Rose Co., is to have a "Rose Co." indeed. No carnations will be propagated this fall and roses will take their places in the benches about February. Roses look fine here, although they have been cut heavily during the last month. Pilgrim, discarded by practically every grower in this city, looks especially fine and is considered one of their best money-makers. Among the new roses being tried out, Golden Ophelia stands out as a good, profitable corsage rose. White Ophelia is a beautiful rose of good color and, if anything, of more substance than the parent. Legion seems to be a good grower. So far, all that can be seen of Priscilla is that it is a good grower.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business during the last week has been fairly brisk; in fact, it has been increasing during the entire month of September, to the great encouragement of the dealers. Social events have begun early and the calendar contains an unusually long list of announcements. A number of weddings that will call for the florists' services are also scheduled. Asters and gladioli are approaching their final offerings for this season, but the first chrysanthemums came in September 23 to take their place. Roses are in good quality and quantity, and carnations have shown a decided improvement during the last week.

Various Notes.

Samuel Kinder, of Bristol, who has been under treatment for several months for a nervous breakdown, has returned home and resumed his business cares.

The Kenyon Greenhouses, at Wakefield, have added two new houses to their range.

Page F. Potter, of the Colonial Flower Shop, has returned from a trip through Massachusetts and Connecticut.

William Bowers had a narrow escape September 22 from serious injury. While driving his big touring car through East Greenwich, one of the front wheels struck a small rock, twisting the steering wheel out of Mr. Bowers' hands and throwing him heavily into the bottom of the car. He was badly bruised, but no bones were broken. Fortunately, the car was moving at a low rate of speed, or he would probably have been killed.

William Sword, of Valley Falls, has been making extensive repairs and improvements on his range. The office building has been changed and enlarged.

The Quidnick Greenhouses, of Quidnick, has added a new automobile to its delivery department.

J. Cross, of Fall River, had the orders for the Popkins wedding, September 20, in that city. There were twelve bridesmaids. Mr. Cross was in Providence

September 19, looking for stock. He has just closed his old store, at 568 North Main street, and is now located at 405 South Main street, Fall River.

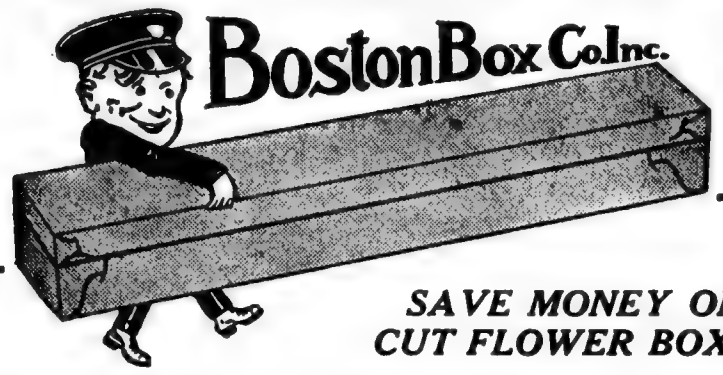
Bernard Quinn and John Hollander are now associated with J. E. Koppelman.

Swanson Bros. are erecting a new house, 21x100 feet, in addition to their range of houses on Stenton avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. James P. Dillon have the sympathy of the trade in the death of their daughter, Miss Catherine A. Dillon, last week.

W. A. Bowers, Inc., had the first showing of mums seen in this city this season.

Charles Smith, of the Eastern Wreath Co., of this city, paid a business visit to central Massachusetts last week.



Among the taxpayers of East Providence whose property is assessed on a valuation of $5,000 or more this year, according to the report of the assessors to the town treasurer, are the following: Lawrence Hay, $6,490; Joseph E. Koppelman, $22,500; Hannah A. Olsen, $16,900. W. H. M.

BOSTON.

The Market.

September has proved to be a remarkable month, as warm as August, quite clear, with little rainfall and altogether delightful conditions outdoors. There has been no near approach to frost and outdoor flowers are extremely fresh and good. These conditions suit the average human being to a nicety, but some flower salesmen and a few growers are in a reverential mood and are constantly praying for a killing frost, averring that it is a consummation devoutly to be wished. A frost now would find the market bare of greenhouse material and would cause a rapid—too rapid—uplift in values, conditions not conducive to the good of the trade. Gladioli are gradually passing and are small. Asters are plentiful enough, but the quality is off. Dahlias are plentiful and are now being used considerably. Cosmos and other outdoor materials keep coming in, but the calls for these are erratic and listless.

Roses are doing somewhat better and vary in price from $2 to $12 per hundred. Some Hadley and Scott Key reach $20 per hundred and the best Columbia and Premier reach $16 per hundred. There is no American Beauty and this, the favorite for nearly forty years, is likely to be little more seen in Boston.

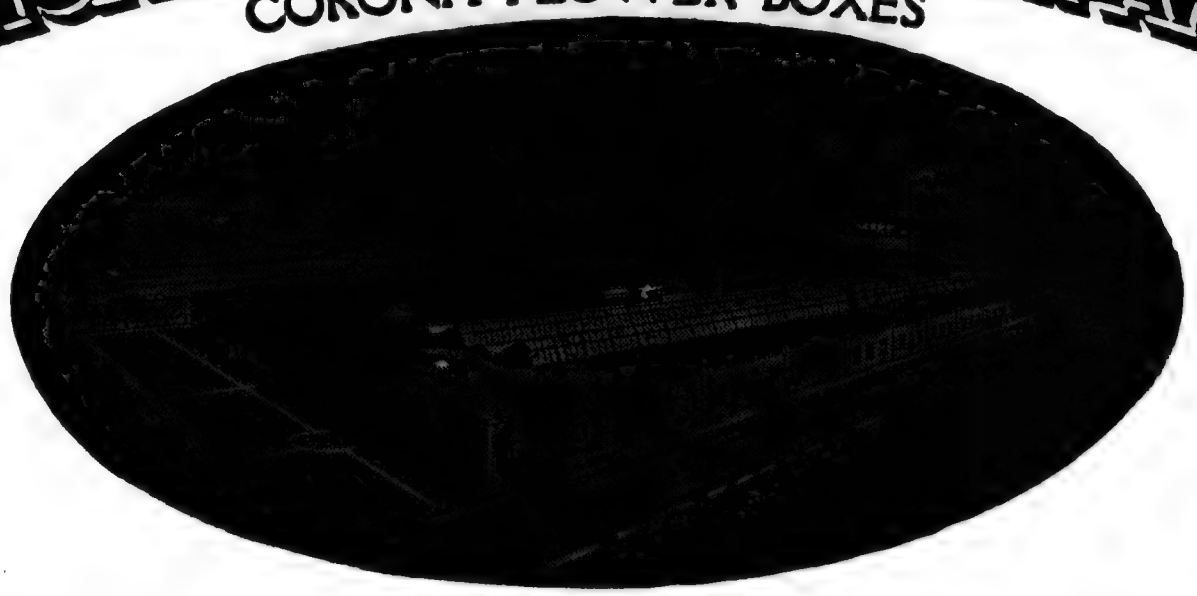
It has stood the market ordeal far longer than any other rose. Carnations are coming with better stems, but buyers are not yet taking them with much avidity and the most of them do not go beyond $2 per hundred. A few single violets appeared last week. Chrysanthemums are, as yet, mostly yellow, but a few white ones are included. There has been a fair call for white lilies and not much demand for the colored speciosums. Valley is in fair request for wedding bouquets. Cattleyas, with the advent of labiata, are inclined to soften, but bring $1.25 to $1.50 per bloom. There are some oncidiums, vandas and cypripediums. Gardenias, when wanted, are hard to find. White bouvardia is rather more plentiful.

Club Meeting.



There was an excellent attendance at the first fall meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club September 20, about 100 members being present. Six new members were elected. Resolutions on the death of James F. M. Farquhar were presented by W. N. Craig and adopted by a rising vote. President Judd spoke feelingly of the great loss to the club and the cause of horticulture generally in the death of John K. M. L. Farquhar and appointed as a committee on resolutions William Davies, W. N. Craig and Kenneth Finlayson.

The picnic committee reported all bills paid and a balance of $80 on hand. There were reports on the June ladies' night and the Framingham field day, held September 3. Owing to the renting of Horticultural hall for the greater part of October, the next meeting will not be held until October 25. Chrysanthemums will be made a feature at that time.

Ray T. Argood, poultry instructor and demonstrator at the Essex Horticultural School, was the lecturer of the evening. He spoke for ninety minutes on the selection of poultry for breeding and egg production. He passed numerous birds around in the audience to illustrate his remarks and was listened to with the closest attention throughout, both commercial and private enthusiasts showing a keen interest in egg production.

A host of questions were asked of the lecturer by B. F. Letson, manager at Carbone's. Mr. Letson is a most enthusiastic poultryman and his figures on egg production were remarkable for a city florist. Many others kept piling up the questions. No previous lecture has brought out so much interesting discussion.

Exhibits of the evening were Asters Climax and St. Egwin and a fine collection of phloxes from the Blue Hill Nurseries. These were awarded favorable mention. There were splendid string beans from Thomas W. Little; melons and peaches from James Arnold and a fine table of palms, ferns, greens

The New England Flower Growers' Association will hold its first meeting at the Hotel Bellevue the evening of October 8. Major P. L. O'Keefe will speak on publicity for florists.

Janitan & Kunan, of Arlington, who grew 100,000 Dutch bulbs last season, will largely increase that number this fall and they are now busy putting the bulbs in flats and pans. They have a fine lot of begonias, poinsettias, solanums, ferns and hydrangeas, and they are at present cutting quantities of Golden Glow mums.

Carbone had the decorations, which were quite extensive, for the Sears-Kriess wedding at Trinity church, September 21.

Daylight saving ended for the present season in Massachusetts September 25. Its passing is viewed with general regret and its earlier return in 1922 will be welcomed. Over eighty per cent of the population of New England have enjoyed daylight saving this year and opposition from the other twenty per cent is likely to be weaker another year, as its workings this year have discommoded agriculturists little.

At the W. W. Edgar Co. many thousands of hydrangeas are coming along in fine shape. So are poinsettias and other plants. Solanums were never in better condition. Hydrangeas, potted and tubbed, are fine. At present Dutch bulbs, to the number of more than 150,000, are being placed in flats and pans. Darwin tulips are being planted in increased numbers.

The Horticultural Club met September 24. The guests included Ralph C. Benedict, of Brooklyn; George F. Stewart, of Waltham, and W. R. Moscow, of Washington. About all the members spoke on the great loss the club had sustained in the death of John K. M. L. Farquhar, one of its founders and for a number of years president. A general wish was expressed that something could be done by the club to help perpetuate his memory.

John R. Ness and wife arrived in Boston last week from Scotland. They came minus a couple of trunks, which were to have come, but which were evidently held at Glasgow.

The Boston Traveler, in its issue of September 23, devoted considerable space to Martin Wax, of Wax Bros., and his piscatorial prowess at Grand Lake stream, on the New Brunswick border. This summer, for the first time, Mrs. Wax took some of the fishing honors away from her husband. One day she caught twelve salmon to his six and another rough day, when none of the other members of the party could hook a fish, Mrs. Wax landed three.

The first few months of 1922 will be remarkable for several large horticultural exhibitions which promise to set a new high-water mark in American shows, starting with another Grand Central Palace show in New York. Boston will hold a great special bulb exhibition with some $6,000 in prizes; then the great national show at Cleveland comes along, which seems likely to be the greatest of its kind ever held in this country. In June Boston will stage a great exhibition of native ferns and other seasonable plants and flowers. Who can say that floriculture is not forging ahead when bodies of keen, alert and enthusiastic horticulturists are full of optimism for the future and not despondent, as some would have them be?

W. J. Collins returned on the S. S. Cameronia to New York last week. In the interest of Carter's Tested Seeds Co. he visited many seed growers in Great Britain and France. He was also in Belgium and covered all the war zone in northern France. He found that the drought had tremendously decreased seed crops abroad. W. N. C.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

Almost all cut flowers are in short supply and of poor quality. Good gladioli are offered at $6 per hundred. The poorer grades can be had at $4. Asters of good quality can be had at $6; other grades from $4 up. Roses are selling at from $4 to $12.

Various Notes.

Andrew Pullar, formerly with George McClunie, on Main street, has obtained a lease on the old Richardson greenhouses, at Church corner, East Hartford. He will grow sweet peas the coming winter in one house, which he has completely repaired. There are also four other houses which are badly in need of repairs. These will be finished later and will be filled with bedding and vegetable plants. After these alterations are completed, this district will have a much-needed and up-to-date florist's shop.

The Van Laar Co., on Blue Hills avenue, has made preparations for building a greenhouse near St. Benedict cemetery, on Blue Hills avenue.

Carl Peterson, at the Whiting Greenhouses, is busy planting several thousand Paper White and Soleil d'Or narcissi. With a number of houses already planted to carnations and roses, he has a surplus of several thousand field-

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE Temtex Seed & Floral Co. is a new concern that will do business at Temple, Tex.

FIRE destroyed an experimental seed station of the state college of agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., with a loss that is estimated at $1,000. It is believed that the fire was caused by spontaneous combustion.

AMONG the handsome fall catalogues, that of Beckert's Seed Store, Pittsburgh, is of particularly good appearance. In addition to a colored cover of somewhat more substantial stock than is customary, two color plates are used in the body of the catalogue.

A QUITE striking and appropriate cover design appears in colors upon the autumn bulb catalogue of Peter Henderson & Co., New York. A blooming-faced Dutch maiden holding hyacinths and narcissi is surmounted by two big tulip blooms, all within a blue border of Dutch tile.

IT has been announced by agricultural officials of British Columbia that there will be a large acreage in certified seed potato stock harvested in that province this season. Some of the finest imported stock was used as a foundation for this crop. A list of growers is to be published soon at Victoria, B. C.

LAST week W. J. Collins, of Boston, returned to New York on the S. S. Cameronia. He had been visiting seed growers abroad in the interest of Carters Tested Seeds Co. He interviewed many seed growers in Great Britain and France. He was also in Belgium and covered the whole war zone of northern France. He found that the drought had decreased seed crops abroad tremendously.

REPRINTS from the Monticello News, distributed by the Evans Seed Co., Monticello, Fla., state that Jefferson county, of which Monticello is the county seat, grows more watermelon seed than any other in the United States. In a recent year eighty per cent of the country's acreage was in this county. Monticello is stated to be the only place where one can buy watermelon seed by the carload. Thirty varieties are grown by the Evans Seed Co.

THE production of vegetables for market and for seed has developed rapidly in Colorado during the last decade, until the annual value of vegetables and vegetable seed grown in the state is now nearly as great as the annual value of the silver output. The leading vegetable crops are cantaloupes, cabbage, cucumbers, tomatoes, lettuce, celery, onions, beans and sweet corn. In the production of cantaloupes Colorado ranks second among the states, being surpassed only by California.

CENTRAL Tennessee does not cut so large a figure in seed production as formerly and yet it produces a large proportion of the Seven Top turnip seed of the country. Last spring the price of turnip salad was so high that very little seed was produced, most of the growers preferring to sell the greens. The quality of the seed ripened was not the best either. Both cow peas and soy beans are looking exceptionally well at present, and if nothing happens between now and harvest, the crop should be larger than for the past few years.

LOW prices and difficulty of growers in selling their sweet clover seed last year have caused a material reduction in the acreage of this crop in important sections. The season, although hot and dry, has been favorable for sweet clover seed production, and in most sections the yield per acre is expected to be fully as large as last year.

THE official roster of the Vick & Hill Co., which maintains offices at Rochester, N. Y., and greenhouses and grounds at Barnard, N. Y., where are grown the hardy perennials and other plants which the company supplies to nurserymen and florists, is: President, Albert Reiss; treasurer, W. H. Dildine; secretary, H. F. Remington.

THE serious illness which compelled Arthur W. Sutton to cancel all business and public engagements in December, 1919, does not yet give promise of material improvement and, acting in accordance with medical advice, he is retiring from business. Arthur Sutton joined the firm of Sutton & Sons, as a partner, in 1876, and since the death of his brother, Martin J. Sutton, he has been senior partner of the firm, which now consists of his brother and nephews, Leonard G. Sutton, Martin H. F. Sutton, E. P. Foquett Sutton and L. Noel Sutton.

VEGETABLE GROWERS TO MEET.

The Vegetable Growers' Association of America will hold its annual meeting at Albany, N. Y., November 1 to 5. This is the big event of the year for the vegetable growers who will be able to attend. The program this year will be more elaborate than heretofore. There will be general sessions to which all present will be invited. At these sessions some of the best known men in their respective lines will give addresses. In addition to the general meetings there will be two half-day sessions of sectional meetings. Special programs have been arranged for the sectional meetings and they cover the following interests: Market gardening and truck growing; vegetable forcing; muck crops, and canning crops.

In addition to the program there will be a trade and educational exhibit. This will comprise tractors, garden tools, seeds, fertilizers, greenhouse material, etc. Vegetable growers' associations at Albany, Troy and Schenectady, together with the New York state association, are planning to furnish special entertainment for the visiting delegates.

one-half fare can be secured if 350 attend the convention by rail. A special trip will be made from Albany to New York city to visit the principal wholesale and retail markets.

Anyone wishing to secure a copy of the program or to learn more in detail the plans for the convention should write to C. W. Waid, organization secretary, care of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, Franklin building, Columbus, O. The program will be mailed about the middle of October.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

"At no time," observed E. N. Kaercher, of the Kaercher Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo., "were members of the trade better able to help one another in the matter of stock of leading kinds of seeds, judging from our large experience as both jobbers and retailers. Holders of large stocks are fearful of a further drop in prices, while buyers are cautious in the expectation of purchasing at almost their own figures—that shortage along general leading lines is a mirage that will be dispelled when total crops are harvested. A combination of climatic and economic conditions has given the seedsman the time of his life," commented our observant confrere.

Standing in the store of the St. Louis Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo., is a large aquarium containing goldfish. Manager August H. Hummert called attention to the fact that each fish apparently had its own course laid out, and, should its route be crossed by another, it usually continued, seldom looking or turning backward. It also suggested a swimmer who, diving with eyes open, sees bottom. Coming up for air, care is taken to avoid obstacles that would hinder and, possibly, hurt. "The condition of the seedsman and the seed business today is quite similar," continued Mr. Hummert, who at that moment answered a phone call informing Mr. Vander Blumen that the Holland bulbs are expected daily and expressing gratification at hearing that the Paper Whites are so satisfactory.

"Heartbreaking," said Dave Peck, of the Dave Peck Seed Co., Evansville, Ind., in commenting upon the seed situation, qualifying the remark by the statement that there are various kinds of hearts, as of seeds, and that, while the weak heart might succumb to the strain, the possessor of a strong heart will pull through.

The Ohio Valley Seed Co., Evansville, Ind., never experienced such a season for flies and an absence of bugs, presumably owing to the heat and drought. It affected sales of insecticides considerably. The trade here looks for good times with the fall rain and cooler weather.

The Heldt Co., Evansville, Ind., looks for a good run on grass seeds for fall sowing. The sale of implements is good.

The Younkerman Seed Co., Council Bluffs, Ia., looks for a good season of fall planting, judging from advance orders placed and the many inquiries received.

George L. Kuntzwait, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia., is busily engaged in the collection of the farmers' donation of corn for Russia. The state quota is 600,000 bushels and, as the crop is abundant, it will be easy on the donors and will at the same time relieve an overburdened market and be a real blessing to all. Commenting upon the seed crops in Texas, Mr. Kuntzwait observed that growers were offering what stocks they have raised this season at much lower prices and are anxious to sell.

The Nebraska Seed Co., Omaha, Neb., following the largest seed season on record, is making arrangements with its patrons for the shipment of corn for relieving the starving Russians.

Stewart's Seed Store, Omaha, Neb., is enjoying a steady continuation of business in both seeds and poultry supplies. Recent improvements and added facilities enable further branching out. Charles Stewart has charge of this department. Mrs. Walter Stewart presides over the florists' branch, which is an important one. Orders received from South America are interpreted by our clever craftswoman, who is proficient in Latin and who is paying special attention to the foreign department of what promises to be a flourishing branch of the business. W. M.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Business is somewhat slow in recovering from its usual summer slackness, because of the large number of people who are out of work. There are signs of improved business conditions for the near future, however. All the florists are now carrying a large variety of flowers. Chrysanthemums now lead all other flowers in popularity. Asters, gladioli, dahlias, cosmos and other fall flowers give a wide choice for selection. Prices are low now, compared with what they have been the last two or three years.

Various Notes.

Fred P. Wolfinger, 883 Broad street, is putting in some new benches and making other renovations preparatory to the fall business.

Philips Bros. report a considerable amount of wedding work during the month of September. Business, in general, is reported quiet. R. B. M.

Canandaigua, N. Y. — A greenhouse has recently been erected by John A. Rouse. He will deal in cut flowers and plants.

Cadillac, Mich.—I. J. Small is just experiencing his first season in selling flowers. He grows greenhouse stock and he is already furnishing two florists, Tuttle the Florist and Percy F. Snell, both of Cadillac.

FRAT-M'S

Frat-M's are a great help to florists who make funeral work. They are exact reproductions of the official emblems embossed in gold and the different colors as required by each Fraternal and Labor organization.

The florist is saved time and worry in the nuisance of lettering, as well as the keeping of such a stock of wire frames, and different colored flowers. Just use such flowers as you have and then attach a FRAT-M with paste to the chiffon, or by the hanger that comes for each, as a card, and that is all there is to it, excepting the comment and commendatory talk for the florist.

Just pick out a dozen of the most used from the list following, enclosing $2.00 per dozen, and if they don't make you ten times their cost, return those unused and get your money.

Square and Compass, Chapter, Commandery, 32nd Degree, Shrine, Eastern Star, Royal Neighbors, M. W. A., Maccabees, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Knights of Columbus, K. of P., Moose, Jr. O. U. A. M., B. of R. T., B. of R. Clerks, B. of L. E., Br. of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Eagles.

Just give Frat-M's a trial; you don't have to keep them. We are willing to send them to you and return the money if they don't pay you ten times their cost. Address

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

OPPORTUNITIES are especially good for those who can produce perennials of best grade. The demand is climbing year by year. General shortage prevails again this season.

NURSERYMEN of the state of California are being warned to register with the state department of agriculture, at Sacramento, before the planting season begins and the moving of nursery stock starts.

THE latest publication of the American Iris Society, dated June, 1921, is devoted to Sir Michael Foster and his work. Several articles on other subjects are also of much interest, particularly President John C. Wister's recollections of his visits to American iris nurseries and gardens.

THE nursery stock in central Tennessee is looking much better than seemed possible a few weeks ago. Everything now indicates that stock will be good this year and that there will be a larger supply of it than there was last year. Advance sales, while not so heavy as two or three years ago, are better than was expected. The ornamental growers will not be anywhere near able to supply the demand unless conditions change decidedly. There is more building going on throughout that part of the south at present than for years in the past, and already enough inquiries are coming in to make it sure that the majority of the builders plan to do considerable planting this fall.

MISSOURI-GROWN BOXWOOD.

The prohibition by Quarantine 37 of the entry of boxwood has caused much discussion of its production in this country. It has been propagated for a number of years at Sarcoxie, Mo., by Wild Bros. Nursery Co., more widely known as peony growers. Concerning its methods of growing boxwood the company states: "Most of our supply has been sold as young stock for growing on, but we have grown some to bush form. The plants require lots of moisture and are best with a mulch covering about two to four inches deep. In some sections a winter protection from the sun will be necessary, and where not essential, it is often advisable to bring them through with better color. We build a brush shed over them during winter, the object of which is to prevent rapid thawing by the sun's rays after a severe freeze."

NODE DISEASE OF PEONIES.

I am mailing under separate cover a peony plant, the buds of which appear to be diseased. All the stem and the leaves above ground seem perfectly healthy. Any information as to the nature of the disease and as to a remedy will be greatly appreciated.

B. C. A.—Mo.

The difficulty with the peony plant is the node disease of the roots, which probably comes from fertilizing with horse manure so that it touches the roots. These plants may have had the disease before they were planted in their present location. It would be advisable to take them up and destroy them.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 14.

9 A. M. Leave hotel in automobiles for visit to country estates in Nassau county, L. I. Luncheon at Engineers' Club, Roslyn, L. I.

The officers of the association are: President, W. N. Craig, Brookline, Mass.; vice-president, George H. Pring, St. Louis, Mo.; secretary, M. C. Ebel, 286 Fifth avenue, New York; treasurer, Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.

AN IMPORTANT PROBLEM.

I note in The Review of September 22 the article on perennials, which is very timely and should be a help in selling more perennial plants. There seems to be a somewhat peculiar condition in the perennial trade just at present. Many who have grown perennials in a small way and have noted the heavy wholesale demand the past two years, have gone in heavily to supply the wholesale trade. There are also a great many more people becoming interested in planting perennials on their home grounds than formerly. The variety of perennials is so great that many hesitate to buy without seeing the plants, as they have not imagination to picture the plants to themselves from the catalogue descriptions. In other words, there is a good supply and a heavy demand, but a rather poor connection between the two. Can you suggest ways and means of getting the supply to the demand?

William Toole & Son.

As a medium between the nurseryman, be he grower of perennials, shrubs or trees, and the home owner, who can be encouraged to plant much more than he does, no one is in so good a position as the florist. He is able to, and often does, show the home owner with what material he can beautify his grounds, by plantings about the greenhouse and store. The florists who thus adorn their own places, residential and business, find planting orders easy to obtain, for they can show customers how to get the effect about which the latter, perhaps, have only a vague idea. Of course, the retailer whose store is on valuable property in a business district cannot do this. But he is little called upon; the neighborhood florist gets such orders, and if he went after them vigorously, he could get a great many more. The heavy demand for nursery stock, particularly ornamental stock of all kinds, makes it probable that an oversupply may be

PEARS AND BLIGHT.

A Blight-resistant Variety.

Pear blight for years has been the feared enemy of nurserymen and orchard operators who own stocks of pear trees. Whole orchards have been wiped out in a single season, and there are few that have escaped the ravages of the blight without considerable damage. Study of the blight and means and methods for its cure and prevention have been carried on for over 140 years. for the last several years with great intensity, and yet no cures or preventives have been found. The best that has been done has been to find a variety of pear stock that is as much as possible blight-resistant.

The variety, Pyrus ussuriensis, along with other varieties from China, has been experimented upon and observed for several years at the Oregon Agricultural College, with Prof. F. C. Reimer in charge of the work. With the cooperation of the college, A. L. Wisker, head of the Loma Rica Nursery, at Grass Valley, Cal., who is an extensive grower of pears and a sufferer from the blight, has made an exhaustive study of the blight and this blight-resistant variety and printed a booklet outlining the results of the investigation.

Mr. Wisker states that the "full value of the Oregon experiments will be realized only after the passage of some years, when the material assembled by Prof. Reimer will have been used by plant breeders in the creation of a wholly new race of hybrid pears, in which will be combined the blight immunity of the Asiatic species with the superlative quality of our best varieties of the European family."

Pyrus Usurensis.

From the results of the experiments up to this time the variety P. ussuriensis seems to be the best found. It has the blight-resistant qualities that are so important, it is a good grower, it seems to be resistive also to pear root aphis, it has shown a tendency to have a broad adaptability to varying soil types and climatic conditions and the experiments have shown it to be wholly satisfactory in nursery work.

The method of using this blight-resistant variety recommended by Mr. Wisker is to plant the resistant seedlings, either in orchard or nursery, to head and branch the seedlings, and when they are branched, to bud or graft the branches to such varieties as it is desired to grow. By budding or grafting commercial varieties upon the branches, the vital parts of the tree, the root, trunk and main-limb crotches, all consist of the blight-resistant seedling. If the blight should destroy all or part of the upper portion of the tree, it may be readily renewed by top-working upon the uninjured, blight-proof portion remaining.

Other Varieties.

There are several Chinese species other than P. ussuriensis that exhibited great resistance to blight during the experiments. One that shows great promise is P. Calleryana, which grows in the lowland swamps in China and seems to have tolerance for abundant moisture even greater than P. ussuriensis.

Mr. Wisker also states that, before nurserymen can regularly supply orchardists with stocks of the best type, mother-orchards for seed production must be established in the United States, where climatic conditions will not interfere with seed crops. This is because the variety blooms early and, in northern China where the tree grows, late frosts are frequent and, consequently, the seeds are difficult to obtain. And then, too, the ignorance and unreliability of the native seed collectors in sections where other varieties of pyrus abound is a factor to be reckoned with.

"Control by putting a blight-proof foundation under every pear tree is the best that can be expected until plant breeders produce an entirely new race of pears," is the statement made.

The Market.

There has been an improved tone in the market during the last week. Summer is now over, vacationists are practically all home, nights are getting cooler, outdoor flowers are gradually passing away and it will not be long before the light frosts will come along, which will mean a boost in prices for indoor flowers. The majority of retail florists are talking of an improvement in business and, in many cases, there are reports that sales are fully as good as they were a year ago. Factories and mills are gradually getting back to normal production and the general outlook for fall, at least, is encouraging. Gladioli, which have for many weeks glutted the market, are rapidly passing away. The supply is much reduced and the spikes are much smaller. There are still too many asters, especially of the inferior type, and the wholesalers will, no doubt, be delighted when they reach their end. Good asters, however, are bringing a fair price. Chrysanthemums are now the new feature, mainly yellow, although there are some white. These sell well. Carnations continue to come along short-stemmed and small, although they seem to move out rapidly. Roses are arriving in fairly good quantities and of a much improved quality. A few cattleyas have appeared.

Florists Hold Banquet.

Tuesday evening, September 20, the joint banquet of the three local florists' associations was held. It was one of the greatest successes ever known in the history of the Pittsburgh florists. There were practically 200 florists gathered together in the English room of the Fort Pitt hotel.

The chairman of the committee, DeForest Ludwig, after a few remarks, announced the toastmaster for the evening, E. J. McCallum, who, after commenting upon the success of this meeting, permitted John Barnett, president of the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club, the oldest organization in Pittsburgh, to say a few words. Mr. Barnett was then followed by John Carmer, president of the Sewickly Horticultural Soceity, who was followed by

That's the name of the new pink rose! The name will be Priscilla probably after the public has had it a while, but we have had to add the prefix to cover the rules of nomenclature.

In order to get someone who knows more about roses than we do to give an unbiased, honest opinion on the merits of this rose, we have placed 12 plants of it with each of the following rose growers:

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.
Dailledouze Bros., Brooklyn, N. Y.

A. N. PIERSON, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.

Gabriel Wessaneaur, president of the Pittsburgh Retail Florists' Association. Each of the presidents spoke on the benefits of the association and urged everyone present to be at least a member of one of these societies. James McLaughlin, of the Cleveland McCallum Co., also state vice-president of Ohio of the S. A. F., made a few remarks concerning the national flower show, to be held in Cleveland next year.

The toastmaster, after a few remarks, introduced Mr. Weisman, who was asked to tell the florists something about fertilizers. The speaker remarked that the subject was a delicate one, especially after just having eaten such a nice meal. However, Mr. Weisman is to be complimented on the manner in which he explained the necessity for fertilizers and the caution that he gave on substitutes.

Herman P. Knoble, of Cleveland, O., was then introduced and, after a few brief remarks concerning the management of the retail stores, he read a paper which he had prepared concerning a trial balance, showing the florists the advantage of keeping a record of their overhead expenses. Mr. Knoble brought out plainly that it was essential that even the smallest florist should know his actual costs. From all indications, Mr. Knoble has one of the finest systems of accounting in the retail florists' stores. He should be commended upon endeavoring to educate the other florists along this line. He not only brought out the fact that the florists should watch their expenses, but also showed in his statement that it was necessary for the majority of business houses to borrow money from the bank in order to meet their obligations, in order at all times to keep their buying power in good standing.

Professor Wilde, of the Pennsylvania State College, was the next speaker for the evening and in his talk he endeavored to show the florists the relation of the college to the graduate. He brought out the fact that in many cases when a man graduates from college his employer expects too much and he made an HYDRANGEAS, that are good, that will bloom and that will return profits? Ours are very good this season, better than ever and they are priced right. As to varieties, we have them, all that are good, French and Otaksa, in any shade from pink to red, also white, while some come blue. Baby Bimbenet, Lilie Mouillere and Mme. Maurice Hamar especially good and in any quantity. They were grown in the field, but are now in pots and hurrying to root through and make themselves fit for forcing. We can supply them from 4, 5, 6 and 7-in. pots at 25c, 35c, 50c and 75c each; specimen plants from $1.00 to $3.00 each. No charge for packing. Delivery from Oct. 1, on. Get them early and have them established while they are full of life; it means so much to you. Order enough; business is on the mend; be ready with a big lot when money circulates again.

ROSES

Ramblers and Baby Ramblers, all on their own roots.

The Ramblers have been grown in the field for two years, every one tied up to stakes to ripen the wood; they are good. Dorothy Perkins, Excelsior and Tausendschoen, 30c each and charges for boxes.

The Baby Ramblers have been in the field for one year and have done well. The strongest only will be lifted. Do not compare them with budded stock, but as to blooming, they will do as well or better. Baby Rambler, Baby Tausendschoen, Clothilde Soupert, Ellen Poulsen and Erna Teschendorff. 25c each, no charge for packing. Delivery from early November on.

earnest plea to the florists to make an allowance for the students when they are first employed. He also made a plea to the florists to enable him to obtain positions for the graduates. He related how in many instances it was hard to place men after they had graduated. He also showed the importance of having a larger area of glass to assist the work and to enable the students to get a better knowledge of growing. At the present time, he stated, the college is hampered for space. He informed the florists that if it was possible to get a larger area of glass and more room for instructing purposes, no doubt they would be able to give courses also in connection with retail store management. He also spoke of the advantage of sending one of the best employees to these courses for a week or two, fitting them for a higher position in the florists' business.

Albert Pochelon, of Detroit, Mich., was the next speaker. Mr. Pochelon's address was more on the order of a heart-to-heart talk and, with his amusing illustrations, he had the audience in an uproar frequently. Mr. Pochelon invited all the florists to attend the F. T. D. convention, to be held in Toronto, in October. Mr. Pochelon also related that just ten years ago there were but fifty-seven members of the F. T. D. and today there are 2,100 members. Mr. Pochelon discussed quite thoroughly the advantages of the F. T. D. in relation to foreign shipments. He expressed the opinion that in many cases, if we could educate the foreign florists to coöperate with the F. T. D., we could do a large foreign business, especially with the foreign element here in this vicinity.

After Mr. Pochelon's address the toastmaster called upon Mr. Faulkner, one of the old members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club, to say a few words. Mr. Faulkner expressed the desire that special consideration and a vote of thanks should be extended to those who participated in the decorations and in making this meeting a success.

Mr. McCallum then called upon W. A. Clarke, treasurer of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., to say a few words. Mr. Clarke expressed himself in a brief manner and said that the meeting was one of the greatest in the history of the Pittsburgh florists. Mr. McCallum deserves a worthy amount of credit for the efforts that he put forth in order to make the meeting a success.

Th decorations were of dahlias, donated by the Dahliadel Nurseries through the McCallum Co. Each person present was presented with a red carnation, donated by the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. The John Bader Co., Ben Elliott, furnished the palms and ferns. Charles E. Ulmer, of the Mrs. E. A. Williams Co., arranged the decorations, which were beautiful.

Various Notes.

Just a week ago John Harris, of Harris Bros., was rejoicing over the birth of a baby girl. Today he is mourning the loss of his wife. Suddenly, Friday morning, September 23, Mrs. Harris passed away. It was with the deepest regret that the trade received this news and Mr. Harris certainly has the sympathy of every florist. H. J. H.

The Market.

Business has been fairly quiet for the last two weeks. Stock is steadily improving. Roses in all grades are good and are plentiful. Carnations, short-stemmed, have made their appearance. They have large flowers. Gladioli are fine, all being of outdoor crop. Asters are good this year and there are lots of them. Other outdoor flowers are over. Easter lilies and valley are plentiful.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

THE MEANING OF "GLASS AREA."

In speaking of a greenhouse having 5,000 feet of glass is it meant that 5,000 square feet of glass is used on it or does it mean that the foundation encompasses 5,000 square feet of surface?

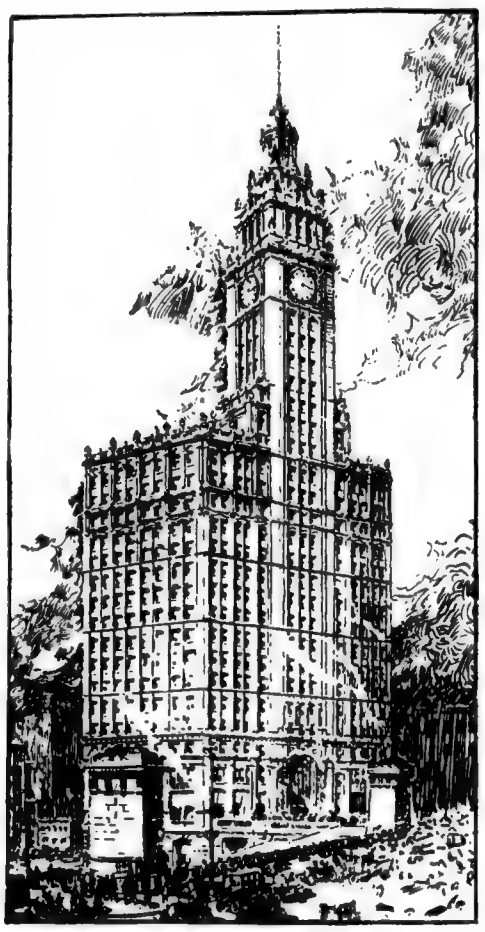
G. E. S.—N. J.

Particularly in figuring the radiating surface of a greenhouse, the actual amount of exposed glass must be known, as well as the amount of exposed wall, and whether the latter is of wood, concrete or brick. This will show what is meant usually by "square feet of glass."

FOR TWO GREENHOUSES.

I am building two houses, one of which is 20x125, six feet five inches to the plate and fourteen feet to the ridge. The other house is 28x100, six feet five inches to the plate and I am not certain how high it is to the ridge, as I am moving the house here from Muncie, Ind. My boiler is sectional and has a radiation of about 5,000 feet. It has a 10-inch outlet for steam and two 4-inch inlets. According to the plan sent, how would you advise me to choose the pipes, flows, returns, etc.?

B. A. A.—Ind.



In the longer house use three 2½-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns, placing one flow on each side and the other four feet below the ridge. Three returns may be used in each coil or four may be placed along the exposed wall, two in the center and three at the back wall.

For the house twenty-eight feet wide, four 2½-inch flow pipes will be desirable, running them on the wall plates and purlin posts, with twelve 2-inch return pipes. The sketch also shows a house, 25x125, the construction of which is contemplated. For this it would be advisable to use four flows and eleven returns.

ARRANGEMENT OF PIPES.

I am enclosing a sketch of a greenhouse, for the heating of which I should like your advice. It is to be heated with hot water to 55 or 60 degrees when it is 10 degrees below zero outside. The house is 20x50 feet and fourteen feet to the ridge. There is a 5½-foot side wall, with thirty-two inches of glass.

As shown in the plan, the house is exposed only on the south end and west side. I have nine lengths of 1½-inch pipe and one length of 1-inch pipe, which I should like to use. There will be two raised benches and one side bench on the ground. I desire to have most of the pipes on the side walls and would prefer pipe only under the center

Wrigley Building, Chicago.

Kroeschell, To Be Sure

To the many wonderful things of which Chicago boasts, there has been added recently the Wrigley Building. It is one of the largest office buildings in the city, and one of the most beautiful to be found anywhere. Its design and construction is perfect throughout.

In such a large building, where there are hundreds of offices, where the health and comfort of thousands of people must be guarded, the heating system plays a part of tremendous importance. This was realized by the designers of the Wrigley Building, and the greatest care was taken in making specifications for the heating system. Two 250-horsepower Kroeschell Boilers were installed for heating the entire building.

In selecting a boiler for your greenhouses, get the boiler that has proved itself the most efficient in every way for greenhouse heating. Get a Kroeschell and know you have the best.

No Delay

We anticipated a rush of last-minute orders this fall that will require quick service, and we are prepared to ship any size boiler at once. Telegraph or telephone your order at our expense. Long distance phone, Superior 8680. Ask for greenhouse department. You will get your boiler without delay.

1½-inch pipes on the east wall, and two coils of four 2-inch pipes each, on the west wall and under the center bench.

If the flow pipes run downhill, no air valves will be needed, provided the expansion tank is connected with the highest point in the system and one main flow is used, or connected with the highest point of each of the three flow pipes, provided all of them start from the boiler. The main returns should be of the same capacity as the flows.

YOKING TWO BOILERS.

Will you advise me as to whether the attached sketch shows the proper way in which to yoke two boilers? I have tried it before, but I found that without the check valves shown on the flow pipes that connect each boiler with the main flow header, the water got quite hot before circulating and that this caused a short circulation through the cold boiler. G. D. B.—Ky.

While it will be advisable to have gate valves on the flow pipes that connect each of the boilers with the main flow header, the lack of the valves would not account for the failure of the water to circulate.

The sketch shows that each boiler supplies two 2-inch flow pipes, which connect with the 3-inch main flow pipe by means of one 2½-inch pipe. The 3-inch main supplies four 2½-inch flow pipes, each of which feeds a coil of four 2-inch returns. While it is presumed that these returns are all joined with a main return header, which in turn is connected with the return ports on each side of each boiler, it is not so indicated in the sketch. Unless this is done, the bad result above could be expected.

If the size of the boiler and the length of the returns had been given, the question could have been answered more intelligently. To get the best results, it would have been better to use two 2½-inch flows and returns from each boiler and to connect these by means of 3-inch pipes to the main flow and return pipes.

Asbestfalt

(REG U. S. PATENT OFF.)

An Elastic Cement That Expands and Contracts With the Weather

Make your greenhouse weather-tight with Asbestfalt, the elastic cement that never gets hard, cracks or peels in cold weather or runs in hot weather.

$1.25 per gallon. Why pay more?

You can't get anything better no matter how much more you pay. The ingredients are of the purest; weighs but 10 pounds to the gallon.

With the scarcity of coal and its high prices, the careful application of Asbestfalt will more than pay for itself by keeping your greenhouse air-tight.

To insure best results, apply Asbestfalt with our Liquid Putty Machine, price $2.00. With every barrel purchase of Asbestfalt, one machine free.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

The latter part of last week saw a great improvement over the first few days. Stock dragged the first few days, but everything moved readily toward the end of the week.

Roses are numerous, at from $4 to $15 per hundred. Their quality has been good. Carnations have been none too plentiful; more could be used. These bring $3 per hundred.

Asters are about gone. The few that remain are moved, but their quality is only medium. Gladioli are also a thing of the past.

Dahlias continue to appear in quantity and sell readily.

A few chrysanthemums are being exhibited in the shop windows, but these are the first to appear.

Garden flowers, such as zinnias, delphinium and cosmos, help to fill up.

Various Notes.

The October meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held Tuesday, October 4. This will be an all-day meeting and will be one of especial interest to all members. For years the association has been visiting the establishments in the various towns and cities in Indiana, but has never made a tour of Indianapolis. The members will meet at the store of the Smith & Young Co., 228 East Ohio street, at 10 a. m., and will visit the establishments in and about Indianapolis. Lunch and dinner will be served. The regular business meeting will be held in the evening at 228 East Ohio street, and an unusual attendance is expected.

Charles Wilcox, with the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, called on the trade.

Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, has been in the city.

Walter Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., has been calling on his friends.

John Rieman has had his store redecorated in ivory and French gray, which makes an attractive background for his excellent stock.

Baur & Steinkamp have installed a Kost soil pulverizer.

Bertermann Bros. Co. is beginning to cut from a large crop of chrysanthemums. Herman Piel is now on his vacation. Mr. Piel is to be married in October.

W. C. Konzelman, of Greensburg, has been visiting among Indianapolis friends. E. E. T.

Muncie, Ind.—Don Reid Felton, who has been growing bulbs, flowers and small fruits for eight years, will soon be in the market for supplies.

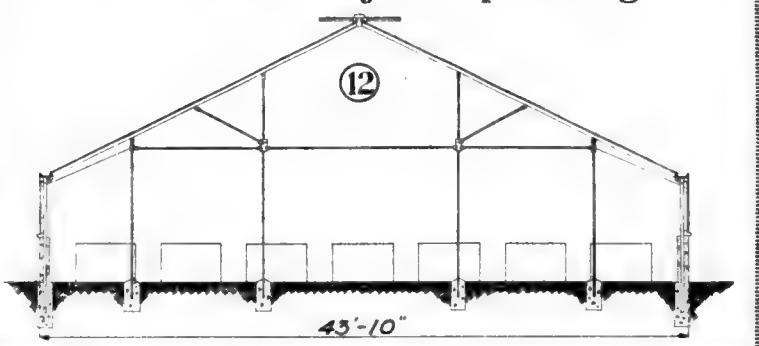
What Size Greenhouse Shall I Build? Why?



Pipe Frame—or Iron Frame

That's a problem that worries some growers—no matter how long they have been in business. Each year new developments push old ideas aside. So the man whose houses were most economical and efficient 10 years ago finds himself outdistanced by competitors with new types of houses.

No matter what you grow—what your land layout is—or what your own ideas are—ask our service department for suggestions—there is no obligation.

To help growers plan—and costs are down now so that many are planning—we are going to show each week in The "Review" cross sections of different types and sizes of houses.

The Market.

Market conditions are slightly improved. The demand seems to be better, but the supply smaller. Asters and gladioli, which have been the main stock, are now becoming scarce; in fact, all the gladioli on the market are shipped in. Only a few growers have good asters, which are finding a ready sale. Dahlias are a failure again this year; they carry much foliage, but the flowers are small and the stems are short. There have been a large number of funerals during the last week and stock has been cleaned up each day. Roses are getting better each day and good ones are to be had at from $10 to $14 per hundred. Carnations never looked better and are available at $2 and $3 per hundred. On account of the short stems and the abundance of other flowers, they have not been used except for design work. Cattleyas are in large supply and of the finest quality. These are selling at $2 each wholesale. Some California mums are being shipped in, but, on the whole, are not proving satisfactory. Everyone will welcome the home-grown mums. It will be about two weeks before Smith's Advance and Golden Glow will reach the local market.

Various Notes.

A severe rain and hail storm struck the southern section of Omaha on the night of September 19, doing considerable damage. Frank Citta, on Center street, suffered a loss of from 1,200 to 1,500 panes of glass. The establishments of Faulkner Bros., William Skop and Petersen Bros. were also damaged.

Wm. Foster, formerly of Colorado Springs, Colo., has taken active charge of the greenhouses of J. F. Wilcox & Sons. Michael Stoudt has resigned.

The Omaha and Council Bluffs Florists' Club met September 22 to discuss the possibilities of a mum show.

September 21 saw the first floral parade in Omaha since 1916. There were forty-two beautifully decorated motor vehicles in the parade, and ten bands, including the Omaha bagpipe band and the famous Tangier Temple band. Mrs. L. R. Spikings, of Chicago, who has directed floral parades at Atlantic City and Chicago, had complete charge of the decorations. T. E. E.

The American Rose Society medals and certificates for novelties include the following:

A gold medal is offered for the best new rose not yet disseminated, whether of domestic or foreign origin; exhibits are to be judged by the official scale of the society, and no gold medal is to be awarded to any rose scoring less than 95 points.

A silver medal is offered at the same time and under the same conditions for a novelty scoring not less than 85 points.

A certificate of merit is to be awarded to all novelties scoring 80 points.

A class for the best display of cut roses by commercial growers is to be staged Thursday, March 30. It calls for "best display of cut roses covering 300 square feet of space and to contain not less than 500 nor more than 1,000 blooms; quality of bloom, artistic arrangement and general effect to be considered in making awards; decorative green of any kind, including plants, permitted." First prize will be $500; second, $300, and third, $200.

fer for registration the coleus described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name: Harding. Description: This coleus is a seedling, grows rapidly, is compact in form and grows to a height of a foot to one foot and a half indoors. Grown as a specimen plant, it attains the height of one foot. It holds its color in winter months better than other varieties. It roots well and the average leaves are three and one-half inches long, two and one-half inches wide, and are bright red in color, with dark brown, yellow and green edgings.

The Market.

The usual weather conditions prevail. The summer season is being prolonged. There has been some marked improvement in the market, but the fall season cannot be considered as open yet. Throughout the week there has been considerable stock in the market, and a favorable demand is noticed. Asters during the week have been plentiful, but their quality is not up to standard. Gladoli have slowed up considerably and are not in any large supply.

The supply of roses is getting somewhat larger, and there is also a slight improvement in their quality. The demand for Ophelia, Butterfly and Columbia is good. Premier, Sunburst, Ward and White Killarney are also in good demand. Cecile Brunner is not plentiful, nor is the demand large. There is a good supply of valley on the market now, and the demand is good. Orchids have no special demand at this time. Each day sees an increase in carnations. The supply and also the quality are fairly good. Chrysanthemums are in small supply but fairly good in quality. Smith's Advance and Golden Glow are seen. Hardy chrysanthemums are in fair supply.

Various Notes.

At practically every grocer's, at fruit stands, from wagons at the public market, from several farm trucks at the busy corners on Main street, and at all the florists', many thousands of asters were sold September 24 for the "blessing of the graves," a Catholic custom, which is celebrated here every year and which this year fell on Sunday, September 25.

H. E. Wilson, at 88 East Main street, has been busy all through the past week with a large quantity of funeral work and many wedding orders. Business has been brisk at this store since the first of the month.

Mrs. Arvilla Smith has been unwell for several days and has not been able to be at the store. Miss Ada Kline helped out during the rush.

The Cemetery Greenhouses have done a wonderful business throughout the summer. H. J. H.

Terry, Miss.—W. L. Redding owns a tract planted in flowers in the heart of this city. He has built a greenhouse and is busily engaged in growing plants for sale.

Lights quickly, burns evenly and will not go out —and its results are sure

Hall's new Nicotine Fumigator

SCIENTIFICALLY planned in every detail for one purpose—to destroy plant-lice, thrips and similar soft-bodied insects. You can quickly prove this for yourself by giving it one night's opportunity in your greenhouses.

Hall's Nicotine Fumigator is a specially prepared tobacco powder saturated with 12½% pure nicotine. This percentage is guaranteed.

Improved processes of manufacture have enabled us to eliminate all those things that may have given you trouble with other forms of fumigation.

For example:

Hall's Nicotine Fumigator lights quickly, burns evenly and will not go out.

It retains its strength indefinitely. The air-tight tin takes care of that.

And it is most economical. In fact, it is cheaper per ounce of nicotine content than any other fumigator.

1 pound tins, $1.25; 2½ pound tins, $2.50; 10 pound tins, $8.50. If your dealer is not supplied, write us direct.

Hall's Nicotine Insecticides:

Hall's Nicotine Fumigator (12½% nicotine guaranteed), Hall's Free Nicotine (40% nicotine guaranteed), Hall's Nicotine Sulphate (40% nicotine guaranteed) and Hall's Tobacco Dust (1% nicotine guaranteed).

BULBS

AMERICA FOR THE AMERICANS!!

You need no longer be dependent on The Netherlands for your Tulip supply.
Since 1914 we have raised Tulips in Michigan with great success and we are strong for them. You, too, can raise your own supply of Tulips. (See official report by the Department of Agriculture in the Florists' Review of April 28, 1921.)
If you are alive to a paying proposition, act at once and take advantage of this.

Owing to limited space on our farm at Grand Rapids, we are forced to sell the following named varieties at a sacrifice:
Early Tulips, Yellow Prince and Artus.
May-flowering, or Cottage Tulips, Caledonia, Gesneriana Lutea, Gesneriana Spathulata, Golden Crown and La Merveille.
Darwin Tulips, Clara Butt, Gretchen and Inglescombe Pink.
Planting stock, 2-year-old.....$6.00 per 1000
Planting stock, 1-year-old..... 3.00 per 1000

Grasp this: Next year you will pay $4.00 per 1000 duty on Tulips. Please send cash with order.

GLADIOLI

GLADIOLUS BULBS.

Large, well matured Gladiolus bulbs, well ripened, A No. 1 size, just the thing for forcing by florists and for planting outdoors in October, in Florida and southern California, for flowers for Memorial day. I offer the following varieties: America, Mrs. Francis King, Chicago White, Halley and Orchid, a new and greatly improved Chicago White, a recent Kundered creation, never offered to the trade before. If interested write for prices.

I also have several hundred thousand small planting stock of the above varieties.

TOOLE'S HARDY PERENNIALS.

Transplanted field-grown perennials are the specialty at Toole's. Here the soil is a fertile, heavy clay loam with good under-drainage. It produces a strong, sturdy top and a compact bunch of roots on nearly all varieties.

The young seedlings or cuttings or divisions, as the case may be, are transplanted into the field at the proper time of the year to give the best results. In the field they are kept cultivated with a garden tractor, hand hoed and weeded as needed.

At shipping time each order is dug separately by experienced men, carefully packed under cover, and every way handled to reach our customers in the best condition. In mixed orders, we endeavor to label all varieties so that they may be easily identified by those not familiar with the kinds, and finally, your money back if you are not satisfied.

See last week's Review for prices, or send for our latest wholesale list.

POINSETTIAS

TRUE CALIFORNIA POINSETTIAS.

This stock is grown from stock plants grown in California. They can be grown quite different from the old variety of Poinsettias. Last winter at times we would grow them real dry, then real wet, then in a 70 degree temperature, again in a 50 degree temperature to try them out.

After such treatment, we grew them with beautiful foliage from the ground up, and with an extra large bloom of the most dazzling splendor.

We are offering 2-in. stock of this same variety, as we grow no other, at $10.00 per 100. Cash with order.

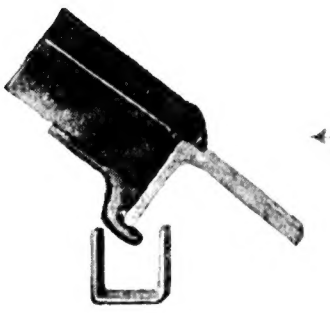
Jamestown, N. Y.—Harold M. Strand, a graduate of Cornell, is at this time operating a greenhouse, 15x42, and is planning to enlarge it next year.

Corning, N. Y.—W. E. and O. L. Barnes are erecting a greenhouse to extend from the present greenhouse to the street. This new house will measure 25x75 and will be used for roses and carnations.



Jacksonville, Fla.—G. L. Velbloom, a first-class structural and ornamental iron worker, is now in the way of trying to be just as good a horticulturist. He has a greenhouse, 20x85, and grows flowers, which he sells to the retail trade.

King GREENHOUSES

Steel Frame Houses With Large Drip Pans Under Angle Eaves

←≪ Eave and drip pan at post.

The condensation drip pans are made of heavy galvanized steel, 1¼ inches wide and 1¼ inches deep. Large, so that they do not fill up with dirt and run over. Each length is set loose. They can be readily taken out and cleaned, if necessary. The drip pan is held in place by a separate casting at each post. The casting has a ¾-inch galvanized drip pipe threaded into it every third post. Carries all condensation down to the ground and is large enough so as not to fill up.

The climate is different and there is a need of a special type of greenhouse. When we designed and built the range for the Amling Bros. we made a study of these conditions, enabling us to erect for them a range of glass that is considered a model of its kind. No matter where you are located or what your problem is, you will find the AGMCO ready to help you out with good advice. When it comes to designing greenhouse lay-outs you cannot afford to overlook the AGMCO. No obligation on your part. Just ask us for help—it's free.

AGMCO

Pronounced Agemco AGMCO Every House A Gem

We have just been awarded the contract to add a 36x231 ft. greenhouse to the above.

These are the type of houses we have been recommending so frequently and they are the ones which have made so many friends among greenhouse men.

They are money-makers and no two ways about it. Will you give us a chance to tell you why?
